INTRODUCTION.

THE success which attended the publication of my Dictionary of Congress, has induced me to enlarge upon the scope and design of that work, so as to embrace the entire Civil Government of the United States, during the first century of its existence. In doing this I have endeavored to present, within a convenient space, and in biographical form, the names and public services of all those who have, in a prominent manner, been identified with the National and State Governments of the Republic.

The Biographical Sketches number about seven thousand, and these I have illustrated with a series of Tabular Records and Papers of an historical character, in which will be found eight thousand additional names, making a total of fifteen thousand personal references in the volume.

The classes of persons included are the Delegates to the Colonial and Continental Congresses, the Senators, Representatives, and Territorial Delegates of the Federal Congress, Cabinet Ministers, Justices of the Supreme and other Federal Courts, Officials of the Executive Departments, Governors of States and Territories, Diplomatic Ministers, and such other men as have held positions of honor and trust in the civil service, exerted an influence on public affairs, or acquitted themselves with acknowledged credit. Indeed, in a few instances, I have over-stepped the line which separates the civil from the military and naval history, but all the names thus added have a place in the hearts of their countrymen, and no apology, I trust, will be required for their introduction.

My purpose has been to give, in the most concise and impartial manner, a practical and comprehensive idea of the working of our Government, as exhibited through its personal representatives at home and abroad. Of many men, more might have been written, but that was not deemed expedient in a work of this kind; and where not enough has been said, the fault must be attributed to the indifference of the persons mostly interested, or to the neglect of their friends; and I have made it a point to express no opinions of living men, and but seldom to echo public opinion in regard to the dead.

The information here presented has been obtained chiefly from original sources, and from the archives of the Government; while, for many of my facts and dates, I have availed myself of other opportunities, and am especially indebted to the publications connected with the names of John L. Blake, S. Austin Allibone, George Ripley, Francis S. Drake, Joseph Thomas, and Frederick A. P. Barnard; and I cannot but hope that these records will be found so correct and conveniently arranged as to render the volume indispensable, as one of reference, for all those who feel an interest in the political annals and future welfare of our country.

BIOGRAPHICAL ANNALS.

Abbott, Joel.—Was born in Fairfield, Connecticut, emigrated to Georgia, and was elected a Representative in Congress from Wilkes County, in that State, from 1817 to 1825, serving as a member of the Committees on Commerce and the Slave Trade. Died November 19, 1826.

Abbott, Amos.—Born in Andover, Massachusetts, September 10, 1786. He was educated at a district school, but spent the most of his life as a trader and merchant. During the years 1835, 1836, and 1842, he was a Representative in the Massachusetts Legislature; and from 1840 to 1842 a member of the State Senate. He represented his native State in Congress from 1843 to 1849. He opposed the war with Mexico, but voted for supplies. Died at Andover, Massachusetts, November 2, 1868.

Abbott, John C.—Born in Concord, New Hampshire, July 15, 1825; received an academical education; studied law and came to the bar in 1852; from 1852 to 1857 he owned and conducted the Manchester Guardian; was Quartermaster-General of Militia from 1855 to 1861; and from 1859 to 1861 he was one of the owners of the Boston Atlas and Bee; in 1861 he raised a regiment of troops for the war, and was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel; in 1863 he was made Colonel; and in 1865 he was brevetted a Brigadier-General "for gallant services in the capture of Fort Fisher;" soon after which, he settled in North Carolina, and engaged in the lumber business. He was a Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention of 1867; elected to the State Legislature early in 1868; and was elected a Senator in Congress in 1863, for the term ending in 1871, serving on the Committees on Manufactures, Military Affairs, the Pacific Railway, and Enrolled Bills.

Abbott, Nehemiah.—Born in Sidney, Maine, March 29, 1806. He was a lawyer by profession; was a member of the House of Representatives, in the Maine Legislature, in 1842 and 1843, and was elected a Representative to the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions.

Abercrombie, James.—He was born in Georgia, and, removing to Alabama, was a Representative in Congress from that State, from 1851 to 1855.

Acker, Ephraim L.—Was born in Marlborough Township, Pennsylvania, January 11, 1827; educated in common schools, and graduated at Marshall College, Pennsylvania, in 1847; taught school two years, and graduated in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania in 1852; was editor and publisher of The Norristown Register; Superintendent of Common Schools for Montgomery County from 1854 to 1860; was appointed Postmaster at Norristown in 1860, and removed after serving about eleven months; was Inspector of Montgomery County prison three years; and was elected to the Forty-second Congress, serving on the Militia Committee.

Ackerman, Amos T.—He was born in New Hampshire in 1819; received a good education, studied law, and came to the bar in 1841; in 1850 he removed to Georgia and settled in Elberton, where he practiced his profession; in 1866 he was appointed United States Attorney for the District of Georgia, and remained in office until 1870; and in that year he was appointed Attorney-General of the United States, and continued in that position until 1872.

Adair, John.—He was born in 1758, in Chester County, South Carolina; emigrated to Kentucky in 1787; served as a Major in the border warfare of the time; was elected to the Kentucky Legislature, serving one year as Speaker; was a member in 1799 of the Convention which formed the State Constitution; subsequently held the office of Register of the Land Office in Kentucky; and was a Senator of the United States, from Kentucky, during the years 1805 and 1806; commanded the Kentucky troops at the battle of New Orleans, under General Jackson; and was appointed a General in the army. He was elected a Representative in Congress from Kentucky, from 1831 to 1833, and was a member of the Committee on Military Affairs. Died at Harrodsburg, May 19, 1840.

Adams, Andrew.—He was born in Stratford, Connecticut, in January, 1736; graduated at Yale College in 1760; adopted the profession of law, and settled in the practice at Litchfield, in 1764; from 1777 to 1782 he was a Delegate from Connecticut to the Continental Congress, and was one of the signers of the Articles of Confederation; and in 1789 he was appointed a Judge of the Supreme Court of Connecticut, and in 1793 Chief Justice of said court. He received from Yale College the degree of LL.D.; and died November 26, 1799.

Adams, Benjamin.—Born at Worcester, Massachusetts; was a member of the Legislature, as Representative, from 1809 to 1814, and as Senator, in 1814 and 1815, and from 1822 to 1825; and was a Representative in Congress from his native State, from 1816 to 1821, having first been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of E. Brigham, and was a member of the Committees on Revolutionary Pensions and Public Expenditures. He died at Uxbridge, Massachusetts, in April, 1837.

Adams, Charles F.—Born in Boston, August 18, 1807; spent the most of his boyhood in St. Petersburg and London, whilst his father, John Quincy Adams, was Minister to Russia and England; he graduated at Harvard University in 1825; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1828; served three years in the Lower House, and two years in the Upper House of the Massachusetts Legislature; in 1848 he was a Delegate to the Buffalo Convention, and elected President; was the candidate for Vice-President on the ticket with Mr. Van Buren; and he was elected a Representative from Massachusetts to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Manufactures, and as a member of the Special Committee of Thirty-three on the Rebellious States. He was at one time the editor of a paper called the Boston Whig; was a contributor to the North American Review, and the editor of the well-known Adams Letters, and is the author of the standard Biography of his grandfather, John Adams. Re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, but was appointed by President Lincoln Minister to England, in 1861. In 1864 the degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Harvard University; and in 1869 he became an overseer of that institution.

Adams, C. H.—Born in Coxsackie, Greene County, New York, in 1824; studied law and practiced until 1850, when he engaged in manufacturing at Cohoes, New York; served as Trustee and President of the Water Board in that place before it was made a city. In 1851 served as Aid to the Governor. In 1857 was elected a member of the Assembly; was State Senator in 1872 and 1873; was a member of the Republican National Convention in 1872, and for a long time President of the National Bank of Cohoes, and was the first Mayor of the city. He was elected a Representative from New York to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Adams, George.—He was a citizen of Mississippi, and appointed United States Judge for the District embracing that State. He resided at Natchez.

Adams, George M.—Born in Knox County, Kentucky, December 20, 1837; educated at Centre College; studied law; was Clerk of the Circuit Court of Knox County from 1859 to 1861; subsequently served for a few months as a Captain in the Union Army; was an additional Paymaster of Volunteers from 1861 to 1865, and was elected a Representative from Kentucky to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on the Militia and Freedmen's Affairs. Re-elected to the three succeeding Congresses, serving on the Committee on Indian Affairs; and he was, in 1875, elected Clerk of the House of Representatives for the Forty-fourth Congress.

Adams, Green.—Born in Barbourville, Knox County, Kentucky, August 20, 1812; was bred a farmer, but read law and adopted that profession; in 1832 and 1833 he was Deputy Sheriff of Knox County; in 1839 he was elected to the State Legislature, and re-elected; he was a Representative in Congress from Kentucky, from 1847 to 1849, and was a member of the Committee on Engraving. He was also a Presidential Elector in 1844 and 1856, and a Judge of the Circuit Court of Kentucky from 1851 to 1856. In 1859 he was elected a Representative from Kentucky to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. In 1861 he was appointed by President Lincoln Sixth Auditor of the Treasury, and in 1875 he was appointed Disbursing Clerk in the House of Representatives at Washington.

Adams, James Hopkins.—Born in South Carolina about 1811; graduated at Yale College in 1831; was a member of the Legislature and Senate of South Carolina, and was Governor of that State from 1855 to 1857. After the secession of South Carolina from the Union, he was one of the Commissioners appointed to confer with the President concerning United States property in South Carolina. He died near Columbia, South Carolina, July 27, 1861.

Adams, John.—Born at Braintree, Massachusetts, October 30, 1735; graduated at Harvard University in 1755; instructed a class of scholars in Latin and Greek for a subsistence; studied law, and having been admitted to the bar, settled at Quincy to practice his profession. As a member of the Continental Congress, from 1774 to 1777, he was among the foremost in recommending an independent Government. In 1777 he was chosen Commissioner to the Court of Versailles. On his return he was chosen a member of the Convention called to prepare a form of government for Massachusetts. In September, 1779, he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to negotiate a peace, and had authority to form a commercial treaty with Great Britain. In June, 1780, he was appointed Ambassador to Holland; and, in 1782, he went to Paris to engage in the negotiation for peace, having previously obtained assurance that Great Britain would recognize the independence of the United States. After serving on two or three commissions to form treaties of amity and commerce with foreign powers, in 1785 he was appointed first Minister to London; and, in 1788, having been absent nine years, he returned to America. In March, 1789, the new Constitution of the United States went into operation, and he became the first Vice-President, which office he held during the whole of Washington's administration. On the retirement of Washington he became, March 4, 1797, President of the United States. This was the termination of his public functions; and he spent the remainder of his days upon his farm in Quincy, occupying himself with agriculture, and obtaining amusement from the literature and politics of the day. He died on the Fourth of July, 1836, with the same words on his lips which, fifty years before, on that day, he had uttered on the floor of Congress: "Independence forever!" His principal publications are, "Letters on the American Revolution," "Defense of the American Constitutions," an "Essay on Canon and Feudal Law," a series of letters under the signature of Novanglus, and "Discourses on Davila." It was as Vice-President that he had a seat in the Senate. In 1856 his life and writings were published, in ten volumes, edited by his grandson, C. F. Adams.

Adams, John.—He was a Representative in Congress from Greene County, New York, from 1833 to 1835, and was a member of the Committee on Invalid Pensions. He died at Catskill, New York, September 28, 1854.

Adams, John Quincy.—Born in Braintree, now Quincy, Massachusetts, July 11, 1767. When ten years of age, he accompanied his father to France; and when fifteen, was Private Secretary to the American Minister in Russia. He was graduated at Harvard University in 1787; studied law in Newburyport, and settled in Boston. From 1794 to 1801 he was American Minister to Holland, England, Sweden, and Prussia. He was a Senator in Congress from 1803 to 1808; Professor of Rhetoric in Harvard University, with limited duties, from 1806 to 1808; was appointed, in 1809, Minister to Russia; assisted in negotiating the Treaty of Ghent, in 1814; and assisted, also, as Minister, at the Convention of Commerce with Great Britain, in 1815. He was Secretary of State under President Monroe; and was chosen President of the United States in 1825, serving one term. In 1831 he was elected a Representative in Congress, and continued in that position until his death, which occurred in the Speaker's room, two days after falling from his seat in the House of Representatives, February 23, 1848. His last words were: "This is the end of earth; I am content." He was Chairman of several of the most important committees, and always a working member of the House. He published "Lectures on Silesia," "Lectures on Rhetoric and Oratory," and various "Poems," beside many occasional letters and speeches. His unpublished writings, it is said, would make many volumes. An elaborate history of his life was published in 1875, edited by his son, Charles Francis Adams. Complete works in press.

Adams, Parmenio.—He was born in Hartford, Connecticut, and was a Representative in Congress from Batavia, Genesee County, New York, from 1823 to 1827.

Adams, Robert H.—He was a Senator in Congress, by appointment, from Mississippi, from January to May, in 1830, and died on the second day of July following, at Natchez.

Adams, Samuel.—Was born in Boston, Massachusetts, September 27, 1722; graduated at Harvard University in 1740; studied for the ministry; received the degree of A.M. in 1743; was one of the first who organized measures of resistance to the mother country, and drew up the instructions of the town of Boston against taxation in 1764; was elected a Representative in 1765; was chosen Clerk and served in that body for ten years, and it is said he suggested the Congress that assembled at New York in 1765, and the non-importation agreement of 1769; addressed a public meeting the day after the Boston massacre, and was Chairman of the Committee to demand the removal of the troops. In 1773 he organized the Committee of Correspondence, which was first adopted by Massachusetts, and followed by all the provinces; was a signer of the Declaration of Independence; was one of those who matured the plan of the Continental Congress, and he was Delegate from Massachusetts from 1774 to 1782; signed the Articles of Confederation; was a member of the State Convention which adopted the Federal Constitution, and made some amendments to that instrument; on the adoption of the State Constitution, he was made President of the Senate. He was Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts from 1789 to 1794, and Governor from 1794 to 1797; and died in Boston, October 2, 1803.

Adams, Samuel.—He was acting Governor of Arkansas in 1844.

Adams, Stephen.—He was a native of Franklin County, Tennessee, and had been a member of the Senate of that State. Removing to Mississippi, he took an active part in public affairs; was a member of the State Legislature, and a Representative in Congress, from 1845 to 1847; he was elected Judge of the Circuit Court, and from 1852 to 1857 was a Senator in Congress from Mississippi, serving on several committees. He removed to Tennessee with the intention of practicing law at Memphis, where he died of small-pox, May 11, 1857.

Adams, Thomas.—He was a Delegate from Virginia to the Continental Congress from 1778 to 1780, and signed the Articles of Confederation.

Adams, William.—He was born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania; and was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, from 1825 to 1829, and served on a Committee for the Deaf and Dumb Institutions of New York and Ohio. He was also Auditor of Berks County, Pennsylvania, in 1813 and 1814; Commissioner of the County from 1814 to 1817; member of the State Legislature from 1822 to 1824; and Associate Judge of Berks County from 1839 to 1842. Died in the spring of 1858, aged eighty-two years.

Adgate, Asa.—He was a Representative in the Legislature of New York from Clinton County, from 1798 to 1799, and elected Representative in Congress from Essex County, in that State, from 1815 to 1817, and was again a member of the Legislature in 1823.

Adrain, Garnett B.—Born in the city of New York, December 20, 1816. He graduated at Rutgers College, New Jersey, in 1833; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1837; and was a Representative in the Thirty-fifth Congress from New Jersey, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Engraving. He was also elected a member of the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Engraving. In January, 1861, he offered the resolution of thanks to Major Robert Anderson for his defense of Fort Sumter. After leaving Congress he was devoted to his profession.

Ahl, John A.—He was born in Strasburg, Franklin County, Pennsylvania, in August, 1815; received a good English education; studied medicine with his father, and graduated at the "Washington Medical College" of Baltimore. He abandoned his profession in 1850, and turned his attention to various kinds of manufactures, and was elected a Representative from Pennsylvania to the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Manufactures.

Aiken, William.—He was born in Charleston, South Carolina, in 1806; graduated at the South Carolina College in 1825; was a member of the State Legislature in 1838, 1840, and 1842; was Governor of South Carolina in 1844; and a Representative in Congress from that State from 1851 to 1857. He was considered one of the most successful rice-planters in his native State; and was one of the leading men of his State who did not take part in the Rebellion. Noted for his liberality, benevolence, and culture as a scholar.

Ainsworth, Lucien Lester.—Born in New Woodstock, New York, June 21, 1831; educated at the common schools and at the Oneida Conference Seminary, New York; studied law and was admitted to practice in 1854; in 1855 removed to West Union, Iowa; was a member of the Lower House and Senate of the State for several years, and was elected a Representative from Iowa to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Akers, Thomas Peter.—He was elected a Representative from Missouri to the Thirty-fourth Congress for the unexpired term of J. G. Miller, and served one session.

Albert, William J.—Born at Baltimore, Maryland, August 4, 1816; educated at St. Mary's College; was bred a merchant; retired from business in 1856; was a Presidential Elector in 1864; was subsequently interested in banking and manufactures; and elected to the Forty-third Congress, serving on the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Bassett, Richard.—He was a member from Delaware of the Convention which formed the Constitution, and signed that instrument; was a Presidential Elector in 1797, and a Senator in Congress from 1789 to 1793, having been the first man who cast his vote for locating the Seat of Government on the Potomac. He was also Chief Justice of the Federal Supreme Court, Governor of Delaware from 1798 to 1801, and died in September, 1815.

Bateman, Ephraim.—He was born in Cumberland, New Jersey; was well educated, and adopted the profession of medicine; was a Senator in Congress from that State from 1826 to 1829, and was a member of the Committees on Agriculture and Enrolled Bills; having previously been a Representative in Congress from 1815 to 1823, serving on the Committees on the Post Office and Accounts. He was elected to the Senate by his own vote in joint meeting of the Legislature, and a Committee of the Senate reported that his election was entirely legal. Died January 21, 1829.

Bates, Edward.—Was born September 4, 1793, at Belmont, Goochland County, Virginia. His education was commenced by his father, and succeeded by several years of academic instruction, mostly at Charlotte Hall, Maryland, and finished by an accomplished private tutor. In early youth he declined a midshipman's warrant, and served, in 1813, at Norfolk, in the Virginia Militia, from February to October. In 1814 he migrated to St. Louis, there studied law, and began to practice in 1816. In 1818 he was appointed Prosecuting Attorney for that Circuit; in 1820 was a Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention, and was the same year appointed Attorney-General of the new State of Missouri. He resigned that office in 1822, and was elected to the lower branch of the State Legislature. In 1824 he was appointed by President Monroe United States Attorney for the Missouri District; in 1826 resigned, and was elected a Representative in Congress from Missouri, serving from 1827 to 1829. In 1830 he was elected to the State Senate, and in 1834 again to the lower House of the Legislature. In 1835, being enfeebled by sedentary labor, he moved to the country, and practiced law for seven years, traveling much on horseback around the prairies. In 1842 he returned to St. Louis, and in 1850 he was appointed by President Fillmore Secretary of War, but declined the office. In 1853 was elected Judge of the St. Louis Land Court, which office he resigned in 1856. During that year he presided at the Whig Convention of Baltimore, and in 1858 received from Harvard University the degree of LL.D. In 1861 he was appointed Attorney-General in President Lincoln's Cabinet. Died in St. Louis, March 25, 1869.

Benson, Egbert.—He was eminent as a statesman and jurist, and died at Jamaica, New York, in August, 1833, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1789 to 1793, taking an active part in its deliberations. He had previously served as a Delegate in the Continental Congress from 1784 to 1788. He was a graduate of Columbia College in 1765, and received literary honors from Harvard University in 1808, and from Dartmouth in 1811. He was also the first President of the New York Historical Society; and was again a Representative in Congress in 1813, for one session, when he resigned and was succeeded by William Irving. From 1780 to 1789 he was Attorney-General of New York, and from 1794 to 1801 a Judge of the Supreme Court.

Benson, Samuel P.—He was born in the town of Winthrop, Maine; graduated at Bowdoin College in 1825; adopted the profession of law; was a member of the State Legislature in 1834 and 1836; Secretary of State in 1838 and 1841; and was elected a Representative in Congress from Maine in 1853, and was re-elected to the Thirty-fourth Congress, when he served as Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs. He was at one time one of the Overseers of Bowdoin College.

Bent, Silas.—He was born in Massachusetts; was for many years an influential citizen of the Territory of Missouri, and in 1813 was appointed United States Judge for the Territory of Missouri. His name was given to a well-known frontier post and military fort.

Bent, Charles S.—He was born in Maine, and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1843 to 1849.

1867 he was elected a Representative from New Hampshire to the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses; serving on the Committees on Land Claims, Retrenchment, Pensions, and Agriculture.

Benton, Samuel.—He was a Representative in Congress from South Carolina from 1793 to 1798.

Benton, Thomas Hart.—He was born in Hillsborough, North Carolina, March 14, 1782, and educated at Chapel Hill College. He left that institution without receiving a degree, and forthwith commenced the study of law in William and Mary College, Virginia, under Mr. St. George Tucker. In 1810 he entered the United States Army, but soon resigned his commission of Lieutenant-Colonel, and in 1811 was at Nashville, Tennessee, where he commenced the practice of the law. He soon afterwards emigrated to St. Louis, Missouri, where he connected himself with the press as the editor of a newspaper, the Missouri Argus. In 1820 he was elected a member of the United States Senate, serving as Chairman of many important Committees, and remained in that body till the session of 1851, at which time he failed of re-election. As Missouri was not admitted into the Union till August 10, 1821, more than a year of his first term of service expired before he took his seat. He occupied himself during this interval before taking his seat in Congress, in acquiring a knowledge of the language and literature of Spain. Immediately after he appeared in the Senate he took a prominent part in the deliberations of that body, and rapidly rose to distinction. Few public measures were discussed between the years 1821 and 1851 that he did not participate in largely, and the influence he wielded was always felt and confessed by the country. He was one of the chief supporters of the administrations of Presidents Jackson and Van Buren. The people of Missouri long clung to him as their leader, and it required persevering effort to defeat him. But he had served them during the entire period of thirty years without interruption, and others, who aspired to honors he enjoyed, became impatient for an opportunity to supplant him. He was distinguished for his learning, iron will, practical mind, and strong memory. As a public speaker he was not interesting or calculated to produce an effect on the passions of an audience, but his speeches were read with avidity, always producing a decided influence. He was elected a Representative in the Thirty-third Congress for the District of St. Louis, and on his retirement from public life devoted himself to the preparation of a valuable register of the debates in Congress, upon which he labored until his death, which occurred in Washington, on the 10th of April, 1858, of cancer in the stomach. He was the author of a political book, giving an account of his observations during his Senatorial service of Thirty Years.

Beresford, Richard.—He was a Delegate from South Carolina to the Continental Congress from 1783 to 1785.

Bergen, John T.—He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1831 to 1833.

Bernhisel, John M.—Born in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, June 23, 1799; graduated in the Medical Department of Pennsylvania University; engaged in the practice of medicine; and was elected a Delegate to the Thirty-fifth Congress from the Territory of Utah. Re-elected to the Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh Congresses.

Berrian, Hobart.—He was born in New York, and was the son of the Reverend Doctor of Divinity bearing the name; he was a man of superior culture and education; and after holding the position of Clerk in the Treasury Department, was appointed, in 1861, the Fourth Auditor of the Treasury, where he remained until 1864.

Berrien, John McPherson.—Born in New Jersey, August 23, 1781, but when a child removed with his father to Georgia. He graduated at Princeton in his fifteenth year, and was admitted to the bar in 1799. In 1809 he was elected Solicitor-General, and the next year Judge of the Eastern Circuit. During the War of 1812 he had command of a regiment of volunteer cavalry. He served in the State Legislature for several years. In 1824 he was elected to the United States Senate, where he remained until 1829, when he took a seat in the cabinet of President Jackson as Attorney-General. For a while afterwards he held various positions of responsibility in Georgia, and in 1840 was re-elected to the United States Senate for six years, taking an active part in all leading measures, and officiating most of the time as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. In 1845 he was elected one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Georgia, and in 1847 was once more elected to the United States Senate, resigning his seat in May, 1852. On his return to Georgia, he still continued, in various ways, to promote the public good, and he died at Savannah, January 1, 1856, universally lamented. He was undoubtedly one of the best, most distinguished, and high-minded statesmen of the country.

Berry, John.—Born April 26, 1833, in Crawford County, Ohio; educated at the common schools, and the Olio Wesleyan University; graduated at the law school of Cincinnati College; admitted to the bar in 1857, and has since practiced his profession at Upper Sandusky; was Prosecuting Attorney of Wyandot County in 1862, and again in 1864; never was a candidate for any other office until elected to the Forty-third Congress, serving on one or more Committees.

Berry, Nathaniel S.—He was Governor of New Hampshire for two years, from 1861 to 1863, taking an active interest in raising troops for the War of the Rebellion.

Bethune, Laughlin.—A native of North Carolina; for several years a Senator in the State Legislature, and from 1831 to 1833 a Representative in Congress from Cumberland County in that State, serving as a member of the Committee on Elections.

Betton, Silas.—He graduated at Dartmouth College in 1787; was a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire from 1803 to 1807; held the office of Sheriff of Rockingham County for several years, and died at Salem, New Hampshire, in 1822, aged fifty-eight years.

Betts, Samuel R.—He was born in Richmond, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, in 1787; spent his boyhood on his father's farm; graduated at Williams College in 1806; studied law, came to the bar in 1809, and settled in Sullivan County, New York. He took part in the War of 1812, and was appointed Judge Advocate. He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1815 to 1817; after which he settled in Newburg, and was District Attorney of Orange County. In 1823 he was appointed a Circuit Judge for the State; and in 1826 he was appointed Judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, which he continued to hold until May, 1867, when he resigned and retired to private life. His labors as a Judge were long held in the highest estimation by the legal profession of New York. Died in New Haven, Connecticut, October 3, 1868.

Brown, Aaron V.—Born in Brunswick County, Virginia, August 15, 1795. He graduated at Chapel Hill University in 1814, and in 1815 removed with his parents to Tennessee, where he devoted himself to the study of law; and, when admitted to practice, became a partner of the late James K. Polk, in Giles County, serving in the meantime for a number of years in the Legislature of Tennessee. In 1839 he was elected a member of Congress from Tennessee, and re-elected in 1841 and 1843. On his retirement from Congress in 1845, he was elected Governor of Tennessee; and he was at all times considered one of the most faithful and industrious leaders of the Democratic party in Tennessee. His last position was that of Postmaster-General in the Cabinet of President Buchanan. Among the measures which marked his administration of our postal affairs may be mentioned the establishment of a new and shorter oceanic communication to California, by Tehuantepec; of the great overland mail from Memphis and St. Louis to San Francisco, and another across the continent, by the way of Salt Lake. His speeches, Congressional and political, were published at Nashville in 1854. He died in Washington, March 8, 1859.

Brown, Albert G.—He was born in Chester District, South Carolina, May 31, 1813; taken to Mississippi when a boy; adopted the law as a profession; was a member of the State Legislature from 1835 to 1839; and was a Representative in Congress from Mississippi in 1840 and 1841. He was also a Judge of the Circuit Superior Court in 1852 and 1853; Governor of Mississippi from 1844 to 1848; was again elected a Representative in Congress from 1848 to 1854; was elected a United States Senator from 1854 to 1858; and re-elected for six years, commencing March 4, 1859, but was expelled in March, 1861, and joined the Great Rebellion. He was Chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia in the Thirty-fifth Congress, and a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs and that of Enrolled Bills. His collected speeches were published in one volume in 1859. In 1875 he wrote a letter of advice to a young friend in which he argued against the manner of life in which he had been most successful, that of the politician and office-holder. He also said that farming was the noblest of occupations.

Brown, Anson.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from that State during the years 1839 and 1840, and died at Ballston, New York, June 21, 1840, much respected for his character and acquirements.

Burdett, Samuel S.—He was born in Leicestershire, England, February 21, 1836; emigrated to Ohio in 1848; was educated at Oberlin College; removed to Clinton County, Iowa, in 1857; studied law, and came to the bar in 1858; in 1861 he entered the Volunteer army as a private, and before the close of his term of enlistment, in 1864, he was promoted to a Captain; was a Presidential Elector in 1864 from Iowa; in 1865 he emigrated to St. Clair County, Missouri; in 1866 he was made Circuit Attorney for the Seventh Judicial District; he was a Delegate to the Chicago Convention of 1868; and was elected a Representative from Missouri to the Forty-first Congress, serving on the Committees on Education and Labor, and Elections. In 1874 he was appointed Commissioner of the General Land Office in Washington, and still retains the position.

Burgess, Tristram.—Born in Plymouth County, Massachusetts, February 26, 1770, and died in Rhode Island, October 13, 1853. He graduated at the Rhode Island College in 1796; studied law and taught school at the same time; commenced the practice of his profession in Providence, and acquired great influence and distinction as an advocate; in 1818 was elected Chief Justice of Rhode Island; occupied the Chair of Oratory in Brown University; and was a Representative in Congress from Rhode Island from 1825 to 1835. He acquired great reputation by a parliamentary contest with John Randolph, and left behind him many interesting pamphlets on political and literary subjects. His characteristics as a debater were withering sarcasm, combined with fervid eloquence and rare reasoning power.

Burgess, Dempsey.—He was a member of the Provincial Congress of North Carolina; a Lieutenant-Colonel of the Militia; and a Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1795 to 1798.

Burke, Edanus.—He was born in Galway, Ireland, and came to America at the beginning of the Revolution. In 1778 he was appointed a Judge of the Supreme Court of South Carolina, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1789 to 1791. He was an earnest Republican, and died at Charleston, March 30, 1802, aged fifty-nine years. He published a pamphlet against the Order of the Cincinnati; and, because he would not resign his judgeship on being elected to Congress, the Legislature passed a law prohibiting any State Judge from leaving the State, and he resigned his seat in Congress.

Burke, Edmund.—Born in Westminster, Vermont, January 23, 1809; was educated by private tutors; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1829; and removed to New Hampshire in 1833, where he established, in Sullivan County, the New Hampshire Argus, which he edited a number of years. He was a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire from 1839 to 1845, and was Chairman of the Committee on the Library, and a member of the Committees on Commerce and Claims; and, by President Polk, was appointed Commissioner of Patents in Washington. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866.

Burke, Thomas.—He was born in Ireland in 1747; when about seventeen years of age he left Ireland and settled in Accomac County, Virginia, where he resided some years, engaged in the study and practice of medicine. He subsequently changed his profession for that of law, removed to Norfolk and practiced. In 1772 he removed to Hillsborough, Orange County, North Carolina. In 1776 he was a member of the Provincial Congress at Halifax, and a volunteer at the battle of Brandywine. He first attracted public attention in Virginia by his writings in opposition to the Stamp Act, and in North Carolina participated in the formation of the Constitution for that State. He was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1777 to 1781. In the latter year he was chosen Governor of North Carolina. While in that position he was seized by the Tories as a prisoner of State, and, being transferred to Charleston, he was sent by General Leslie to James' Island on parole, where he was detained as a hostage; and, becoming exasperated, after four months' imprisonment, he determined to escape, in which purpose he was successful. He addressed a letter to General Leslie, informing him of his reasons for withdrawing, but considered himself subject to the disposal of the British authority. An exchange was effected by General Greene, and he returned to his position as Governor. He retired from public life the next year, and died near Hillsborough, December 2, 1783.

Burleigh, John H.—He was born in South Berwick, Maine, October 9, 1822; received an academic education; went to sea at the age of sixteen; commanded a ship on foreign voyages seven years; left the sea in 1853 and engaged in manufacturing; was a member of the State House of Representatives in 1862, 1864, 1866, and 1872; Delegate at large to the National Republican Convention at Baltimore in 1864, and was elected to the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses, serving on the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Burleigh, Walter A.—He was a Delegate from the Territory of Dakota to the Thirty-ninth Congress, and re-elected to the Fortieth Congress.

Burleigh, William.—He was born in Rockingham, New Hampshire, bred a lawyer, and was a Representative in Congress from South Berwick, York County, Maine, for two terms, from 1823 to 1827, and was a member of the Committee on Expenditures in the State Department. Died in July, 1827.

Burlingame, Anson.—Born in New Berlin, Chenango County, New York, November 14, 1822. His youth was spent on the Western frontiers, at one time acting with surveying parties, and at another participating in the making of Indian treaties, far beyond the confines of civilization. He laid the foundation of his education at the Branch University of Michigan, but, removing to Massachusetts, he entered Harvard University, where he received a degree in 1846. He studied law and practiced in Boston. In 1852 he was elected to the State Senate, and in 1853 was a member of the Convention for revising the Constitution of Massachusetts. He was elected a Representative in the Thirty-fourth Congress; was re-elected to the Thirty-fifth, serving as a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. He was also re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the same Committee. In 1861 he was appointed by President Lincoln Minister to Austria, and subsequently to China, which latter position he resigned in 1867 to accept a diplomatic appointment from China to the European Powers, as well as to the United States. Died in St. Petersburg, Russia, February 23, 1870.

Burnell, Barker.—He was a native of Nantucket. When only twenty-two years of age he was chosen a member of the House of Representatives in his native Commonwealth. A few years later he passed into the Senatorial body, where, in spite of his youth, he became a leading member. He sat also in the Convention which framed the present Constitution of Massachusetts; took an active part in the Harrisburg Convention of 1840; and served as a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1841 to 1843. He died in Washington, District of Columbia, June 4, 1843, aged forty-five years.

Burnet, Jacob.—Was born in Newark, New Jersey, on February 22, 1770. He was a graduate of Princeton College in 1791; was admitted to the bar by the Supreme Court of New Jersey in 1796, and removed to Cincinnati immediately thereafter, where he continued to reside until his death. He was a member of the first Legislative Council of Ohio in 1799. During the first twenty years of that residence he devoted himself to the practice of his profession, and was ranked among the most distinguished members of the bar. When the second grade of the Territorial Government was established, in 1799, he was appointed by President Adams a member of the Legislative Council, which appointment he held till the establishment of the State Government of Ohio, in the winter of 1802-'03. He was a member of the State Legislature during the War of 1812, and took an active part in sustaining the measures proposed in that body to aid the General Government in maintaining the contest. In 1821 he was appointed one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Ohio, which commission he resigned in December, 1828, and was immediately afterwards elected to the Senate of the United States, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of his friend General Harrison, serving until 1831. In the same year he was chosen by the Legislature of the State of Kentucky one of the Commissioners to settle the matters in controversy between that State and the Commonwealth of Virginia, in regard to the complaints of the latter against the statute of limitation. He was the first President of the Astronomical Society of Cincinnati, and still continued, in 1852, an active member of that institution. He was for many years the President of the Colonization Society of Hamilton County, President of the Board of Trustees of the Medical College of Ohio, and President of the Board of Trustees of the Cincinnati College, and, upon the nomination by Lafayette, had been elected a member of the French Academy. In 1847 he published a volume entitled "Notes on the Early Settlement of the North-western Territory," which is considered as containing much interesting information, especially as to Ohio, the progress of which he witnessed from a Territory. He died at Cincinnati in 1853.

Burnett, Frank C.—Born in Wyoming County, Pennsylvania, March 19, 1842; received an academic education; left college to enlist in the Fifty-second Pennsylvania Volunteers; promoted, and, after serving through the peninsular campaign, was discharged in 1863, on a surgeon's certificate of disability; was in mercantile pursuits from 1864 to 1869, and has since been engaged in banking. Was elected for the unexpired term of U. S. Mercur, resigned.

Burnett, Henry C.—Born in Essex County, Virginia, October 5, 1825; studied law as a profession, practiced law in Kentucky; was Clerk in the Circuit Court of Trigg County, in that State, from 1851 to 1853, and a Representative in the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Congresses. He was Chairman, during the first session of the Thirty-fifth Congress, of the Committee of Inquiry in regard to the sale of Fort Snelling, and a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia. Re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, and also to the Thirty-seventh, but was expelled for treasonable conduct in December, 1861, and took part in the Rebellion. Died of cholera near Hopkinton, Kentucky, October 1, 1866.

Burnett, Peter H.—He was an early emigrant to Oregon, and in 1849 was appointed a Judge of the United States Court for that Territory; and had previously been a Judge of the Supreme Court in California, as well as Governor of the same.

Burnett, William.—He graduated at Princeton College in 1749, and was a Delegate from New Jersey to the Continental Congress in 1780 and 1781. Died in 1791.

Burnham, Alfred A.—Born in Windham, Windham County, Connecticut, March 8, 1819; prepared himself for college at the Suffield Literary Institution; taught school for a while, and spent one year at Washington College, which he left for want of means; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1843; was elected to the Connecticut Legislature in 1844 and 1845; was Clerk of the State Senate in 1847; and was subsequently appointed Judge of Probate for the District of Danbury. In 1850 he was again elected to the State Legislature; in 1857 Lieutenant-Governor of Connecticut; in 1858 again elected to the Legislature, and made Speaker; and in 1859 was elected a Representative from Connecticut to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Patents. Re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Burnham, Curtis F.—He was born in Richmond, Kentucky, May 24, 1820; graduated at Yale College in 1840; at the Transylvania Law School in 1842, receiving the degree of LL.B.; adopted the profession of law; was elected to the State Legislature, and, in 1852, a Presidential Elector; was an unsuccessful candidate for the United States Senate in 1863; from 1870 to 1875 he was Cashier of the Farmers' National Bank of Richmond; and in April, 1875, he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. In 1846 he received the degree of A.M. from Yale College, and in 1873 that of LL.D. from the Central College of Kentucky.

Burns, Joseph.—Born in Waynesborough, Augusta County, Virginia, March 11, 1800; was educated at the Ohio Union Schools; was by trade a hatter, and then a farmer; filled various County and State offices; and was elected from the State of Ohio a Representative in the Thirty-fifth Congress. He was a member of the Committees on Expenditures in the Post Office Department and on Invalid Pensions.

Burns, Robert.—He was born in New Hampshire; served three years in the State Legislature as Senator and Representative, and was a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire from 1833 to 1837. Died at Plymouth, New Hampshire, June 20, 1866.

Burnside, Ambrose E.—Born in Liberty, Union County, Indiana, May 23, 1824; graduated at West Point in 1847; served as an officer of artillery with credit on the frontiers; in 1853 resigned his commission, and turned his attention to the manufacture of guns, and invented the rifle which bears his name. He was for a time associated with George B. McClellan in business at Chicago, but was a citizen of New York in 1861. During the whole progress of the war he was constantly on duty, participated in many battles, became greatly distinguished, and attained the highest honors and titles of the service. His services as a General will always be treasured in the military history of his country. In 1866 he was elected Governor of Rhode Island, and in 1875 took his seat in the Senate of the United States for the term ending in 1881, serving on various important committees.

Burnside, Thomas.—Was an Associate Judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1815 to 1816, when he resigned. He died at Germantown, Pennsylvania, March 25, 1837.

Burr, Aaron.—He was born in Newark, New Jersey, February 6, 1756. He graduated at Princeton College in 1772, at the age of sixteen; in 1775, in his twentieth year, he joined the American army under Washington, at Cambridge; accompanied General Arnold as a private soldier in his expedition against Quebec; after his arrival there he acted as an Aid-de-camp to General Montgomery; and, on his return, in 1776, General Washington invited him to join his family at headquarters. Some circumstances soon took place by which he forever lost the confidence of Washington, and the hostility of the former to the latter, from that time, was undisguised and unmitigated. In 1777 he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel, and distinguished himself as an able and brave officer; but in March, 1779, he was, on account of the state of his health, compelled to resign his office and retire from military life. He then devoted himself to the study of law; commenced practice at Albany in 1782, but soon removed to the city of New York; he became distinguished in his profession; was appointed Attorney-General of New York in 1789; from 1791 to 1797 he was a member of the United States Senate, and bore a conspicuous part as a leader of the Democratic or Republican party. At the election of President of the United States for the fourth Presidential term Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr had each seventy-three votes, and the choice was decided by Congress, on the thirty-sixth ballot, in favor of Jefferson for President and Burr for Vice-President. On the 12th of July, 1804, Colonel Burr gave Alexander Hamilton, long his professional rival and political opponent, a mortal wound in a duel. He soon after conceived the project of his enterprise in the Western country of the United States, for which he was at length apprehended and brought to Richmond, in August, 1807, on a charge of treason, and after a long trial was acquitted. He afterwards returned to the city of New York, practiced law to some extent, but passed the remainder of his life in comparative obscurity and neglect. He was of small stature, yet he had a lofty mien, a military air, a remarkably brilliant eye, and a striking appearance. He possessed distinguished talents and many accomplishments. He died on Staten Island, New York, September 14, 1836, and his life was published in 1838 by Matthew L. Davis.

Burr, Albert G.—He was born in Illinois in 1829; received a good English education; adopted the profession of law; was elected to the Illinois Legislature in 1861; was a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1862, and author of the address accompanying the Constitution to the people; re-elected in 1863, and in 1866 he was elected a Representative from Illinois to the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses, serving on the Committees on Revolutionary Invalid Pensions, Elections, and War Department.

Burrell, J. M.—He was a native of Pennsylvania, and was appointed a Judge of the United States Court for the Territory of Kansas.

Burrill, James.—He was born in Providence, Rhode Island, April 25, 1772; graduated at Brown University in 1788; studied law, devoted himself to its practice, and was Attorney-General of the State of Rhode Island from 1797 to 1813; was a member and Speaker of the Assembly in 1814; and was Chief Justice of the State in 1816. He was elected to the United States Senate in 1816, and served as a member of the Committees on the Judiciary, on Commerce, on Manufactures, and on Accounts. He died at Washington, before the expiration of his term, December 25, 1820. He was considered an able scholar and a wise judge.

Burroughs, Sitas M.—He was born in New York; served four years in the Legislature of that State, and was elected a Representative to the Thirty-fifth Congress from New York, and was a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs. He was re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, and died at Medina, New York, June 3, 1860.

Burrows, Daniel.—He was born in Groton, Connecticut, and was a Representative in Congress from Connecticut from 1821 to 1823.

Burrows, Julius C.—Was born in North East, Erie County, Pennsylvania, January 9, 1837; by profession a lawyer; and was elected to the Forty-third Congress from the State of Michigan, serving on the Committee on Claims, and as Chairman of that on the Navy Department.

Burrows, Lorenzo.—He was born in Connecticut, and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1849 to 1853; and in 1855 he was elected Comptroller of New York.

Burt, Armistead.—He was born in South Carolina, received a liberal education, adopted the profession of law, and was a Representative in Congress from South Carolina from 1843 to 1853. During a part of the Thirtieth Congress he officiated as Speaker of the House of Representatives. Was a Delegate to the New York Convention of 1868.

Burt, Francis.—He was born in Pendleton, South Carolina, in 1809; received a good education; in 1853 he was appointed Third Auditor of the Treasury, by President Pierce; resigned that office in 1854, to accept the Governorship of Nebraska; and two weeks after his arrival in that Territory he died, at Bellevue, October 18, 1854.

Burton, Allan A.—He was a citizen of Kentucky, and in 1861 was appointed Minister Resident to the Republic of Colombia, where he remained until 1867. In 1871 he was appointed Secretary to the Commission that visited the Dominican Republic.

Burton, Hutchins G.—He was born in Granville County, North Carolina; studied law; in 1810 represented Mecklenburg in the State Legislature, and, in 1816, the County of Halifax; and for several years Attorney-General of the State. He served as a Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1819 to 1824, and was a member of the Committees on the Judiciary and Military Affairs; he was then elected Governor of North Carolina, from 1824 to 1827. He died in Iredell County, April 21, 1836.

Burton, Robert.—He was a Delegate from North Carolina to the Continental Congress from 1787 to 1788.

Burton, William.—He was born in Delaware, and elected Governor of that State in 1859, holding the office until 1863.

Burwell, William A.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1806 to 1821. Died February 16, 1821, in Washington City, before the expiration of his term.

Bushy, George H.—He was born in Darstown, Northumberland County, Pennsylvania, July 10, 1794. In 1810 he removed with his father to Ohio, where he acquired a knowledge of the cabinet-making business and devoted himself to farming. In 1824 he was appointed Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas and of the Supreme Court, and subsequently a Recorder of Deeds in the County of Marion; and he was a Representative in Congress from 1851 to 1853 from Ohio.

Bushyhead, Jesse.—He was a Cherokee, a self-made man, and acquired great distinction among his tribe, and filled many public trusts; was Chief Justice of the Cherokees; and died at the Mission in the Cherokee Nation, West, July 17, 1844.

Busteed, Richard.—He was born in Ireland, became a citizen of New York city, entered into politics, and in 1864 was appointed United States Judge for the District Court of Alabama, residing in Montgomery.

Butler, Andrew Pickens.—He was born in Edgefield District, South Carolina, November 19, 1796. He graduated at South Carolina College in 1817, studied law, and came to the bar in 1818; became a member of the Legislature when quite a young man, and was appointed in 1835 one of the Judges of the General Sessions of Common Pleas, which office he held until 1847, when he was appointed by the Executive to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate caused by the death of Mr. McDuffie. He was subsequently elected and re-elected to the same position, and was in this office at the time of his death, which occurred at his home, May 25, 1857. He was a statesman of ability and influence; was a relative of Preston S. Brooks; and it was because of remarks made about him in debate, by Charles Sumner, that Mr. Brooks made a personal assault upon Mr. Sumner.

Butler, Anthony.—He was a citizen of Mississippi, and from 1829 to 1836 he was Chargé d'Affaires to Mexico, returning to the United States in the latter year.

Butler, Benjamin Franklin.—He was born in Kinderhook, New York, December 14, 1795; studied law with Martin Van Buren, and after his admission to the bar, in 1817, became the law partner of his law preceptor; in 1821 he was appointed District Attorney for the city of Albany; in 1824 he was appointed one of three lawyers to revise the laws of New York; in 1827 he was elected to the State Legislature; in 1829 he was appointed a Regent of the New York University, resigning the position in 1832; in 1833 he was appointed a Commissioner to settle a dispute between the States of New York and New Jersey; in November of the same year he went into President Jackson's Cabinet as Attorney-General, and continued in the office one year with President Van Buren; from October, 1836, to March, 1837, he officiated as Secretary of War; in 1845 he was a Presidential Elector, and he was subsequently twice appointed United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York. In October, 1858, he went to Europe for the improvement of his health, and in a few weeks thereafter he died at Paris. From his funeral sermon, preached in New York city by the Rev. Dr. William B. Sprague, we learn that he was a man of superior ability and high character.

Butler, Benjamin Franklin.—He was born in South Deerfield, New Hampshire, November 5, 1818; his grandfather, Zephaniah, having been an officer in the Revolution, and his father, John, having served under General Jackson at New Orleans. He graduated at Waterville College in 1838; studied law, and on being admitted to the bar settled in Lowell, Massachusetts, practicing his profession in that city and in Boston; in 1853 he was elected to the State Legislature, and was subsequently a member of the Convention to revise the State Constitution; in 1859 he was elected to the State Senate; in 1860 was a Delegate to the Charleston Convention; in 1861 was appointed a Brigadier-General, and entered actively into the war movements; before the close of that year he was made a Major-General, serving as such in New Orleans and various other portions of the rebellious States; at the conclusion of the Rebellion he resumed his profession of law in Lowell, and in 1866 he was elected a Representative from Massachusetts to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Ordnance and Appropriations, and as Chairman of the Special Committee on the Assassination of President Lincoln; and he was one of the Managers in the Impeachment Trial of Andrew Johnson. Re-elected to the Forty-first, Forty-second, and Forty-third Congresses, serving as Chairman of Committees on the Judiciary and Reconstruction.

Butler, Chester.—Born in Wilkesbarre, Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, in March, 1798; graduated at Princeton College in 1817; read law at the Litchfield School, and was admitted to the bar in 1820. He served three terms in the Legislature of Pennsylvania; was a Representative in Congress, from Pennsylvania, from 1845 to 1850, and was a member of the Committee on Revolutionary Claims. He died in Philadelphia, October 5, 1850.

Butler, David.—He was elected Governor of Nebraska in 1867, having been the first elected to that office, and he served one year.

Butler, Ezra.—He left Weathersfield, Vermont, in September, 1786, and settled in Waterbury; he was a statesman of the Jeffersonian school; was a member of the Assembly eleven years; and member of the Council fifteen years; first Judge of Chittendon County Court, from 1803 to 1806, and Chief Justice, from 1806 to 1811; Chief Justice of Jefferson County from 1814 to 1826; Representative in Congress from 1813 to 1815; member of the Vermont Constitutional Convention in 1822; and Governor of that State from 1826 to 1828; making fifty-three years of public service. He died in Waterbury, July 19, 1898, aged seventy-six.

Butler, Josiah.—Born in Rockingham County, New Hampshire, in 1780, and died at Deerfield, October 29, 1854. He graduated at Harvard University in 1803; studied law in Virginia, and practiced it in his native State. He was repeatedly elected to the State Legislature; was a County Sheriff, and a Clerk of the Courts. He was elected a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire, in 1817, and served in that capacity until 1823, officiating as Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture during the Seventeenth Congress. He was then appointed Judge of the Superior Court of New Hampshire, which he held until the office was abolished.

Butler, Pierce.—He came of the family of the Dukes of Ormond, in Ireland. Before the Revolution he was a Major in a British regiment in Boston, but afterwards attached himself to the republican institutions of America. In 1787 he was a Delegate from South Carolina to the old Congress; in 1788, a member of the Convention which framed the Constitution of the United States, having signed the same; and, under it, was one of the first Senators from South Carolina, and remained in Congress till 1796. He was one of those who voted for locating the Seat of Government on the Potomac. On the death of J. E. Calhoun, in 1802, he became again a Senator in Congress, but resigned in 1804. He was opposed to some of the measures of Washington's administration, but approved of the War of 1812. He died at Philadelphia, February 15, 1822, aged seventy-seven.

Butler, Pierce M.—Born in Edgefield District, South Carolina, April 11, 1798; was lieutenant Fourth Infantry in 1819; Captain in 1825; resigned in 1829; was Cashier and then President of the State Bank of Columbia; Lieutenant-Colonel of Goodwin's Mounted Volunteers in the Florida War, in 1836; Governor of South Carolina from 1836 to 1838; United States agent for the Cherokees west of the Mississippi; appointed to treat with the Comanche Indians; made Colonel of the Palmetto regiment in the Mexican War, in 1846, in which he distinguished himself, and was twice wounded; he was subsequently killed at the battle of Churubusco, August 30, 1847.

Butler, Roderick R.—He was born in Wytheville, Virginia; received a limited education; commenced life as a mechanic, but having studied law, adopted that profession and settled in Tennessee; he was a Justice of the Peace, a Major of the Militia, a Postmaster under President Fillmore; served two years in the State Assembly and one in the State Senate; was a County Judge, and a Lieutenant-Colonel during the Rebellion; and was subsequently Judge of the First Judicial District of the State, holding the office from 1865 to 1867, when he was elected a Representative from Tennessee to the Fortieth Congress. He was also Chairman of the Republican State Committee; re-elected to the three succeeding Congresses, serving on the Committees on Labor, Indian Affairs, and Elections, and Chairman of that on the Militia.

Butler, Samson II.—He was born in South Carolina, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1840 to 1843.

Butler, Thomas.—He was born in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from Louisiana from 1818 to 1821. Died August 14, 1847.

Butler, Thomas B.—He was born in Wethersfield, Connecticut, in 1807; was educated a lawyer; served in the Connecticut Legislature; and was a Representative in Congress from Connecticut from 1849 to 1851. Died in Norwalk, June 8, 1873.

Butler, William.—Born in Prince William County, Virginia, in 1759; graduated at South Carolina College as student of medicine; was a Lieutenant in Lincoln's army in 1779; was engaged at Stono, and served in the famous corps of Pulaski until the death of the latter. He next joined General Pickens; served with General Lee under Greene at the siege of Ninety-Six; and performed other valuable service. He commanded a company of mounted rangers, and took part in many conflicts with the Tories. Soon after the war he was made a Brigadier-General, and, in 1796, Major-General of Militia. He was a member of the United States Congress from 1801 to 1811. Was a member of the Convention of 1787 to consider the adoption of the Federal Constitution, and voted against it. He was a member of the Convention which framed the Constitution of South Carolina, and for some years a member of the Legislature; in 1794 was Sheriff, and at one time magistrate. In the War of 1812 he commanded the South Carolina troops for State defense. He died in Columbia, South Carolina, November 15, 1821. He was the father of Senator A. P. and of Pierce M. Butler.

Butler, William.—He was a native of South Carolina; graduated at the South Carolina College in 1810; and was a Representative in Congress from South Carolina from 1841 to 1843. He was the brother of the late Senator A. P. Butler, and his wife was the sister of the late Commodore O. H. Perry.

Butler, William O.—He was born in Jessamine County, Kentucky, in 1793, and came of a family honorably identified with the Revolution. He was liberally educated, and when the War of 1812 broke out he enlisted as a soldier; was an ensign under General Winchester, at the battle of the River Raisin; and under General Jackson, in the South, he attained the rank of Captain, and was made a Colonel in 1817. After spending many years in retirement, he was elected a Representative in Congress from Kentucky in 1839, and re-elected in 1841; and during the war with Mexico he obtained such distinction that he was promoted to the position of Major-General in the regular army; a sword was voted to him by Congress, March 2, 1847; and when General Scott was recalled from the City of Mexico, General Butler was left chief-in-command, and announced the ratification of the treaty of peace, May 29, 1848. In 1848 he was the Democratic candidate for Vice-President, on the ticket with Lewis Cass for President. He was appointed, by President Pierce, Governor of Nebraska Territory, but declined the appointment. He is the author of many fugitive pieces of poetry, several of which possess uncommon merit, and one, entitled "The Boat Horn," has attained great popularity. In 1861 he was member of the Peace Congress held in Washington. His "Life and Public Services," from the pen of F. P. Blair, was published in 1848, but he was still living in 1875.

Butman, Samuel.—He was a member of the Maine Legislature in 1822, 1826, and 1827, and a Representative in Congress from Penobscot County, Maine, from 1827 to 1831, and was a member of the Committee on Internal Improvements. In 1846 he was a County Commissioner, and in 1853 he was re-elected to the Legislature, and made President of the Senate. Died in 1864.

Butterfield, Martin.—He was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture.

Bynum, Jesse A.—Born in Halifax County, North Carolina. He was educated at Union College, New York; served a number of years in the State Legislature; was a member of Congress from North Carolina from 1833 to 1841. While in Congress he fought a duel with Daniel Jenifer, which terminated harmlessly; and at the close of his last term he removed to Louisiana.

Byrd, Charles W.—He was born in Virginia; received a liberal education, and settled in Ohio; and in 1803, he was appointed by President Jefferson United States Judge for the District of Ohio.

Was killed by a railway accident near Selma, Alabama, September 21, 1874.

Cabell, Edward C.—Born in Richmond, Virginia, 1817; graduated at the University of Virginia, and, in 1837, removed to the Territory of Florida, where he settled as a cotton planter. He represented the State of Florida in Congress from 1847 to 1853.

Cabell, George C.—Born in Danville, Virginia, January 25, 1837; educated at Danville Academy until eighteen years of age; then taught school in Henry County, devoting his leisure hours to the study of law; attended the University of Virginia Law School in 1857 and 1858; began to practice at Danville in the latter year, when he was elected Attorney for the Commonwealth, which position he held until the war, when he entered the Confederate service in 1861, raised a company and was made Captain, then Major in the Eighteenth Virginia Infantry, and subsequently Lieutenant-Colonel of the same; participated in most of the battles fought by the Northern Virginia Army, beginning with Manassas, and was several times wounded, and at the end of the war held the rank of Colonel. After the war, resumed the practice of law at Danville; was nominated for Congress by the Conservatives in 1874, and elected as a Representative to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Cabell, Samuel J.—In the beginning of the War of the Revolution he was at William and Mary College, and left there to join the first armed corps raised in Virginia, and soon attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in the Continental Army, serving with honor in all the campaigns, till the fall of Charleston, May 12, 1780, when he became a prisoner, and the close of the war restored him to liberty. For many years he was a member of the Virginia Assembly, and a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1795 to 1803. He died in Nelson County, Virginia, September 4, 1818, aged sixty-one years.

Cabell, William H.—He was Governor of Virginia from 1805 to 1808; afterwards President of the Court of Appeals, and spent fifty years in public life. Died in Richmond, Virginia, January 17, 1853.

Cable, Joseph.—He was born in Ohio, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1849 to 1853.

Cabot, George.—Born in Salem, Massachusetts, in 1752, and employed the early part of his life in foreign commerce. Before he was twenty-six years old he was elected a member of the Provincial Congress from Massachusetts, where he advocated those principles of political economy for which he was afterwards distinguished; he was a member of the Convention which formed the Constitution of that State, and also of that which ratified the Constitution of the United States, to promote which he made the most strenuous exertions. From 1791 to 1796 he served in the United States Senate, and was one of the most distinguished members of that body; a confidential friend of Washington and Hamilton, to the latter of whom he rendered most important assistance in forming his financial system. In 1808 he was a member of the Council of Massachusetts, and in 1814 a Delegate to the Hartford Convention, and was made President of that body. He, after that period, retired from public life, and died at Boston, April 18, 1823, aged seventy-two.

Cadwalader, John.—Born in Philadelphia, April 1, 1805; was the son of General Thomas Cadwalader, and grandson of General John Cadwalader of the Revolutionary Army. He graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1821; studied law and came to the bar in 1825; continued to practice his profession in Philadelphia until 1854, when he was elected a Representative in the Thirty-fourth Congress; he declined a re-nomination and returned to the practice of his profession; and in 1858 he was appointed Judge of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, which position he now holds.

Cadwalader, John L.—He was born near Trenton, New Jersey, on an old family estate, in 1837; graduated at Princeton College in 1856, and also at the Law School of Harvard University; admitted to the bar in New York in 1860, and continued in the practice until July 1, 1874, when he was appointed Assistant Secretary of State.

and came to the bar in 1842; served in the State Legislature from 1842 to 1844; was a State Senator in 1850; Lieutenant-Governor in 1868; and in 1872 he was elected Governor of the State. Died at Hillsborough, North Carolina, July 11, 1874.

Caldwell, William P.—Born at Christmasville, Carroll County, Tennessee, November 8, 1832; educated at Cumberland College, Princeton, Kentucky; studied law at Lebanon, Tennessee, and began to practice at Dresden, in that State; was a member of the General Assembly in 1857, and again in 1869; was on the Douglas Electoral Ticket in 1860; was a Delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1868, which nominated Seymour and Blair. In 1874 he was elected a Representative from Tennessee to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Calhoun, James S.—He was born in Georgia, and in 1851 was appointed Governor of the Territory of New Mexico, having been the first who held that position.

Calhoun, John.—He was born in Kentucky; was a lawyer by profession; was for many years a Circuit Judge; in 1820 and 1821 was a member of the Legislature from Ohio County, and in 1829, 1830, and 1840, a member of the same from Breckinridge County, and he was a Representative in Congress from Kentucky from 1835 to 1839. The County-seat of McLean County was named for him in 1852.

Calhoun, John C.—Born in Abbeville District, South Carolina, March 18, 1782. He was of an Irish family. His father, Patrick Calhoun, was born in Ireland, and at an early age came to Pennsylvania, thence went to the western part of Virginia, and after Braddock's defeat, moved to South Carolina in 1756. At the age of thirteen he was put under the charge of his brother-in-law, Dr. Waddell, in Columbia County, Georgia. He entered Yale College in 1802, and graduated with distinction; studied law at Litchfield, Connecticut; and in 1807 was admitted to the bar of South Carolina. The next year he entered the Legislature of that State, where he served for two sessions with ability and distinction, and in 1811 was elected to Congress, where he continued until 1817, when he became Secretary of War under President Monroe, and conducted the affairs of that department with energy and ability for seven years. In 1825 he was elected Vice-President, and in 1837, upon General Hayne's leaving the Senate to become Governor of South Carolina, Mr. Calhoun resigned the Vice-Presidency, and was elected a member of the United States Senate by the Legislature of South Carolina. After the expiration of his senatorial term, he went voluntarily into retirement. Upon the death of Mr. Upshur, in 1843, he assumed the conduct of the State Department, which he held until the close of President Tyler's administration. In 1845 he was again elected Senator, which office he held until his decease. From 1811, when he entered Congress, until his death, he was rarely absent from Washington, and during the most of that period he was in the public service of his State and country. He entered Congress at a time of unusual excitement, preceding the declaration of war of 1812, and had great influence in favor of that measure. In the difficulties and embarrassments upon the termination of war, and the transition to a peace establishment, he took a responsible part. As a presiding officer of the Senate he was punctual, methodical, and accurate, and had a high regard for the dignity of the body, which he endeavored to preserve and maintain. His connection with nullification, his views of the tariff, his opinions in regard to slavery, and the many and exciting questions arising from it, are well known. He shaped the course and molded the opinions of the people of his own State, and of some other Southern States, upon all these subjects. Amid all the strifes of party politics, there always existed between him and his political opponents a great degree of personal kindness. He died in Washington City, March 31, 1850, leaving behind him the reputation of one of the greatest and the purest of American statesmen. His collected writings and speeches were published in six volumes, in 1851 to 1857, accompanied with a biography.

Calhoun, John E.—Born in 1749, and graduated at Princeton College in 1774. He afterwards studied law, in which profession he became distinguished. After being for many years in the State Legislature of South Carolina, he was a Senator in Congress from South Carolina, from 1801 to 1802. He was a decided Republican, and supporter of Mr. Jefferson. He was one of the Committee who were instructed to report a modification of the Judiciary system of the United States. He died in Pendleton District, November 3, 1802.

Call, Jacob.—He was a Representative in Congress from Indiana, from 1824 to 1825.

Call, Richard K.—He was born in Kentucky; and having taken an interest in military affairs, became Aide-de-camp to General Jackson in 1818, and was promoted to a Captain soon afterwards, and subsequently was appointed Brigadier-General of the Florida Militia. He was a member of the Legislative Council of Florida in 1823; a Delegate to Congress from that Territory, from 1823 to 1825; Receiver of Public Money for the Land Office; and he held the position of Governor of Florida from 1836 to 1839, and again from 1841 to 1844. Died at Tallahassee in September, 1862.

Callis, John B.—He was born in North Carolina, in 1828; emigrated to Tennessee in 1841; from that State he went to Wisconsin; entered the volunteer forces during the Rebellion as a Lieutenant, and rose to the rank of Brigadier-General; after the war, he settled in Alabama, and was commissioned a Colonel in the Regular army; and in 1868 was elected a Representative from Alabama to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

Calvert, Charles B.—He was born in Prince George County, Maryland, August 24, 1808; received his earliest education in Philadelphia, but graduated at the University of Virginia in 1827. His whole life has been devoted, on a large scale, to the pursuits of agriculture. He was for many years President of the Maryland Agricultural Society; also of the Prince George County Society; and Vice-President of the United States Agricultural Society. He has devoted special attention to the raising of superior breeds of cattle, every variety of which he has tried on his extensive farms. He was elected to the Legislature of Maryland in 1839, 1843, and 1844; and was elected a Representative from Maryland to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committees on the District of Columbia, and on Agriculture. Died at Riverside, Maryland, May 14, 1864.

Catlin, Samuel.—Born in Washingtonville, Columbia County, Pennsylvania, July 30, 1811. At the age of sixteen, after the death of his father, he was thrown upon his own resources, and became a school-teacher, with the view of supporting his father's family and obtaining the means for a classical education; he accomplished this object; subsequently studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1836, and practiced in Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania. In 1848 he was elected a member from Pennsylvania of the Thirty-first Congress, and in 1850 declined a re-election.

Cambell, Alexander.—He was born in Virginia in 1779; was bred a physician; removed to Kentucky in 1785; was a member of the Kentucky Legislature in 1800; removed to Ohio in 1803; was a member of the Ohio Legislature in 1806; was a Senator in Congress from that State from 1809 to 1813; served as a State Senator from 1813 to 1823; and died at Ripley, Ohio, November 5, 1837.

Cambell, Brookins.—He was born in Washington County, Tennessee, in 1803; was for many years a member of the State Legislature, and in 1845 was unanimously elected Speaker. He was an officer in the Quartermaster's Department in the war with Mexico, and a member of Congress from Tennessee from 1853 to the time of his death, which occurred in Washington, District of Columbia, December 25, 1853.

Cambreleg, Churchill C.—He was born in Washington, North Carolina, in 1786, and received an academical education at Newbern, in that State. He had a special fondness for field sports, but did not let them interfere with his duties as a clerk in a Carolina store, where he was engaged for two years. He removed to New York City in 1802, which has since that time been his home, excepting the year 1806, when he was a counting-house clerk in Providence, Rhode Island. He engaged at an early day in mercantile pursuits with John Jacob Astor, and traveled extensively over the world. He was a Representative in Congress, from New York, from 1821 to 1839, and officiated as Chairman of the Committees on Commerce, Ways and Means, and on Foreign Affairs. In 1840 he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia. His reports and political pamphlets were at one time very numerous—one of the former, on Commerce and Navigation, having gone through several editions and been re-published in London. It was while traveling in Europe he received the appointment of Minister, and on his return to the United States he retired to private life. Died at West Neck, Long Island, April 30, 1862.

Cameron, Angus.—Born in Caledonia, Livingston County, New York, July 4, 1826; studied law at Buffalo, and graduated at the Law School in New York State; removed to La Crosse, Wisconsin, in 1857; was a member of the State Senate in 1863, 1864, 1871, and 1872, and a member of the Assembly in 1866 and 1867; Speaker of that body in 1867; a member of the National Republican Convention at Baltimore in 1864; was a Regent of the University of Wisconsin from 1866 to 1875, and then elected to the United States Senate by Republicans, Democrats, and Liberals, for the term ending in 1881.

Cameron, Duncan.—He was of Scotch parentage but born in North Carolina; received a liberal education; was for a long time Judge of the Superior Court of the State; subsequently President of the Bank of North Carolina; and died at Raleigh, January 3, 1853.

Cameron, John A.—He was an early emigrant to Florida when it was a Territory; and he was appointed one of the first Judges for the United States Court in that Territory.

Cameron, Simon.—He was born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, March 8, 1799, and was left an orphan when only nine years of age. He educated himself while pursuing the employment of a printer in newspaper offices at Harrisburg and in Washington City, and when twenty-two years of age edited and published a Democratic journal at the former city, having previously had charge of a paper, the Pennsylvania Intelligencer, at Doylestown, Pennsylvania. In 1832 he established the Middletown Bank, and devoted much of his attention to the railroad interests of his native State, and before entering Congress he was the Cashier of a bank, President of two railroad companies, and Adjutant-General of the State. He was first elected a Senator in Congress in 1845, where he served until 1849, and he was re-elected to the same position in 1857, for the term ending in 1863, but resigned in 1861. He was spoken of in 1860 as one of the candidates for the Presidency, and in 1861 became Secretary of War under President Lincoln. He resigned that position, and was appointed Minister to Russia in 1862. He was also a Delegate to the Baltimore Convention of 1864, and to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866; and in January, 1867, he was again chosen a Senator in Congress for the term ending in 1873, serving on the Committees on Military Affairs and Ordnance, and as Chairman of those on Agriculture and Foreign Relations. He was also re-elected to the Senate for the fourth term, ending in 1879.

Campbell, Alexander.—Born in Concord, Pennsylvania, October 4, 1814; received a limited education; as Clerk and Superintendent was engaged in the iron business in several States, when he settled in Illinois; was twice Mayor of La Salle; served two terms in the State Legislature; was a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1862; and elected a Representative from Illinois to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Campbell, David.—He was one of the first Territorial Judges appointed after the adoption of the Constitution—having received his commission from President Washington in 1790, for the Territory South of the Ohio River; and in 1811 he received from President Madison the appointment of Judge for the Territory of Mississippi.

Campbell, David.—He was Governor of Virginia from 1836 to 1839; was appointed Major of the Twelfth Infantry, July 6, 1812; Lieutenant-Colonel of the Twentieth Infantry, March 12, 1813; resigned January 28, 1814. Died in Abingdon, Virginia, March 19, 1859, aged eighty.

Cason, Thomas J.—He was born in Union County, Indiana, September 13, 1828; educated at common schools, worked on a farm; when seventeen years of age, commenced teaching school and reading law; was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court in May, 1853, and has continued to practice at Lebanon, except when on the Bench; was a member of the Legislature in 1861, 1862, 1863, and 1864, and of the State Senate in 1864, 1865, 1866, and 1867; was appointed Judge of Common Pleas in 1867, and re-elected to the same office for a term of four years; and was elected to the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses, serving on the Committee on Revision of Laws.

Cass, Lewis.—Born in Exeter, New Hampshire, October 9, 1782. Having received a limited education at his native place, at the early age of seventeen he crossed the Alleghany Mountains on foot, to seek a home in the "Great West," then an almost unexplored wilderness. Settled at Marietta, Ohio; he studied law, and was successful. Elected at twenty-five to the Legislature of Ohio, he originated the bill which arrested the proceedings of Aaron Burr, and, as stated by Mr. Jefferson, was the first blow given to what is known as Burr's Conspiracy. In 1807 he was appointed by Mr. Jefferson Marshal of the State, and held the office till the latter part of 1811, when he volunteered to repel Indian aggressions on the frontier. He was elected Colonel of the Third Regiment of Ohio Volunteers, and entered the military service of the United States at the commencement of the War of 1812. Having by a difficult march reached Detroit, he urged the immediate invasion of Canada, and was the author of the proclamation of that event. He was the first to land in arms on the enemy's shore, and, with a small detachment of troops, fought and won the first battle, that of the Tarontoe. At the subsequent capitulation of Detroit he was absent on important service, and regretted that his command and himself had been included in that capitulation. Liberated on parole, he repaired to the seat of government to report the causes of the disaster and the failure of the campaign. He was immediately appointed a Colonel in the Regular army, and soon after promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General; having in the meantime been elected Major-General of the Ohio Volunteers. On being exchanged and released from parole, he again repaired to the frontier, and joined the army for the recovery of Michigan. Being at that time without a command, he served and distinguished himself, as a volunteer Aid-de-camp to General Harrison, at the battle of the Thames. He was appointed by President Madison in October, 1813, Governor of Michigan. His position combined, with the ordinary duties of chief magistrate of a civilized community, the immediate management and control, as Superintendent, of the relations with the numerous and powerful Indian tribes in that region of country. He conducted with success the affairs of the Territory under embarrassing circumstances. Under his sway peace was preserved between the whites and the treacherous and disaffected Indians, law and order established, and the Territory rapidly advanced in population, resources, and prosperity. He held this position till July, 1831, when he was, by President Jackson, made Secretary of War. In the latter part of 1836 President Jackson appointed him Minister to France, where he remained until 1842, when he requested his recall, and returned to this country. In January, 1845, he was elected, by the Legislature of Michigan, to the Senate of the United States, which place he resigned on his nomination, in May, 1848, as a candidate for the Presidency by the political party to which he belonged. After the election of his opponent (General Taylor) to that office, the Legislature of his State, in 1849, re-elected him to the Senate for the unexpired portion of his original term of six years. When Mr. Buchanan became President, he invited General Cass to the head of the Department of State, which position he resigned in December, 1860. He devoted some attention to literary pursuits, and his writings, speeches, and State papers would make several volumes; among which is one entitled "France, its King, Court, and Government," published in 1840. He died in Detroit, June 17, 1866.

Cass, Lewis, Jr.—He was born in Detroit, Michigan, and the noted Governor and Cabinet Minister bearing the same name, was his father. He was liberally educated; in 1849 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to the Papal States; and in 1854 promoted to the rank of Minister Resident, and he remained in Italy until 1858.

Cassedy, George.—He was born in Bergen County, New Jersey, and was a Representative in Congress from New Jersey from 1821 to 1827, and died in Hackensack, New Jersey, December 31, 1842, aged fifty-eight years.

From 1754 to 1771 he was a member of the Colonial Assembly, and for the last two years was Speaker of the House of Delegates. He commanded the right wing of Tryon's forces at the battle of Allamance, in 1771. He was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1774 to 1776. In 1775 he was President of the Provincial Congress which framed the Constitution of the State, and he was elected first Governor of North Carolina under it, holding that office till 1779. In 1780 he led the North Carolina troops in the battle of Camden. In 1782 he was Speaker of the Senate, and Comptroller-General, performing the duties of both offices till 1784, when he was again elected Governor, and held that position till he became ineligible by the laws of the State. In 1787 he was a Delegate to the Convention for framing the Federal Constitution. In 1789 was elected State Senator, and was a member of the Convention which ratified the Constitution. He was also Speaker of the Senate, and, whilst presiding over that body, November 5, 1789, he was struck with paralysis, which proved fatal in ten days.

He was a Representative from Randolph to the Legislature of Vermont in 1805, and the seven succeeding years, during five of which he was Speaker of the House of Representatives, and was again elected Representative from the same town in 1823 and 1824. He was elected United States Senator from Vermont from 1813 to 1819, but he resigned his seat in 1817. He was chosen Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Vermont in 1817, holding the same office by annual re-elections until 1821. He then returned to his profession of the law for a few years, and in 1824 he was again chosen United States Senator from 1825 to 1831, inclusive, when he retired wholly from public life, and devoted his attention to farming and gardening, of which he was excessively fond. He was a brother of the late Philander Chase, Bishop of Illinois; and died at Randolph, Vermont, February 23, 1846.

Chase, George W.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1853 to 1855. Died in Maryland, Otsego County, New York, May 1, 1867.

Chase, Jeremiah T.—He was a Delegate from Maryland to the Continental Congress from 1783 to 1784.

Chase, Lucien B.—He was born in Vermont, and was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee from 1845 to 1847, and for a second term, ending in 1849. He was the author of a work entitled "History of President Polk's Administration." Died in December, 1864, aged forty-seven years.

Chase, Salmon P.—He was born in Cornish, New Hampshire, January 13, 1808. His education began at home, and was continued at the schools and academies of New Hampshire and central Ohio, and completed at the Cincinnati College, and at Dartmouth, in New Hampshire, graduating in 1826. He studied law in Washington City with William Wirt, and practiced his profession in Cincinnati, Ohio, for many years. His first public position was that of School Examiner, in Cincinnati, in 1839; in 1840 he was a City Councilman; in 1845 he projected what was called a Liberty Convention; was a member of the Free-soil Convention held at Buffalo in 1848; and was a Senator in Congress from Ohio from 1849 to 1853, and elected Governor of Ohio in 1853, and re-elected in 1857. In 1860 he was again chosen a Senator in Congress; but on the day after he took his seat he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury in President Lincoln's Cabinet, but resigned in July, 1864. It was while the country was passing through the trials of the Rebellion that the National Finances were successfully carried through under his administration. He was a member, also, of the Peace Congress of 1861. On December 6, 1864, he was appointed by President Lincoln Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, to succeed R. B. Taney. By virtue of his position as Chief Justice he presided over the Senate while acting as a Court of Impeachment, during the trial of President Andrew Johnson, in 1868. Died in Washington, May 7, 1871.

Chase, Samuel.—Born in Somerset County, Maryland, April 17, 1741; received a good education, and came to the bar in his twenty-second year, settling at Annapolis; he was one of the "Sons of Liberty;" was sent by Maryland as a Delegate to the Continental Congress, where he served from 1774 to 1778, and in 1784 and 1785; was a signer of the Declaration of Independence; and he it was who proclaimed on the floor of Congress that they had a Judas among them, in the person of J. J. Zubly, of Georgia, and also made a severe demonstration against the Society of Friends for alleged disloyalty. In 1786 he settled in Baltimore, and in 1788 was appointed Chief Justice of the Criminal Court, and was a member of the Convention that ratified the Federal Constitution. In 1796 he was appointed by Washington an Associate on the Supreme Bench; in 1804, at the instigation of John Randolph, he was impeached, and having been arraigned in 1805, after a long trial, his alleged improper conduct on the bench was approved. Died June 19, 1811. He was a man of high character and rare benevolence, and it was to him that William Pinkney was indebted for his education and subsequent success in life.

Chase, Samuel.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1827 to 1829.

Chastain, Edward W.—He was born in South Carolina, and was a Representative in Congress from Georgia, from 1851 to 1855.

Chatfield, A. G.—He was an early emigrant to Minnesota, and in 1853 he was appointed an Associate Justice of the United States Court for the Territory of Minnesota.

Chavez, J. Francisco.—He was born in Padillas, Bernalillo County, New Mexico, June 27, 1833; received a liberal education at St. Louis, Missouri; studied medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York; and was devoted for several years to mercantile pursuits, and to the raising of cattle for the California market. In 1861 he entered the military service of the United States, and was appointed Major of the First Regiment of Infantry raised in New Mexico, and, after participating in several battles and seeing much active service on the frontier, he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and was mustered out at his own request in 1864; and in 1865 he was elected a Delegate from New Mexico to the Thirty-ninth Congress; and re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, to which he was admitted during the last month of said Congress.

Cheatham, Richard.—He was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee from 1837 to 1839. Died in September, 1845.

Chenoweth, F. A.—He was born in Ohio, removed to Iowa, and from that State was appointed Associate Justice of the United States Court for the Territory of Washington.

Chestnut, James, Jr.—Born near Camden, South Carolina, in 1815; graduated at Princeton College; from 1842 to 1852 was a member of the State Legislature; from 1854 to 1858 he was a member of the State Senate; he was appointed to a seat in the United States Senate, taking the same during the second session of the Thirty-fifth Congress, and was subsequently elected to that position, but was expelled July 11, 1861. He became identified with the Rebellion of 1861, as a member of the so-called Confederate Congress; and also a Delegate to the New York Convention of 1868.

Chetwood, William.—Born in New Jersey in 1769; graduated at Princeton College in 1792, and admitted to the bar in 1798. During the Whiskey Insurrection he attended Major-General Lee as Aide-camp; at one time served in the State Council of New Jersey, and was elected to Congress from that State, to fill a vacancy during the administration of President Jackson. He was an able lawyer, practiced his profession until his seventieth year, and died December 18, 1857.

Cheves, Langdon.—He was born in Abbeville District, South Carolina, September 17, 1776; was admitted to the bar in 1801; elected to the State Legislature in 1808; was a Presidential Elector in 1809; and afterwards Attorney-General of the State. He was a Representative in Congress from South Carolina from 1811 to 1816, and was Speaker during the second session of the Thirteenth Congress. He was also a Commissioner of Claims under the Treaty of Ghent; Judge of the Court of Common Pleas from 1816 to 1819, and for a time President of the United States Bank. Resigning this trust he returned to Carolina, and withdrew from public life. He died June 26, 1857.

Chew, Benjamin.—Born in Anne Arundel County, Maryland, November 29, 1722; his grandfather, Samuel, having come to America with Lord Baltimore; he studied law and settled on the Delaware; in 1754 he went to Philadelphia, and held the offices respectively of Recorder, Register of Wills, Attorney-General, and Chief Justice of the State. Was a member of the House of Delegates. When hostilities commenced, was claimed by both parties; but, after the Declaration of Independence, was decided against the Whigs, and, because he refused to sign a parole in 1777, he was imprisoned at Fredericksburg in Virginia. From 1790 to 1806 he was President of the High Court of Errors and Appeals, and died January 20, 1810.

Chilcott, George M.—Born in Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania, January 2, 1828; in 1844 removed with his father to Iowa; studied medicine, but did not practice the profession. In 1852 he was chosen Sheriff of Jefferson County; emigrated to Nebraska Territory in 1856; during the latter part of that year he was elected to the Territorial Legislature; in 1859 he settled in Colorado, and in 1861 was elected to the Legislature of that Territory; in 1862 he was admitted to the bar of the same; in 1863 he was appointed by President Lincoln a Register of the Land Office, serving four years; in 1865 he was elected to Congress as a Representative under the State organization, but not admitted; and in 1866 he was elected a Delegate from Colorado to the Fortieth Congress. In 1866 he was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States.

Childs, Thomas.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative from that State during the Thirty-fourth Congress.

Childs, Timothy.—He was born in Massachusetts; was a member of the Assembly of New York in 1828 and 1833; and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1829 to 1831, from 1835 to 1839, and again from 1841 to 1843. Died at Santa Cruz, in November, 1847.

Chilton, Samuel.—He was born in Virginia in 1804, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1843 to 1845. After receiving a good education, he studied and adopted the profession of law; filled various offices of trust and honor, and, after retiring from Congress, was a member of the State Constitutional Convention. Died at his residence in Fauquier County, Virginia, January 14, 1867.

Chinn, Joseph W.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1831 to 1835, and died at Richmond, December 5, 1840.

Chinn, Thomas W.—He was born in Kentucky, and, removing to Louisiana, was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1839 to 1841.

Chinn, Thomas W.—He was a citizen of Louisiana, and in 1849 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to the Two Sicilies, but soon resigned, having held the office only from June to October.

Chipman, Daniel.—Born in 1765, in Salisbury, Connecticut; graduated at Dartmouth in 1788; was a lawyer by profession, and practiced at Ripton, Vermont. He was for many years in the Legislature, and was frequently Speaker of the House of Representatives of his State, and a member of the last State Constitutional Convention; he was the first reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court, and author of an able work on "Law Contracts for the Sale of Specific Articles," which is highly esteemed by the profession. He was a member of Congress from 1815 to 1817, and died in Ripton, April 23, 1850.

Chipman, Henry.—He was born in Vermont in 1785, and after receiving a liberal education, adopted the profession of law. When quite young he went to South Carolina, and was engaged in the practice of the profession in that State until 1824, when he was appointed by President Monroe a Judge of the United States for the Territory of Michigan, when he removed to Detroit, and from which time until his death, which occurred in Detroit, he was one of the most influential citizens of the State. Judge Chipman was a first-class man, and the qualities which characterized Judge Chipman cannot, perhaps, be better expressed than in his own language, addressed to the compiler, when speaking of Mr. Woodbridge:—"In his politics he was a disciple of the Washington school, whose principles he had imbibed in early life from his association with the founders of the Republic and framers of the Federal Constitution. He was truly national and conservative in his views and feelings, and always a devoted friend of the Union. He could never stoop to play the political partisan for his own advancement, but always carried his political opinions as parts of his private conscience and personal integrity, and never allowed a difference of political opinion to interfere with his social relations or public duties."

Chipman, John S.—He was born in Vermont, graduated at Middlebury College in 1823, and was a Representative in Congress from Michigan from 1845 to 1847. Subsequently removed to California.

Chipman, Nathaniel.—Born in Salisbury, Connecticut, November 15, 1753; graduated at Yale College in 1777, and settled as a lawyer in Tinmouth, Vermont; and was Professor of Law for twenty-eight years in Middlebury College. In 1786 he was elected a Judge of the Supreme Court; in 1789 he was chosen

Chief Justice; and in 1791 was appointed Judge of the United States District Court. He was subsequently again elected Chief Justice, and from 1797 to 1803 he was a member of the United States Senate from Vermont. In 1793 he published "Sketches of the Principles of Government," and "Reports and Dissertations." He died at Tinmouth, February 13, 1843.

Chipman, Norton P.—He was born in Milford Centre, Ohio, March 7, 1834; removed to Iowa in 1845; entered Washington College, but left to attend the Law School at Cincinnati, where he graduated; returned to Iowa and commenced the practice of law; entered the Union Army as private, and enrolled as second Lieutenant; and was Adjutant and Major of the Second Infantry; was appointed Colonel and additional Aid-de-camp in the Regular Army, and at the close of the war was brevetted Brigadier-General; settled at Washington City, where he had previously been on duty for two years; was appointed Secretary of the Territorial government of the District of Columbia at its organization, and was elected a Delegate to the Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses.

Chittenden, Lucius B.—He was born in Vermont, and in 1861 was appointed from that State Register in the United States Treasury, in which he remained until 1867.

Chittenden, Martin.—Born in Salisbury, Connecticut, March 12, 1769. In 1776 the family removed to Williston, Vermont; in 1789 graduated at Dartmouth College, but, owing to feeble health, he devoted himself to agricultural pursuits at Jericho, in Chittenden County. He was a member of the Convention that adopted the United States Constitution; was in 1790 elected County Clerk and Representative, to which position he was re-elected for six years successively, and also at occasional subsequent intervals; was Judge of the County Court from 1793 to 1795; Chief Justice from 1796 to 1803; and was a Representative in Congress from 1803 to 1813, and Governor of Vermont in 1813 and 1814. Was Judge of Probate in 1821 and 1823. At the age of thirty-three he attained the rank of Major-General of Militia. He was Governor during the war with England, and refused to comply with the requisition of General Maconb for the State Militia, and this act prevented his re-election as Governor. He died at Williston, Vermont, September 5, 1841.

Chittenden, Simon B.—He was born in Guilford, Connecticut, March 29, 1814; received an academic education; entered a store at New Haven, Connecticut, and removed to New York in 1843, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits; was Vice-President of the New York Chamber of Commerce from 1867 to 1869; one of the Directors in the Continental Bank and in the Continental Fire Insurance Company; a Director in the Delaware and Lackawanna and Western and other Railroads; President of the New Haven and New London Shore-Line Railroad of Connecticut; and was elected to the Forty-third Congress, to fill a vacancy, and was re-elected to the Forty-fourth Congress, serving on the Committee on Civil Service.

Chittenden, Thomas.—Born in East Guilford, Connecticut, January 6, 1730; received a scanty education; removed at the age of twenty to Salisbury, where he commanded a regiment; was many years a Representative in the Legislature, and Justice of the Peace; in 1774 emigrated to the New Hampshire grants, as Vermont was then called, and settled at Williston on the Union River; rendered service to the State in the Councils during the Revolution; was a member of the Convention in 1777 which declared Vermont an independent State, and was one of the Commissioners to solicit admission into the Confederacy; in 1777 was a member of the State Constitutional Convention; President of the Council of Safety; in 1778 was chosen Governor of the State, and, with the exception of one year, filled that office till his death. He died at Williston, Vermont, August 24, 1797.

Chittenden, T. C.—He was born in Massachusetts, and having removed to New York, was elected a Representative from that State to the Twenty-seventh Congress.

Choate, Rufus.—Was born at Ipswich, Massachusetts, October 1, 1799. He graduated at Dartmouth College in 1819, and was afterwards chosen a tutor in that institution, but having selected the law for his profession, he entered the Law School at Cambridge, and after spending a few months there went to Washington and studied with William Wirt. He completed his legal studies at an office in Salem, and commenced the practice of his profession in the town of Danvers in 1824. In 1825 he was elected a Representative to the Massachusetts Legislature, and in 1827 he was in the Senate of the same State. He took a prominent part in the debates, and won much reputation by his energy and sagacity. In 1833 he was elected a member of Congress from the Essex District, but declined a re-election in 1834, and removed to Boston, to devote himself to his profession. Here he took an eminent position at the bar, and soon came into an extensive practice. In 1841, on the retirement of Mr. Webster from the Senate, Mr. Choate was elected to fill the vacancy, and at the close of his term he gave himself up wholly to his profession. He was a Regent of the Smithsonian Institution, but resigned the position. He was greatly distinguished for his eloquence, but his style of speaking was peculiar; his judgment in the management of cases was considered consummate. His published orations and arguments are quite numerous, and all of a high order. From Yale College he received the degree of LL.D. He died at Halifax, Nova Scotia, while on his way to Europe for his health, July 12, 1859. His life and writings were published by Dr. S. G. Brown, and another life by E. G. Parker.

Chrisman, James S.—Was born in Kentucky; was a member of the Constitutional Convention of that State in 1849; a Representative in Congress from 1853 to 1855; contested for the seat in Congress in 1860 with William C. Anderson, but was rejected; was a member of the Executive Council of the State from 1861 to 1865; and a member of the Confederate Congress during its existence.

Christianity, Isaac P.—Born in Johnstown, New York, in March, 1812; received an academical education, and while yet a boy supported his father's family by teaching school. Began the study of law, and in 1836 removed to Monroe, Michigan, where he completed his legal course and practiced the profession from 1838 to 1857. From 1841 to 1846 he was Prosecuting Attorney for Monroe County; in 1848 he attended the Free Soil Convention in Buffalo; in 1849 elected to the State Senate; in 1852 was the candidate for Governor of the Free Soil party, and was a prime mover in the political combinations of 1854. He was a Delegate to the Philadelphia Convention of 1856; soon afterward purchased The Monroe Commercial and became its editor; was a candidate for the United States Senate in 1857; in the same year was elected a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, and in 1865 re-elected for eight years by the unanimous vote of all parties; served as an officer on the staffs of Generals A. A. Humphreys and G. A. Custer during the Rebellion, and was elected a Senator in Congress from Michigan for the term ending in 1881.

Clay, Brutus J.—He was born in Madison County, Kentucky, July 1, 1808; was educated at Danville College, Kentucky, and settled in Bourbon County as a farmer in 1837. In 1840 he served in the State Legislature; was subsequently elected President of the Bourbon County Agricultural Society, which position he still holds. In 1853 he was elected President of the State Agricultural Society; was re-elected for four years, and then declined a re-election; was again elected to the Legislature in 1860; and was elected a Representative from Kentucky to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, and as a member of that on Revolutionary Pensions. Ever since his boyhood he has been devoted to agriculture, and especially to the raising of choice breeds of cattle.

Clay, Cassius M.—Born in Madison County, Kentucky, October 19, 1810; graduated at Yale College in 1832; practiced law; was a member of the Kentucky Legislature in 1835, 1837, and 1840; and of the National Whig Convention of 1840, at Harrisburg. The improved jury system and the common-school system of Kentucky are principally due to his efforts in the Legislature. He was opposed to the annexation of Texas; stumped the Northern States for Henry Clay for the Presidency in 1844; and June 3, 1845, issued in Lexington The True American, a weekly anti-slavery paper. In August his press was seized by a mob, and it was afterwards printed in Cincinnati and published in Lexington, whither he had removed in 1840; and afterwards in Louisville. He was Captain in the Mexican War, and made prisoner at Encarnacion, January 23, 1847. Aided in nominating Taylor for the Presidency in 1848; in 1849 called a convention of Emancipationists at Frankfort. Separated from the Whig party in 1850, and was an anti-slavery candidate for Governor, receiving nearly five thousand votes; in April, 1862, was appointed Major-

General of Volunteers, and resigned March, 1863; was appointed Minister to Russia from 1862 to 1869. A volume of his speeches was edited by Horace Greeley in 1848.

Clay, Clement C.—He was born in Halifax County, Virginia, December 17, 1789; graduated at the University of East Tennessee; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1809; and removed to Huntsville, Alabama, in 1811, where he resided till his death. During the Creek War he saw some service as a soldier. He practiced his profession until 1817, when he was elected a member of the Territorial Council of Alabama; in 1819 he was chosen one of the Judges of the Circuit Court; in 1820 was chosen Chief Justice of that Court, and resigned in 1823; in 1828 he was elected to the State Legislature, and was made Speaker; he was a Representative in Congress from Alabama from 1827 to 1835; in 1835 he was elected Governor of Alabama, serving two years; and in 1837 he was elected a Senator in Congress for the term ending in 1842. Died at Huntsville, Alabama, September 9, 1856. His son, bearing the same name, was also in Congress.

Clay, Clement C., Jr.—He was born in Madison, Alabama, about the year 1819; graduated at the University of Alabama, and spent two years at the University of Virginia; studied law, and commenced the practice at Huntsville, Alabama, in 1840; served in the Legislature of Alabama in 1842, 1844, and 1845; and was elected by the Legislature, in 1846, Judge of the Madison County Court, serving two years, when he resigned. In 1852 he was a Presidential Elector, and in 1853 he was elected a Senator in Congress from Alabama, and in 1859 was re-elected for the term of six years, receiving every vote in the Legislature. Expelled from the Senate March 14, 1861, and took part in the Rebellion of that year. He was subsequently confined in Fortress Monroe as a prisoner of state, but finally released by President Johnson on his parole.

Clay, Henry.—Born in Hanover County, Virginia, April 12, 1777. Having received a common-school education, he became, at an early age, a copyist in the office of the Clerk of the Court of Chancery, at Richmond. At nineteen he commenced the study of law, and shortly afterwards removed to Lexington, Kentucky, where he was admitted to the bar in 1799, and soon obtained extensive practice. He began his political career by taking an active part in the election of Delegates to frame a new Constitution for the State of Kentucky. In 1803 he was elected to the Legislature by the citizens of Fayette County, and in 1806 he was appointed to the United States Senate for the remainder of the term of General Adair, who had resigned. In 1807 he was again elected a member of the General Assembly of Kentucky, and was chosen Speaker. In the following year occurred his duel with Humphrey Marshall. In 1809 he was again elected to the United States Senate for the unexpired term of Mr. Thurston, resigned. In 1811 he was elected a member of the House of Representatives, and was chosen Speaker on the first day of his appearance in that body, and was five times re-elected to this office. During this session his eloquence aroused the country to resist the aggressions of Great Britain, and awakened a national spirit. In 1814 he was appointed one of the Commissioners to negotiate a treaty of peace at Ghent. Returning from this mission, he was re-elected to Congress, and in 1818 he spoke in favor of recognizing the independence of the South American Republics. In the same year he put forth his strength in behalf of a national system of internal improvements. A monument of stone, inscribed with his name, was erected on the Cumberland Road, to commemorate his services in behalf of that improvement. In the session of 1819-'20 he exerted himself for the establishment of protection to American industry, and this was followed by services in adjusting the Missouri Compromise. After the settlement of these questions he withdrew from Congress, in order to attend to his private affairs. In 1823 he returned to Congress, and was re-elected Speaker; and at this session he exerted himself in support of the independence of Greece. Under John Quincy Adams he filled the office of Secretary of State. The attack upon Mr. Adams' administration, and especially upon the Secretary of State, by John Randolph, led to a hostile meeting between him and Mr. Clay, which terminated without bloodshed. In 1829 he returned to Kentucky, and in 1831 was elected to the United States Senate, where he commenced his labors in favor of the tariff. In the same month of his reappearance in the Senate he was unanimously nominated for President of the United States. In 1836 he was re-elected to the Senate, where he remained until 1842, when he resigned, and took his final leave, as he supposed, of that body. In 1839 he was again nominated for the Presidency, but General Harrison was selected as the candidate. He also received the nomination in 1844 for President, and was defeated in this election by Mr. Polk. He remained in retirement in Kentucky until 1849, when he was re-elected to the Senate of the United States for the term ending in 1855. Here he devoted all his energies to the measures known as the Compromise Acts. His efforts during this session impaired his strength, and he went for his health to Havana and New Orleans, but with no permanent advantage. He returned to Washington, but was unable to participate in the active duties of the Senate, and resigned his seat, to take effect upon the 6th of September, 1852. He died in Washington City, June 29, 1852. He was interested in the success of the Colonization Society, and was for a long time one of its most efficient officers, and also its President. His "Life and Letters," and also his "Speeches," were published in several volumes by the late Calvin Colton.

Clay, James B.—Born in Washington City, November 9, 1817. He received his classical education at Transylvania University, in Kentucky, and at the age of fifteen went to Boston, where he spent two years in a counting-house. From Boston he emigrated to St. Louis, Missouri, then a city of only eight thousand, and settled upon a farm; and when twenty-one years of age, he returned to Kentucky. After spending two years in the manufacturing business, he graduated at the Law School of Lexington, and practiced law as the partner of his father, the Honorable Henry Clay, until 1849; and during that year President Taylor appointed him Chargé d'Affaires to Lisbon; and having returned home by order of the Government, he was mentioned by name in President Fillmore's Message of 1850. In 1851 he again took up his residence in Missouri, but returned to Kentucky in 1853, when he became the proprietor of Ashland. He was elected to Congress in 1857, serving one term, and on the Committee on Foreign Relations. He was also a member of the Peace Convention of 1861, held in Washington. He was identified with the Rebellion of 1861, and died in Montreal, January 26, 1864.

Clay, John Randolph.—He was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1808; spent his youth with his godfather, John Randolph, in Virginia; in 1830 he went to Russia as Secretary of Legation; in 1836 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to the same country; in 1838 he was made Secretary of Legation to Austria; in 1845 went back to Russia in the same capacity; in 1847 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to Peru; and in 1853 raised to the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary to the same country, remaining there until 1860, when he returned to the United States. He was the son of Joseph Clay.

Clay, Joseph.—He was a member of the Revolutionary Committee of 1774 and 1775; was a Delegate from Georgia to the Continental Congress from 1778 to 1780, when he resigned; was Judge of the District Court of Georgia from 1796 to 1801; was Paymaster-General of the Southern Department during the Revolution. Died at Savannah, Georgia, January, 1805. His son, bearing the same name, was a prominent Judge and Baptist preacher. Another son, John Randolph, was distinguished as a diplomatist.

Clay, Matthew.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1797 to 1813. Died in 1815.

Clay, Thomas H.—He was born in 1803, in Kentucky, and son of Henry Clay; in 1862 he was appointed Minister Resident to Nicaragua, where he remained until 1866; during the same period he was accredited as Minister to Honduras. Died in Lexington, Kentucky, March 18, 1871.

Clayton, Alexander M.—He was an early emigrant to Arkansas when it was a Territory, and in 1835 he was appointed one of the United States Judges for that district.

Clayton, Augustin S.—Born in Fredericksburg, Virginia, November 27, 1783, and died at his residence, in Athens, Georgia, June 21, 1839. He was educated at the University of Georgia; read law, and practiced it with eminent success; served in the State Legislature; was appointed Judge of the Superior Court; was a Presidential Elector in 1829; and was a Representative in Congress from Georgia from 1831 to 1835. He was for many years skeptical on the subject of the Christian religion, but at the time of his death was a sincere believer, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He acquired some distinction as a politician, and the political pamphlet called "Crockett's Life of Van Buren," is said to have been the production of his pen.

Clayton, Charles.—He was born in England in 1825; was well educated; went to Wisconsin in 1842; crossed the Rocky Mountains to Oregon in 1847; arrived in San Francisco in 1848; was Alcalde in Santa Clara in 1849; built the flour mills there in 1852; removed to San Francisco in 1853, and engaged in the grain and flour business; was a member of the State Legislature in 1863, 1864, 1865, and 1866; a member of the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco from 1864 to 1869; was appointed in 1870 Surveyor of Customs of the port and district of San Francisco; and elected to the Forty-third Congress, serving on the Committee on Commerce and the Centennial Celebration.

Clayton, John M.—Born in Sussex County, Delaware, July 24, 1796; graduated at Yale College in 1815; was bred to the bar, having studied law in the office of John Clayton, and for a time in the Law School at Litchfield, Connecticut. He commenced practice in 1818, and soon attained eminence in his profession. He was in 1824 elected to the State Legislature, and subsequently Secretary of State of Delaware; and in 1829 was chosen a Senator in Congress. He was re-elected in 1835, and resigned in December, 1836. In January, 1837, was appointed Chief Justice of Delaware, which office he resigned in 1839. He was again elected to the Federal Senate in 1845, and was a Senator until 1849, when he became Secretary of State under President Taylor, which position he occupied until the death of Taylor, in July, 1850. During this period he negotiated the famous Clayton-Bulwer Treaty. He was for the third time elected to the Senate, and took his seat March, 1851, and died a Senator, November 9, 1856. During his last term in the Senate, he vindicated, with marked ability, the principles of the treaty which he inaugurated. At the bar he was a learned lawyer and an eloquent advocate; and during his whole public career acquitted himself uprightly, with dignity and recognized ability.

Clayton, Joshua.—He was a native of Delaware; practiced medicine for many years, and during the scarcity of Peruvian bark in the Revolutionary War, he successfully substituted for it in his practice a mixture of poplar and the root of the dogwood, in nearly equal parts, and half the quantity of the interior of the white oak. He was President of Delaware from 1789 to 1793, and Governor from 1793 to 1796; and chosen Senator of the United States in 1798; but died in Delaware, August, 1798.

Clayton, Philip.—He was born in Georgia, and received a liberal education; came to Washington in 1849, under the patronage of Howell Cobb, and was made Second Auditor of the Treasury Department, where he remained until 1857, when he received the appointment of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, remaining in that office until 1861, when he retired to take part in the Rebellion.

Clayton, Powell.—Born in Delaware County, Pennsylvania, August 7, 1833; received his education at Partridge's Military Academy, Bristol, Pennsylvania; studied civil engineering at Wilmington, Delaware, and followed it as a profession; entered the Union Army in Kansas, May 29, 1861, as Captain of the First Kansas Infantry; appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of Cavalry in 1862; was appointed Colonel of the same in 1863, and commissioned Brigadier-General in 1864; settled in Arkansas at the close of the war as a planter; and elected Governor in 1868; and elected to the United States Senate in 1871 for the term ending in 1877, serving on the Committees on Territories, Engrossed Bills, Levees, Political Disabilities, and Military Affairs.

Clayton, Thomas.—He was a Representative in Congress from Delaware from 1813 to 1817, and United States Senator from 1823 to 1826, and again from 1837 to 1847. He had been at different periods a member of the Delaware Legislature, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and of the Superior Court. He died in New Castle, Delaware, August 21, 1854, aged seventy-six years.

Cleveland, J. F.—He was a Representative in Congress from Georgia from 1836 to 1839; but subsequently removed to Charleston, where he became a merchant, and died May 19, 1841.

Clemens, Jeremiah.—He was born in Huntsville, Alabama, December 28, 1814, and was educated at La Grange College and the University of Alabama. He studied law at the University of Transylvania, in Kentucky, and was admitted to the bar in 1834. In 1838 he was appointed United States Attorney for the Northern District of Alabama; in 1839, 1840, and 1841, he was elected to the State Legislature; in 1842 raised a company of Volunteer troops and went to Texas, having been appointed Lieutenant-Colonel, and subsequently to the same office in the Regular army; in 1843 and 1844 he was again elected to the Legislature; in 1844 served as a Presidential Elector; in 1848 was appointed Governor of the Civil and Military Department of Purchase in Mexico, which position he held until the close of the war; and he was a Senator in Congress from Alabama from 1849 to 1853. He was also a Presidential Elector in 1856. As an author Mr. Clemens has published two novels, entitled "Bernard Lile" and "Mustang Gray," the first in 1853 and the last in 1857. He was subsequently an editor. Died in Huntsville, May 21, 1865.

Clemens, Sherrard.—Born at Wheeling, Virginia, April 28, 1826; graduated at Washington College, Pennsylvania; a lawyer by profession; and during political campaigns has held several confidential positions in his native State; and was elected a member of Congress from December, 1852, to March, 1853, and elected to the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving on the Committees on Manufactures and Revolutionary Pensions. In 1856 he was chosen a Presidential Elector. In 1859 he was wounded in a duel fought with Mr. Wise, and was prevented from attending the second session of the Thirty-fifth Congress. He was re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the Committee on Commerce. Took part in the Rebellion.

On his retirement from the Legislature, in 1836, he removed to Ashville, in Buncombe County. He was soon after electd to a seat in the State Senate of North Carolina. In 1843 he was elected to Congress, and, with the exception of one term, was a member of the House of Representatives until the Thirty-fifth Congress, when he was appointed Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. On the resignation of A. Biggs, he was appointed a Senator in Congress, and in November, 1858, his appointment was confirmed by the Legislature. He made contributions to the sciences of geology and mineralogy, and brought to light many facts connected with the mountains of North Carolina, one of the highest peaks of which it was his fortune to explore and measure, and which now bears his name. He took part in the Rebellion of 1861 as a Colonel, having been expelled from the Senate in July, 1861, to which he had been re-elected for the term commencing in March, 1861. Was a Delegate to the New York Convention of 1868.

Clinton, De Witt.—Born at Little Britain, in Orange County, New York, March 2, 1769. He graduated at Columbia College, with the highest honors, in 1786. He studied law, but never engaged much in its practice. He was elected to the Senate of New York in 1799. In July, 1803, he fought a duel with Mr. Swartwout, arising from political controversy concerning Mr. Burr. He was a Senator of the United States from 1802 to 1803, and was chosen Mayor of New York in 1803, holding this office until 1815, excepting the years 1807 and 1810. While he was Mayor, he was also for several years a State Senator, and the Lieutenant-Governor. Under his auspices, also, the Historical Society of New York, of which he was at one time President, and the Academy of Fine Arts were incorporated, the New York City Hall was founded, the Orphan Asylum established, and the city fortified. He took a great interest, as early as 1817, in, and did more than any other man in behalf of, the Erie Canal, and that great work was finished during his administration as Governor, in 1825. In 1812 he consented to become the candidate of the Peace party for the Presidency of the United States. In 1823 and 1824 he was President of the Board of Canal Commissioners, and during the latter year was elected Governor of the State, and in 1826 was re-elected to the same office; he afterwards declined the embassy to England, offered to him by President Adams. He received a liberal education, and having studied law, practiced it with success both in New York and Ohio until 1830. He was a Representative in Congress from Ohio from 1831 to 1833; served for many years in the Legislature of that State, before and after entering Congress; and though ostensibly living in retirement, he was for many years very frequently called upon to address the citizens of Ohio on topics of a varied nature, on account of his popularity as an orator. Died at Sandusky, Ohio, December 27, 1865. He was the father of the distinguished bankers, Jay, Pitt, and Henry D. Cooke.

Cooke, Henry D.—Born in Sandusky City, Ohio, November 23, 1825; graduated at Transylvania University, Kentucky, in 1844; studied law at home and in Philadelphia, but soon turned his attention to writing for the press; in 1847 he sailed to Valparaiso, in Chili, as an attaché to the American Consul there; the ship in which he sailed was wrecked off the Bermudas, but reaching St. Thomas in safety, he continued his journey across Panama. While detained at St. Thomas, the idea of a steamship line from New York to California, by way of Panama, was suggested to him, and he wrote on the subject to the Philadelphia United States Gazette and the New York Courier and Enquirer; this correspondence was transmitted to the Department of State by the Consul, W. G. Moorhead, and thus in about two years the Pacific Mail Steamship Company was organized. Mr Cooke subsequently resided in California; had much to do with the shipping of the Pacific; was the first to announce through a dispatch from the Military Governor of California to Washington, the discovery of gold in the Sacramento valley; after meeting with misfortunes in California, he returned to the east and was associated with the United States Gazette, Sandusky Register and the Ohio State Journal; was a Presidential Elector in 1856; in 1861 became a partner in the house of Jay Cooke & Co.; frequently visited Europe on business, and in 1870 he was appointed the first Governor of the District of Columbia, which office he resigned in 1873. He was a resident of Georgetown for more than fifteen years, and besides building a Mission Church in that city, he gave twenty thousand dollars towards re-building a second Episcopal Church in the same place; while his other munificent gifts for the public benefit have been large and frequent. He was the son of Eleutheros, a distinguished orator and Congressman, and brother of Jay Cooke, the eminent financier.

Cooke, Jay.—He was born in Sandusky, Ohio, August 10, 1831, and was the brother of H. D. Cooke, and son of the member of Congress. After receiving a good English education he went to Philadelphia in 1838; entered the banking house of E. W. Clark & Co. as a clerk; became a partner at the age of twenty-one, and in 1861 established the house of Jay Cooke & Co. Through the influence of his personal friend Salmon P. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury, he was designated by President Lincoln as a suitable person to negotiate for the Government and popularize the National Loans, in which he was eminently successful, and thus accomplished much to help the Union cause during the Rebellion. He became very wealthy, and was noted for his great liberality and superior culture, and when, in 1873, his house was compelled to suspend on account of the panic of that year, the event was considered a national calamity.

Cooke, Joseph P.—He was born in 1730; graduated at Yale College in 1750; was a Delegate from Connecticut to the Continental Congress from 1784 to 1788; and died at Danbury, Connecticut, in 1816.

Cooke, Nicholas.—Born in Providence, Rhode Island, February 3, 1717; was Deputy-Governor of the State from May to October, 1775; and Governor from that date to May, 1778. "He merited and won the approbation of his fellow-citizens, and was honored with the friendship and confidence of Washington." Such is the inscription on his monument. He died in Providence, September 14, 1782.

Cooley, Dennis N.—He was born in New Hampshire, and in 1805 he was appointed from Iowa Commissioner of Indian Affairs, remaining in office only a little more than one year.

Cooley, James.—He was a citizen of Pennsylvania, and in 1826 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to Peru, where he died February 24, 1828.

Coolidge, Carlos.—Born in Windsor, Vermont, in 1792; graduated at Middlebury College in 1811; practiced law in Windsor fifty-two years; was State Attorney for the County from 1831 to 1836; Representative from 1834 to 1837, and from 1839 to 1842; was Speaker in 1836, and during his latter term; Governor of Vermont from 1849 to 1851; and was Senator from 1855 to 1857. Received the degree of LL.D., from Middlebury College in 1849. Died at Windsor, August 15, 1866.

Cooper, David.—He was an early emigrant to Minnesota, and in 1850 he was appointed a Judge of the United States Court for that District.

Cooper, Edmund.—He was born in Franklin, Williams County, Tennessee, September 11, 1821; graduated at Jackson College in 1839; read law and attended lectures at Harvard University, and settled in the practice of the profession in Bedford County; in 1849 he was elected to the Tennessee Legislature; was elected a "Union Delegate" to the State Convention proposed in 1861; was again elected to the State Legislature in 1865, but resigned on being elected a Representative from Tennessee to the Thirty-ninth Congress, taking his seat near the close of the first session, and serving on the Committees on the Murders in South Carolina and on Territories. In November, 1867, he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Cooper, George B.—Born at Long Hill, Morris County, New Jersey, June 6, 1808; received a good common-school education; removed to Michigan in 1830; served in the two Houses of the State Legislature; served two terms as State Treasurer of Michigan; held the position of Postmaster at Jackson for eleven years, which he resigned when chosen Treasurer; and was elected a Representative from Michigan to the Thirty-sixth Congress. His seat, however, was contested by William A. Howard, and before the close of the first session the latter was admitted.

Cooper, Henry.—Was born in Columbia, Tennessee, August 22, 1827; graduated at Jackson College, August 11, 1847; studied law at Shelbyville and admitted to the bar in 1849; elected to the State Legislature in 1853 and 1857; appointed in 1862 Judge of the Seventh Judicial Circuit of Tennessee, but resigned in 1866; was chosen Professor in the Law School at Lebanon, Tennessee, in 1866, and resigned in 1867, when he removed to Nashville; was elected to the State Senate in 1869 and 1870, and elected to the United States Senate for the term ending in 1877, serving on several Committees.

Cooper, James.—He was born in Frederick County, Maryland, May 8, 1810. He commenced his education at the common schools of the county, spent some little time at St. Mary's College, and graduated at Washington College, Pennsylvania. He studied law, and was admitted to the bar in Pennsylvania in 1834; was elected a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania in 1838, and re-elected in 1840; in 1843 he was elected to the State Legislature, and re-elected in 1844, 1846, and 1848, serving in 1847 as Speaker; in 1848 he was appointed Attorney-General of Pennsylvania, and in 1849 was chosen a Senator in Congress for the term of six years. During his service in Congress his health was feeble, so that he could not participate in the debates of the Senate to the extent that he desired, and on his return to Pennsylvania settled in Philadelphia and subsequently in Frederick, Maryland. He afterwards became a Brigadier-General in the army, and died at Columbus, Ohio, March 28, 1863.

Cooper, John.—He was a Delegate from New Jersey to the Continental Congress in 1776.

Cooper, Mark A.—He was born in Georgia, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1839 to 1841, and again from 1842 to 1843.

Cooper, Richard M.—Born in Gloucester County, New Jersey; was a member of the Society of Friends; and was a Representative in Congress from New Jersey from 1829 to 1833. He also served in the Legislature, and was President of the State Bank at Camden. Died March 10, 1844, aged seventy-six years.

Cooper, Thomas.—He was a Representative in Congress from Delaware from 1813 to 1817.

Cooper, Thomas B.—He was born in Coopers-town, Lehigh County, Pennsylvania, December 29, 1823; was educated at Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg, and also at the University of Pennsylvania, where he graduated in 1843; and having adopted the profession of a physician he was successful therein. He was elected a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, for the term ending in 1863; but died at Cooperstown, April 4, 1862, during the second session of the Thirty-seventh Congress.

Cooper, William.—Born in New Jersey; and having removed to Otsego County, New York, became the founder of Cooperstown. He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1795 to 1797, and again from 1799 to 1801. He was the father of the eminent author, James Fenimore Cooper.

Cooper, William B.—He was a native of Delaware; Governor of the State from 1840 to 1844; and died April 27, 1849.

Cooper, W. R.—He was a Representative in Congress from New Jersey from 1839 to 1841.

Corbett, Henry W.—He was born in Westborough, Massachusetts, February 18, 1827. When quite young he removed to Washington County, New York; was educated chiefly at the Cambridge Academy, in that County; when sixteen years of age he removed to New York city, where he remained nearly eight years, engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1850 he shipped a stock of goods to Portland, in Oregon, and removed to that Territory in the following year, where he has since followed the mercantile business. He took an active part in politics, and was identified with the organization of the Republican and Union parties in the State; was a Delegate from Oregon to the Chicago Convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln for the Presidency; and in 1866 he was elected a Senator in Congress from Oregon for the term commencing in 1867 and ending in 1873, serving on the Committees on Commerce, Indian Affairs, and District of Columbia.

Corcoran, William W.—He was born in Georgetown, District of Columbia, December 27, 1798, his father having been an emigrant from Ireland; was bred a merchant, but failed in that business, and became an exchange broker in Washington; formed a partnership with George W. Riggs, in 1840; and, during the war with Mexico, he was selected by his friend, Robert J. Walker, then Secretary of the Treasury, with the assent of President Polk, financier for the Government, and thus was laid the foundation of a large fortune which he subsequently obtained. He became distinguished for his many public benefactions, and was the founder of the "Louise Home," the "Corcoran Art Gallery," and the "Georgetown Cemetery," and made many liberal endowments to educational and benevolent institutions in the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia.

Cortey, Simeon.—Born in Lexington, South Carolina; received an English education, and was apprenticed to a tailor; early took part in politics as an anti-slavery man; was officially connected with one or two religious societies; edited a temperance paper for two years, and was a writer for other journals; was conscripted into the Confederate Army during the Rebellion; was a Delegate to the Reconstruction Constitutional Convention of South Carolina; and was elected a Representative from South Carolina to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committee on the State Department. His unsuccessful opponent for Congress was his commander in the Confederate army.

Cornelison, John M.—He was born in New Jersey, in 1802; prepared himself for the medical profession, and, at the age of twenty-three, began the practice of his profession in Jersey City, at which time he was the only physician in Hudson County. He was in early life sent to the State Legislature, and was, for several years, Judge of the Court of Errors; also Mayor of Bergen before it was consolidated with Jersey City, and was, also, President of the Board of Public Works of the latter place. He died at his home on Bergen Heights, May 24, 1875.

Cornell, Ezekiel.—He was a Delegate from Rhode Island to the Continental Congress from 1780 to 1783.

Cornell, Thomas.—He was born at White Plains, Westchester County, New York, January 27, 1814; received a common-school education; has been engaged in the business of transportation and banking, and, in 1866, he was elected a Representative from New York to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Roads and Canals and Education and Labor.

Corning, Erastus.—Born in Norwich, Connecticut, December 14, 1794. When thirteen years of age he went to Troy, New York, and entered the hardware store of his uncle, Benjamin Smith, the bulk of whose property he subsequently inherited. In 1814 he removed to Albany and continued in the same business, establishing the well-known house, still in existence, of Erastus Corning & Co. His first public position was that of Alderman of the City of Albany; from that he was promoted to Mayor, which office he held for three years. He was also for several years an influential Railroad, Bank, and Canal Company President; for several terms a member of the State Legislature; and was elected a Representative to the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving on the Committee on Naval Affairs; in 1860 he was re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committee on Ways and Means; and was also a member of the Peace Congress of 1861. Re-elected in 1862 to the Thirty-eighth Congress, but resigned on account of his health. In 1833 he was a Regent of the University of New York, and he was a Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention of 1867. Died April 9, 1872.

He was the brother of Thomas, and died at Urbana, April 7, 1872.

Corwin, Thomas.—Born in Bourbon County, Kentucky, July 29, 1794. Rising from humble life, he became distinguished as a lawyer, having come to the bar in 1817; was elected to the Ohio Legislature in 1822, and afterwards a Representative to Congress from the Warren District, in 1831. He continued a member of the House until 1840; was chosen Governor of Ohio in October of that year; and was a Presidential Elector in 1844. He was Governor but two years, Wilson Shannon succeeding him in 1842. The Whigs having a majority in the Legislature of Ohio in 1845, elected him a United States Senator, which office he held till his appointment in the Cabinet, in 1850, as Secretary of the Treasury, under President Fillmore. He was long known in Congress as an advocate of the Whig measures of policy. As a stump speaker and before a jury, his eloquence was singularly effective. In October, 1858, he was elected a Representative in Congress from Ohio, for the term commencing in 1859; and during that year a volume of his Speeches was published. He was Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and of the Special Committee of Thirty-three, in the Thirty-sixth Congress, on the Rebellious States. Re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, but in 1861 was appointed by President Lincoln Minister to Mexico. After his return from Mexico he resided in Washington, where he died December 18, 1865. In 1841 he was a Presidential Elector. He served as a Major in the Mexican War under General Taylor, and was present at the battle of Buena Vista. In 1848 and 1849 he was elected to the Legislature of Indiana; in 1850 elected to the State Senate, serving three years; in 1854 he was commissioned a Brigadier-General of Militia; frequently presided over the Board of School Trustees for his township; was Vice President and President of the Washington and Orange Counties Agricultural Societies; in 1859 he was appointed by the Legislature of Indiana to the important position of Agent for the State, which he resigned, and in 1860 he was elected a Representative from Indiana to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committee on Territories. He was re-elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress, and was a member of the Committee on Territories. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866, and also to the New York Convention of 1868.

Cravens, James H.—He was born in Rockingham County, Virginia, in 1798; in early life removed to Indiana, and settled in Ripley County; held a number of important local offices in the State; and was a Representative in Congress from Indiana, from 1841 to 1843. He was subsequently a candidate of the Free-soil party for the office of Governor, but was unsuccessful; and he served as Colonel of an Indiana regiment during the war for the suppression of the Rebellion.

Crawford, George W.—Born in Columbia County, Georgia, December 22, 1798. He graduated at Princeton in 1820; studied law, and commenced the practice at Augusta in 1822. In 1827 he was elected Attorney-General, and continued in that office until 1831; he was in the State Legislature from 1837 to 1842; and in 1843 was elected to Congress to fill a vacancy. He was elected Governor of the State in 1843, and re-elected in 1845. He was a member of President Taylor's Cabinet as Secretary of War, and subsequently visited Europe, after which time he lived in retirement in Georgia.

Crawford, Joel.—Born in Columbia County, Georgia, June 15, 1783. He was educated by private tutors; became a student of law, and was admitted to practice in 1808. In 1813 he joined the army of General Floyd, and served through the whole campaign as Aid-de-camp to the General. After the war he resumed the practice of his profession; served three years in the State Legislature, and was a Representative in Congress from Georgia from 1817 to 1821. Died April 5, 1858.

Crawford, Martin J.—He was born in Jasper County, Georgia, March 17, 1820; was educated at the Mercer University; is a lawyer by profession, and was a member of the Georgia Legislature from 1845 to 1847. In 1853 he was appointed Judge of the Superior Court for the Chattahoochee Circuit, and was elected a member of the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Congresses, serving in the last on the Committees on Ways and Means and Roads and Canals. He was also elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, still serving on the Committee on Ways and Means. Withdrew in 1861, and joined the great Rebellion of that year as a member of the Rebel Congress, and was a Commissioner to Washington.

Crawford, S. J.—He was Governor of Kansas from 1864 to 1869.

Crawford, Thomas.—Born in New York City, March 23, 1814; early manifested a taste for art, in which he was encouraged by his father, and instructed in drawing, carving, and modeling in clay. In 1834 he went to Italy, and was under the care of Thorwaldsen; after a few years he established his studio in Rome; among the noblest of his works are his statue in bronze of Beethoven, at Boston; his Washington, erected at the Capitol in Richmond; and a bust of Josiah Quincy, placed in Harvard University; in 1839 he designed his "Orpheus," which, with his "Hebe and Ganymede," is in the Athenæum at Boston; "Sappho" and "Vesta," and many religious subjects were executed with great taste. He visited America in 1844, 1849, and 1856. He received from Congress a commission to furnish marble and bronze statuary for the new Capitol at Washington, which resulted in the design of the colossal statue on the pinnacle, "The Genius of America," furnished by Mills, in bronze, and now known as the statue of Freedom or Liberty. He was also commissioned to design a bronze door for the Senate. He suffered from a malignant tumor of the eye which nearly deprived him of sight, and caused him to renounce his art with many works unfinished. He finished sixty works, many of them colossal, and left about fifty sketches in plaster, and other designs. He died in London, England, October 10, 1857.

Crawford, Thomas Hartley.—Born at Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, November 14, 1786. He graduated at Princeton College in 1804; studied law for three years, and was admitted to the bar in 1807; and was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1829 to 1833. During the last year named, he was elected to the State Legislature; in 1836 he was appointed a Commissioner to investigate certain alleged frauds in the purchase of the reservation of land of the Creek Indians; in 1838 he was appointed by President Van Buren Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and took up his residence in Washington, holding that office for seven years; and in 1845 he was appointed by President Polk Judge of the Criminal Court of the District of Columbia, which arduous position he occupied until his death, which took place in Washington, January 27, 1863.

Crawford, William.—He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1760; after studying medicine, emigrated to the United States and settled in Marsh Creek, Adams County, Pennsylvania, where he was the pioneer physician; became interested in politics and was a Representative in Congress from 1809 to 1817; was tendered the appointment of Postmaster of Baltimore by President Madison, but declined it; and he died on his farm in 1823.

He was a member of the American Society of the Cincinnati.

Crawford, William.—Born in Virginia; removed to Alabama in 1810; held a number of Federal and State offices; was Receiver of Moneys for Public Lands; a Commissioner to settle certain claims under a treaty with England, France, and Spain; was elected to the State Senate; United States District Attorney for Alabama; and was Judge of the United States District Court for Alabama. Died at Mobile, April 28, 1849.

Crawford, William H.—Born in Amherst County, Virginia, February 24, 1772, and with his father settled in Georgia in 1783. He received an academical education, and subsequently had the management of Richmond Academy. He studied law and took a high position as a lawyer, and in 1799 was appointed to prepare a Digest of the Laws of Georgia. A conspiracy having been organized to drive him from the bar, he was challenged by a man named Van Allen, whom he killed at the first fire. He served four years in the State Legislature, and was a Senator in Congress from Georgia from 1807 to 1813, and during a part of the Twelfth Congress officiated as President pro tem. of the Senate. President Madison invited him into his Cabinet as Secretary of War, but he declined the honor, accepting, instead, the post of Minister to France, in 1813; on his return, however, at the end of two years, he went into the War Department. In 1817 he was appointed by President Monroe Secretary of the Treasury, where he served with marked ability until 1825, during which year he received a flattering vote for President of the United States. In 1827 he was appointed Judge of the Northern Circuit of Georgia, which office he held until his death, which occurred in Albert County, Georgia, September 15, 1834.

In 1868, he was elected a Representative from Illinois to the Forty-first Congress, serving on the Committee on Agriculture, and was re-elected to the Forty-second Congress, serving on the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Creeley, John T.—He was born in Philadelphia, November 14, 1839; received a classical education; studied law; served through the late Rebellion in the army as an officer of light artillery; was a member of the Councils of Philadelphia for four years; and was elected to the Forty-second Congress, serving on the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Creighton, William.—Born in Berkeley County, Virginia, October 29, 1778; graduated at Dickinson College when quite young; studied law and was admitted to the bar at the age of twenty; and in 1798 he settled in Chillicothe, Ohio, devoting himself to his profession, and holding many positions of public trust. He was the first Secretary of State for Ohio; and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1813 to 1817, and again from 1827 to 1833. Died at Chillicothe, October 8, 1851, having for many years previously declined all public office.

Creighton, William, Jr.—He was a citizen of Ohio; liberally educated, and a lawyer by profession; and he was appointed United States Judge for the District of Ohio.

Creswell, John A. J.—Was born in Port Deposit, Cecil County, Maryland, November 18, 1828; graduated at Dickinson College, Pennsylvania, in 1848; studied law and came to the bar of Maryland in 1850. He was a member of the Maryland House of Delegates in 1861 and 1862. From August, 1862, to April, 1863, he was an Assistant Adjutant-General for Maryland, and was elected a Representative from Maryland to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committees on Commerce and Invalid Pensions. He was also a Delegate to the Baltimore Convention of 1864. In March, 1865, he was chosen a Senator in Congress for the unexpired term of T. H. Hicks, deceased, serving on the Committees on Agriculture and Mines and Mining, and as Chairman of the Committee on the Library. By request of the House of Representatives, he delivered an Eulogy on his friend and colleague Henry Winter Davis, on February 22, 1866. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866, the "Border States' Convention," held in Baltimore in 1867; and the Chicago Convention of 1868. In May, 1868, he was elected Secretary of the United States Senate, but declined. On March 5, 1869, entered the Cabinet of President Grant as Postmaster-General.

Crisfield, John W.—Was born in Kent County, Maryland, November 6, 1808; received his education at Washington College, Chestertown; studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1830; settled in the practice of his profession, in Somerset County; was elected to the Maryland Legislature in 1836; he was a Representative in Congress from Maryland, from 1847 to 1849; in 1850 he was a Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention; in 1861 he was a Delegate to the Peace Congress; and was elected a Representative from Maryland to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committees on Public Lands and on Public Expenditures. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866.

Crist, Henry.—Was born in Virginia in 1764; removed with his father to Pennsylvania during the Revolutionary War; in 1788 he became extensively engaged in the manufacture of salt in Bullitt County, Kentucky; the company was attacked by a party of Indians, and during the bloody conflict he was wounded in the foot, and made his escape by crawling night and day, being four days without food; he was rescued by a workman from the salt licks, but was disabled for a year in consequence of his injuries. He was a member of the Kentucky Legislature in 1795; a State Senator from 1800 to 1804, and a Representative from Kentucky in Congress from 1809 to 1811. He died in Bullitt County in 1844.

Crittenden, John J.—He was born in Woodford County, Kentucky, in September, 1786. When quite young he entered the army, and during the War of 1812 served as Major under General Hopkins, in his expedition, and was Aid-de-camp to Governor Shelby, at the battle of the Thames. After adopting the profession of law, he served a number of years in the State Legislature, and was chosen Speaker of the House; he entered Congress as a member of the Senate from Kentucky, in 1817, serving then but two years. From 1819 to 1835 he continued in the practice of his profession, residing principally at Frankfort, and again occasionally representing his county in the State Legislature. In 1835 he was again elected to the United States Senate, and continued to serve in that body until March, 1841, when he was appointed Attorney-General by President Harrison. In September, 1841, he resigned with the other members of the Cabinet, except Mr. Webster, and retired to private life, from which, however, he was soon called by the Legislature to resume his seat in the United States Senate, in 1842, in the place of Henry Clay, resigned. He was also elected a Senator for another term of six years, from March, 1843; but, in 1848, having received the Whig nomination for Governor of Kentucky, he retired from the Senate, and was elected to that office, which he held until his appointment as Attorney-General by President Fillmore, in July, 1850. He was again elected to the United States Senate in 1855, for the term ending in 1861, and was, when he retired, the oldest member of that body. He was elected in 1860 a Representative from Kentucky to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving, as he had always done in the Senate, on the more important Committees, and a Compromise measure which he originated has passed into history bearing his name. Died at Louisville, Kentucky, July 25, 1863. His life was subsequently published in two volumes by one of his daughters.

Crittenden, Thomas T.—He was born in Shelby County, Kentucky, January 2, 1834; graduated at Centre College in 1855; studied law at Frankfort; adopted the profession of law; was appointed Attorney-General of Missouri in 1864, to fill out an unexpired term, and was elected to the Forty-third Congress from Missouri, serving on the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

to the Forty-second Congress, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of William B. Washburn in 1872; and was re-elected to the Forty-third Congress, serving on several Committees. Died in Fitchburg, December 26, 1874.

Crocker, Samuel L.—Was born in Taunton, Massachusetts, March 31, 1804; graduated at Brown University in 1822; held various municipal offices; and in 1849 was elected a member of the Executive Council of Massachusetts; was devoted to the manufacturing business; and was a Representative from Massachusetts to the Thirty-third Congress.

Crockett, David.—Born in Greene County, Tennessee, August 17, 1786, of Irish descent, his father having fought in the Revolutionary War. He commenced the active duties of life when twelve years old, by turning drover, and, instead of going to school, he chose the fortunes of an adventurer. He served under General Jackson, in some of the Indian wars, as a Colonel, and became, for a time, his fast friend. He had a natural bias for politics, and his smartness and eccentricities made him very popular on the frontiers, and caused him to be elected to the Legislature of Tennessee. He was fond of the woods, and had no equal as a bear-hunter. He was elected to Congress in 1827 from Tennessee, and served until 1831, and then again in 1833, serving until 1835. While in Washington he was always at his post of duty, never forgetting the welfare of his constituents, and he was one of the most popular men in Congress. The most striking features of his disposition and mind were, undoubtedly, of a whimsical character; but behind these there was much to command respect and admiration. He told stories or related his wild adventures with wonderful effect. He was killed at the Alamo, Texas, March 1, 1836. In 1835 he published a "Tour to the North and Down East," and in 1847 appeared a volume about him, entitled "Sketches and Eccentricities."

Curtis, Edward.—Born in Vermont; graduated at Union College, New York, and practiced law in New York city. He took a prominent part in the councils of that city, and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1837 to 1841. He was appointed Collector of New York by President Harrison, and removed by President Polk. He was an intimate friend of Daniel Webster.

Curtis, Samuel R.—Born in Ohio (while his parents were emigrating to the West from Connecticut), February 3, 1807. He graduated at the West Point Academy in 1831, and was appointed a Lieutenant in the United States Infantry, but resigned in 1832. He studied and pursued the profession of law in Ohio; was subsequently an engineer in Ohio and Iowa; from 1837 to 1840 Chief Engineer of the Muskingum Works; during the Mexican War he served as an Adjutant-General in mustering the State troops; he went to Mexico as a Colonel under General Taylor, and acted for a time as Governor of Matamoras, Camargo, Monterey, and Saltillo, performing much important service; on his return from Mexico he practiced law for a time, but was called to Iowa and Missouri to perform important labors as an engineer, in improvements of harbors and the building of railroads; and having finally settled at Keokuk, in Iowa, he was elected from that State a member of the House in the Thirty-fifth Congress. He was also re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the Committee on Military Affairs, and also on the Special Committee of Thirty-three on the Rebellious States. He was also a Delegate to the Peace Congress in 1861. Re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, but resigned in 1861, to serve as a Brigadier and Major-General in the Union army during the Rebellion. He was subsequently appointed a Commissioner to inspect the Union Pacific Railroad. Died at Council Bluffs, Iowa, December 25, 1866.

Cushing, Caleb.—Was born in Salisbury, Essex County, Massachusetts, January 17, 1800. He graduated at Harvard College in 1817, and was subsequently a tutor there of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy; studied law at Cambridge, and settled in Newburyport to practice, having come to the bar in 1822. In 1825 and 1826 he served in the State Legislature, and in 1829 visited Europe for pleasure, publishing on his return, "Reminiscences of Spain," and "Review of the Revolution in France." He also wrote for the North American Review. In 1833 and 1834 he was again elected to the Legislature; and was a Representative in Congress from 1835 to 1843. He was appointed by President Tyler Commissioner and Envoy to China, and as such negotiated an important treaty. In 1846 he was again elected to the Legislature. In 1847 he was chosen Colonel of the Massachusetts Regiment of Volunteers for the Mexican War, and was afterwards appointed a Brigadier-General by President Polk. In 1850 he was for the fifth time elected to the Legislature, and in 1851 was made a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State. When President Pierce came into power, he invited General Cushing into his Cabinet as Attorney-General; and on his return home he was again re-elected to the Legislature of his native State. In office or out of it, he has the reputation of being a hard student, and his success as a lawyer is unquestioned. In 1860 he was elected President of the Charleston Convention to nominate a President. In July, 1866, he was appointed by President Johnson one of three to revise and codify the laws of the United States, under a law of Congress, but resigned in 1865. In 1874 he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to Spain. In 1873 he was nominated for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, but withdrawn.

In England he was considered a leader of the American

Whigs; was on intimate terms with Hancock and Franklin; he was a Commissioner of the Society in London for Propagating the Gospel; and was one of the founders of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He had graduated at Harvard University in 1744, and received the degree of Doctor of Laws from the same in 1785. Died February 28, 1788.

Cushing, William.—He was born in 1733; graduated at Harvard College in 1751; in 1772 he became Judge of the Superior Court of Massachusetts; in 1777 promoted to Chief Judge; and in 1789 he was appointed by President Washington a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, in which position he continued until his death in 1810. In 1796 he was tendered the position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, but declined the promotion. He received from Harvard College the degree of LL.D.

Cushman, John F.—He was a citizen of Mississippi, and in 1859 he was appointed Minister Resident to the Argentine Confederation, remaining there until 1861, when he returned to the United States.

Cushman, John Paine.—He was born in Pomfret, Connecticut, in 1784, and graduated at Yale College, in 1807. He studied law and removed to Troy, New York, where he practiced his profession. He served in Congress from New York from 1817 to 1819, and in 1838 was appointed Judge of the Circuit Court, having previously been Recorder of the city of Troy, and one of the Regents of the State University. Died in Troy, New York, September 16, 1848. He was a man of eminence in his profession, and discharged with ability the various offices with which he was intrusted.

Cushman, Joshua.—He was born in Plymouth, Massachusetts; graduated at Cambridge in 1787; studied divinity; was a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1819 to 1821; and represented Maine in Congress from 1821 to 1825, after its separation from Massachusetts. He was also a State Senator in 1809, 1810, 1819, and 1820, and a member of the Assembly in 1811 and 1834, when he died.

Cushman, Samuel.—Born in 1783; was Judge of the Police Court of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and held several offices of trust in the State; such as Councillor, from 1833 to 1835; County Treasurer, from 1823 to 1828; and Navy Agent at Portsmouth, from 1845 to 1849. He was a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire from 1835 to 1839; and died in Portsmouth, May 20, 1851.

Cuthbert, Alfred.—Born in Savannah, Georgia; he graduated at Princeton College in 1803; and was a Representative in Congress from Georgia from 1814 to 1817; again, from 1821 to 1827; and a Senator of the United States from 1837 to 1843. Died in 1856.

Cuthbert, John A.—He was born in Savannah, Georgia, in 1778; graduated at Princeton College in 1805; and was a Representative in Congress from his native State from 1819 to 1821, and was appointed by the President, in 1822, a Commissioner to treat with the Creek and Cherokee Indians. He participated in the great debate on the Missouri Compromise in 1820, and as late as 1875 he was practicing the profession of law in Mobile, Alabama.

Cutler, Augustus W.—Born in Morristown, New Jersey, in 1829; adopted the profession of law; was a prosecutor for Morris County; took an interest in educational matters, and became President of a local Board of Education; in 1871 he was elected to the State Senate; and in 1874 a Representative from New Jersey to the Forty-fourth Congress; was active in the Temperance cause, and in the rights of his State in her swamp lands.

Cutler, Manasseh.—He was born in Killingly, Connecticut, in 1742, and graduated at Yale College in 1765; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1767; removed to Dedham, Massachusetts, in 1769; studied for the ministry, and was ordained in 1771; and was settled as pastor of a church in Hamilton, Massachusetts, September 11, 1771. He distinguished himself by his attention to several branches of Natural History, particularly by making the first essay toward a scientific description of the plants of New England; and an account of several hundred of which, communicated by him, was published by the American Academy, of which he was a member, and the degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Harvard College. He was one of the first scientific explorers of the White Mountains. In 1787 he organized an expedition for the Northwest Territory; and in 1788, with General Rufus Putnam, commenced a settlement at Marietta, on the Muskingum, Ohio. In 1790 he returned with his family to New England, served a number of years in the Legislature, and was pastor of the church at Hamilton, Massachusetts, until his death. In 1800 he was elected to a seat in Congress, and retained it until 1804, when he declined any further political employment, from its interference with his professional duties. He died July 28, 1823.

Cutler, William P.—Born near Marietta, Ohio, July 12, 1813; was elected to the Ohio Legislature in 1844, 1845, and 1846, officiating as Speaker of the House during the last term; he was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1850; from that period until elected to Congress he was President of the Marietta and Cincinnati Railroad Company; and he was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committees on the Militia and on Invalid Pensions.

Cutting, Francis B.—Was born in New York city in 1805; was liberally educated; in 1825 graduated at Columbia College; adopted the profession of law, and became eminent as a commercial lawyer of New York; in 1836 and 1837 he was a member of the New York Legislature; from 1853 to 1855 was a Representative in Congress from his native State; was leading counsel in almost all important commercial questions in New York from 1840 to 1855. While in Congress he had a personal difficulty with J. C. Breckenridge on political questions. In 1863 he became a "war democrat," and did good service in securing the re-election of President Lincoln. Died in New York city, June 26, 1870.

Cutts, Charles.—Born in Massachusetts in 1769; entered Harvard College in 1786; graduated in 1790; studied law with Judge Pickering; was elected a member of the Legislature in 1804, and then Speaker of the House; was sent to the United States Senate in 1810 from New Hampshire, and served till 1813; and chosen Secretary of the Senate from 1814 to 1825. By appointment, he entered the Senate for a second term in 1813, but resigned in June of that year. He died in Virginia in 1846.

Cutts, James Madison.—He was born in Maine, and the son of Richard Cutts; was a resident for many years of the city of Washington; and in 1857 he was appointed Second Comptroller of the Treasury, and held the office until 1863. His father was the man appointed to the same position, when first organized. He died in Washington.

Cutts, Richard.—Born June 22, 1771, at Cutts

Island, Saco, in the Province or District of Maine, then constituting a part of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and received his early education at Harvard University, at which institution he graduated in 1790, and in the twentieth year of his age. He studied law; was extensively engaged in commerce, and took an active part in politics. He visited Europe, and, on his return, after serving two successive years as a member of the General Court of Massachusetts, he was, at the age of twenty-nine, in 1800 elected a member of the House of Representatives of the United States. He took his seat in the House December 7, 1801, and through six successive Congresses, constantly sustained by the continued confidence of his constituents, he gave a firm support to President Jefferson's administration, and to that of his successor, President Madison, until the close of his first term, March 3, 1813, having patriotically sustained, by his votes, non-importation, non-intercourse, the embargo, and finally war, as measures called for by the honor and interest of the nation, although ruinous to his private fortune. On June 3, of that year, he was appointed Superintendent-General of Military Supplies, an office created by the Act of March 3, 1813, the functions of which were required only during the continuance of the war. The office was accordingly abolished by the Act of March 3, 1817, to provide for the prompt settlement of public accounts. By the same act the office of Second Comptroller of the Treasury was created, to which Mr. Cutts was immediately appointed by President James Monroe, and which he held until 1829; after which he resided in the city of Washington, in the retirement of private life, until his death, April 7, 1845.

Cuyler, Jeremiah.—He was a native of Georgia, and in 1821 he was appointed District Judge of the United States Court for the District of Georgia, residing at Savannah, where he died May 7, 1839.

Daggett, David.—Born in Attleborough, Massachusetts, December 31, 1764; graduated at Yale College in 1783, and was Professor of Law in that institution for many years, and subsequently received the degree of LL.D. from that institution. He was State's Attorney and Mayor of New Haven, and frequently a member of the Legislature, and member of the Council; and also served as a Presidential Elector on several occasions. From 1813 to 1819 he was a Senator in Congress from Connecticut; from 1826 to 1832 he was a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, and was Chief Judge from 1832 to 1834, when he attained the age of seventy years. He died April 12, 1851.

Daily, Samuel G.—He was born in Indiana in 1819; was elected a Delegate from the Territory of Nebraska to the Thirty-seventh Congress, and re-elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress. He was subsequently appointed a Deputy-Collector in New Orleans, where he died September 14, 1865.

Dallas, Alexander J.—Born on the island of Jamaica, June 21, 1759. His father was from Scotland. He received an excellent education at Edinburgh and Westminster, and emigrated to the United States in 1783, and settled at Philadelphia, where he studied law and established himself in practice. He was engaged in literary pursuits; was a frequent contributor to periodicals, and at one time editor of the Columbian Magazine. He prepared a system of law reports, which were published in four volumes. In January, 1791, he was appointed Secretary of Pennsylvania, and held the office until 1801, when he was appointed District Attorney of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania; in October, 1814, was appointed Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and for a time performed the duties of Secretary of War in addition; in September, 1816, he resigned, and resumed the practice of law in Philadelphia; died January 16, 1817. He published "Features of Jay's Treaty," in 1795, and various speeches, reports, and addresses, and left unfinished a "History of Pennsylvania."

Dallas, George Mifflin.—He was born July 10, 1792, in the city of Philadelphia, where he received his early education. He graduated at Princeton College in 1810; commenced the study of law in his father's office in Philadelphia, and was admitted to the bar in 1813. In the same year he accompanied Mr. Gallatin to Russia as his private secretary, when that gentleman was appointed a member of the Commission to negotiate a peace under the mediation of Alexander. During his absence, he visited Russia, France, England, Holland, and the Netherlands. He returned to the United States in 1814, and, after assisting his father for a time in his duties as Secretary of the Treasury, he commenced the practice of his profession at Philadelphia. In 1817 he was appointed the deputy of the Attorney-General of Philadelphia, and soon won a high reputation as a criminal lawyer. He took an active part in politics, and in 1825 he was elected Mayor of Philadelphia, and on the accession of General Jackson, in 1829, he was appointed to the office of District Attorney, the same office which had been held by his father. This post he held until 1831, when a vacancy having occurred in the representation from Pennsylvania in the United States Senate, Mr. Dallas was chosen to fill it. He took an active part in the debates of the stormy session of 1832-33. On the expiration of his term of office in 1833, he declined a re-election, and resumed the practice of his profession. In 1837 he was appointed by President Van Buren Ambassador to Russia, and remained in that country until October, 1839, when he returned home, and once more devoted himself to the practice of law. In 1844 he was elected Vice-President of the United States, and entered upon the duties of his office in March of the following year. His term of office expired in March, 1849, when he was succeeded by Mr. Fillmore. He was appointed by President Pierce, in 1856, to succeed Mr. Buchanan as Minister at the Court of St. James, in which position he was retained by Mr. Buchanan, when he became President. Died in Philadelphia, December 31, 1864.

Dalton, Tristan.—Was born in that portion of Newbury, Massachusetts, now Newburyport, in 1743, and at the early age of seventeen graduated at Harvard University. He studied law as an accomplishment—the fortune which he inherited from his father not requiring him to practice it as a profession—and he took a deep interest in the cultivation of a large landed estate, in what is now the town of West Newbury. Washington, John Adams, Louis Philippe, Talleyrand, and other distinguished guests partook of his hospitalities. As eminent for piety as he was for mental endowments, the Episcopal Church, of which he was a warden, shared in his generous liberality; and he was also noted for the affectionate interest which he took in the welfare of his servants, both black and white. He was a Representative, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and a Senator in the Legislature of Massachusetts; and a Senator of the United States in the First Congress after the adoption of the Federal Constitution. When Washington City was founded, Mr. Dalton invested his entire fortune in lands there, and lost it by the mismanagement of a business agent. At the same time a vessel which was freighted with his furniture and valuable library was lost on her voyage from Newburyport to Washington, and he thus found himself, after having lived sixty years in affluence, pen-niless. Several offices of profit and honor were immediately tendered him by the government, and he accepted the Surveyorship of Boston. He died in Boston, in June, 1817, and his remains were taken to Newburyport, where they were interred in the burial-ground of St. Paul's Church.

Daly, Charles P.—Born of Irish parentage in New York city, October 31, 1816; as a boy, he went to sea, and studied mechanics; then studied law, and came to the bar in 1839; in 1843 he was elected to the State Legislature; in 1844 he was appointed a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas; in 1857 he was made first Judge of the same; and more recently Chief Justice of the same court, having taken part in some highly important trials. In 1851 he visited Europe, and received attention from various legal dignitaries; and in 1855 he published an elaborate "Historical Sketch of the Judicial Tribunals of New York from 1623 to 1846." In 1860 he received from Columbia College the degree of Doctor of Laws; in 1867 attended, as a Delegate, the State Constitutional Convention of New York; served as an officer in various charitable and literary Societies; and as a writer, has produced many papers, on Naturalization, Banking Systems, Dispensaries, Useful Arts, the Drama, Arctic Explorations, and on the lives of distinguished citizens of New York.

Danrell, William S.—Born in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, November 20, 1809; never had the privilege of even a common-school education; was by trade a printer; and was elected a Representative from Massachusetts to the Thirty-fourth Congress, where he served on the Committee on Engraving, and to the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving on the Committee on Roads and Canals. Died at Boston, May 17, 1860.

Dana, Amasa.—He was a member of the New York Assembly in 1828 and 1829, and a Representative in Congress from that State from 1839 to 1841, and again from 1843 to 1845.

Dana, Charles Anderson.—Born in Hinsdale, New Hampshire, August 8, 1819; studied two years at Harvard University, but did not graduate on account of impaired eyesight. He edited the Harbinger, was a contributor to the Boston Chronotype; was connected with the New York Tribune from 1847 to 1858; and subsequently editor of the New York Sun; also edited the "Household Book of Poetry" in 1858, and was one of the editors of "Appleton's Cyclopaedia." He was Assistant Secretary of War in 1863 and 1864.

Dana, Francis.—He was born in 1743; graduated at Harvard College in 1762; and, after studying law, resided a year in England. He was Clerk of the Superior and Inferior Courts of that county from 1833 to 1851, and was a Representative from Indiana in the Thirty-second, Thirty-third, and Thirty-fifth Congresses, and was a member of the Committee on Public Lands, and also served on the Committee to Examine into the accounts of the late Clerk of the House, William Cullom. He was also re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress serving as a member of the Committee on Public Lands. Died at Terre Haute, Indiana, January 18, 1866.

Davis, John J.—He was born in Clarksburg, West Virginia, May 1, 1835; educated at the Northwestern Virginia Academy; studied law; was admitted to the bar, and has since practiced at Clarksburg; was a member of the State Legislature of Virginia in 1861, and of West Virginia in 1870; was a Presidential Elector in 1864; was one of the Delegates from the State at large to the National Democratic Convention at New York in 1868; elected to the Forty-second Congress, and re-elected to the Forty-third Congress, serving on several Committees.

Davis, John W.—He was born in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, in 1799; after completing his medical studies in Baltimore, in 1821, at the Medical College, he emigrated in 1823 to Indiana. He served first, in 1829, as a Surrogate, and then in the Legislature of that State, and was Speaker of the lower branch, both before and after his services in Congress, namely, in 1832 and 1841; and was also Commissioner to make a treaty with the Indians. He was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1835 to 1837, from 1839 to 1841, and again from 1843 to 1847, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands and was Speaker of the House of Representatives during the Twenty-ninth Congress. He was in 1848 appointed Minister to China, and subsequently held the position of Governor of Oregon Territory. He was also President of the Baltimore Convention which nominated Franklin Pierce for President, in 1852. Died at Carlisle, Indiana, August 22, 1859.

Davis, Joseph J.—Born in Franklin County,

North Carolina, in 1840; received a good education and adopted the profession of law; was elected to the State Legislature in 1866; never held any other public position before his nomination for Congress, and was elected in 1874 a Representative from North Carolina to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Davis, Noah.—He was born in Haverhill, New Hampshire, September 10, 1818; received a liberal education; studied law, came to the bar in 1841, and was for many years a successful practitioner in Albion, New York, in which place his father had settled in 1825; was a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State from 1857 to 1868; and elected a Representative from New York to the Forty-first Congress, serving on the Committees on the Judiciary, and Coinage, Weights and Measures. Re-elected to the Forty-second Congress, but resigned to become United States Attorney for the District of New York; and in 1873 he was again elected Judge of the Supreme Court. He presided over the court where Edward Stokes and William M. Tweed were tried and convicted, the first for murder and the second for malfeasance in office. In a letter which he addressed to the editor he spoke of his election to Congress as the chief misfortune of his life.

Davis, Reuben.—Born in Tennessee, January 18, 1813. He was self-educated, owing to the limited means of his father. He studied and practiced medicine for a few years, and afterwards pursued the law as a profession. In 1835 he was chosen District Attorney for the Sixth Judicial District of Mississippi. In 1837 he was re-elected to the same office; served four months, in 1842, on the bench of the High Court of Errors and Appeals; was in the Mexican War as Colonel Commandant of the Mississippi Rifles, but resigned on account of sickness, and was in no battle; was elected to the lower branch of the State Legislature from 1855 to 1857; and was elected a member of the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving on the Committees on Post Offices and Post Roads and Expenditures in the Navy Department. Re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, and was a member of the Special Committee of Thirty-three. Joined the Rebellion in 1861.

Dary, John M.—Born in Ottawa, Ontario, June 29, 1835; removed with his parents, when a child, to Monroe County, New York; received a common-school and academical education; studied law, and on coming to the bar in Rochester he was elected District Attorney for Monroe County for three years; in 1872 he was appointed Collector of Customs for the Port of Genesee, which he held until 1874, when he was elected a Representative from New York to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Dawes, Henry L.—Born in Cummington, Hampshire County, Massachusetts, October 30, 1816. He graduated at Yale College in 1839, and adopted the profession of law. He taught school for a time, and edited a paper called the Greenfield Gazette. He was a member of the Legislature of Massachusetts during the years 1848, 1849, and 1852; of the State Senate in 1850, and also of the State Constitutional Convention in 1853. He was also District Attorney for the Western District of his native State, from 1853 until elected to the Thirty-fifth Congress, wherein he served as a member of the Committee on Revolutionary Claims; was re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the Committee on Elections; re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Elections; and was re-elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving again as Chairman of the Committee on Elections. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, continuing at the head of the Committee on Elections, and serving on that on Weights and Measures. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866, and re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving again at the head of the Committee on Elections; also re-elected to the Forty-first, Forty-second, and Forty-third Congresses, serving on the most important Committees; and was elected a Senator in Congress for the term commencing in 1875, and ending in 1881.

Dawson, John.—He graduated at Harvard University in 1782; was a Presidential Elector in 1793; was elected a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1797 to 1814; served in one of the State Conventions of Virginia, and in the General Assembly; was a member of the Executive Council of Virginia; rendered service in the War of 1812, as Aid to the Commanding General, on the Lakes; and was appointed bearer of dispatches to France, in 1801, by President Adams. He died in Washington City, March 30, 1814, aged fifty two years.

Dawson, John B.—He was born at Nashville, Tennessee, in 1800, and was a Representative in Congress from Louisiana from 1841 to the time of his death, which occurred at St. Francisville, Louisiana, June 26, 1845. He had repeatedly served in the Legislature of Louisiana; was a Militia General of the State; and was Judge of the Parish Court in which he resided before his election to Congress.

Dawson, John L.—He was born in Uniontown, Fayette County, Pennsylvania, February 7, 1813; was educated at Washington College; adopted the profession of law; was appointed by President Polk, in 1845, United States Attorney for the Western District of Pennsylvania; was elected a Representative from Pennsylvania to the Thirty-second and Thirty-third Congresses, serving during the last term as Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture; and in 1862 was re-elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress, and was a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and also of the Committee on Public Lands. He was the author of the Homestead Bill which passed in 1854; and a Delegate to the Baltimore Conventions of 1844, 1848, and 1860, and to the Cincinnati Convention of 1856, when, on the part of Pennsylvania, he delivered the speech acknowledging the nomination of Mr. Buchanan. He was appointed Governor of Kansas by President Pierce, in 1855, but declined the appointment; re-elected in 1864 to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Rules and Foreign Affairs; was a Delegate to the New York Convention of 1868. Died in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, September 18, 1870.

Dawson, William C.—Born in Greene County, Georgia, January 4, 1798, and died May 5, 1856. He graduated at Franklin College in 1816; studied law at home and at Litchfield, Connecticut; and having been admitted to the bar, settled at Greensborough in 1818, where he was eminently successful as a jury lawyer. He was for twelve years Clerk of the House of Representatives of Georgia, and several times Senator and Representative in the Legislature. He was a Representative in Congress from Georgia from 1837 to 1843; and in 1845 he was appointed Judge of the Ockmulgee Circuit; and from 1849 to 1855 he was a Senator of the United States, where he served on important Committees, and spoke on many questions of national interest, and commanded a wide influence.

Dawson, William J.—A Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1793 to 1795.

Day, Rowland.—He was a member of the New York Assembly in 1816 and 1817, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1823 to 1825, and again from 1833 to 1835.

Day, Thomas.—Born at New Preston, Connecticut, in 1777; graduated at Yale College in 1797; was tutor in Williams College in 1798; studied law, and settled in Hartford in 1799; he was Assistant Secretary of State in 1809, and Secretary in 1810; held that office until 1835; was Associate Judge of the County Court from 1815 to 1825, when he was made Chief Judge of that court, and held that office till 1833; was Judge of the City Court of Hartford from 1818 to 1831; was one of the Committee to prepare the Statutes of 1808, and of 1821 and 1824; reported the decisions of the Court of Errors, from 1805 to 1853, published in twenty volumes; was an original member of the Connecticut Historical Society, and President of it from 1839 till his death; also President of the Wadsworth Athenæum and a liberal contributor. Died at Hartford, March 1, 1855.

Day, Timothy C.—He was born in Ohio, and was elected a Representative from that State to the Thirty-fourth Congress.

Dayan, Charles.—Born at Amsterdam, New York, July 16, 1792; until fourteen years of age he worked in a mill; at that time he began to study, and was successful; taught school for four winters at a monthly price of two dollars per month; studied law, and was a successful practitioner for many years. He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1831 to 1833; a State Senator in 1827 and 1828; acting Lieutenant-Governor in 1829; and a member of the Assembly in 1835 and 1836. He was also District Attorney for Lewis County for five years.

Dayton, Aaron O.—He was born in New Jersey, and in 1838 he was appointed the Fourth Auditor of the Treasury Department, and held the office until 1859.

Dayton, Elias.—He was an officer of the Revolution, and in 1778 was appointed by Congress Colonel of the New Jersey Regiment, and at the close of the war was promoted to Brigadier-General, and held the office of Major-General of Militia. He was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1787 to 1788. He died at Elizabethtown, July, 1807, aged seventy-one years.

Dayton, Jonathan.—A native of New Jersey; graduated at Princeton College in 1776; was a member of the Convention, in 1787, which formed the Constitution, and signed that instrument; was a Representative in Congress from 1791 to 1799; Speaker of the House of Representatives from 1795 to 1797; and was a Senator of the United States from New Jersey from 1799 to 1805. He was a distinguished statesman, and died at Elizabethtown, New Jersey, October 9, 1824, aged about sixty-eight years.

Dayton, Nathan.—He was born in Western New York in 1796; educated for the bar and became prominent and influential; was for many years a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State; and died at Lockport, April 26, 1859.

Dayton, William L.—Born in Somerset County, New Jersey, February 17, 1807; graduated at Princeton College in 1825; was a lawyer by profession, having come to the bar in 1830; was a member of the State Senate of New Jersey in 1837; was appointed one of the Justices of the Superior Court of the State, February 28, 1838, and resigned said office in 1841, and resumed the practice of law; was a Senator in Congress from 1842 to 1851. In 1856 he was the Republican Candidate for Vice-President on the ticket with J. C. Fremont. In March, 1857, was appointed Attorney-General of New Jersey, which office he held until 1861, when he was appointed by President Lincoln Minister to France. He was also a Regent of the Smithsonian Institution. Died in Paris, December 2, 1864.

Deady, Matthew P.—He was born near Easton, Talbot County, Maryland, May 12, 1824; during his minority he lived in Maryland, Virginia, and Ohio; studied law, and came to the bar in the latter State in 1847; in 1849 he removed to Oregon, where he engaged in teaching and practiced his profession; in 1850 he was elected to the Lower House of the Legislature of the Territory, and in 1851 to the Upper House, serving as President; in 1853 he was appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the Territory, serving until the State was established, when he was appointed Judge of the United States District Court for Oregon, which position he held as late as 1875. In 1857 he was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention which formed the State Constitution, and was President of that body; in 1862 and 1864, by authority of the Legislature, he prepared the Codes of Criminal and Civil Procedure, and the Penal Code of the State; in 1865 he published the General Laws of the State, and assisted in the same work in 1874.

Dean, Ezra.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from Ohio from 1841 to 1845.

Dean, Gilbert.—Was born in Pleasant Valley, Dutchess County, New York. In May, 1837, he entered the Amenia Seminary, and in September of the same year he went to Yale College, and graduated in 1841. He studied law in Pine Plains, and commenced practice in Poughkeepsie in 1844, attaining eminence in his profession; and was elected a Representative in Congress from New York from 1851 to 1853. Was re-elected for a second term, but resigned in 1855 to accept the office of Judge of the Supreme Court of the State. In 1862 he was elected to the Assembly; and died at Poughkeepsie, in 1870.

Dean, Josiah.—He was born in Baynham, Massachusetts, March 16, 1748; was a Presidential Elector in 1805; was a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1807 to 1809. From 1804 to 1807 he was a State Senator; and, in 1810 and 1811, was a member of the State Legislature. Died October 14, 1818.

Dean, Sidney.—He was born in Glastenbury, Hartford County, Connecticut, November 16, 1818. He received only a common-school education; entered upon active life as a manufacturer; but subsequently became a clergyman. He served one year in the Legislature of Connecticut; and was elected a Representative in Congress from that State in 1853, and re-elected in 1857, officiating, during his first term, as Chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures, and as a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia. In 1860 he settled in Rhode Island as a clergyman.

Deane, Silas.—Born at Groton, Connecticut, December 24, 1737; graduated at Yale College, 1758; settled as a merchant in Wethersfield, Connecticut, and was a Delegate to the Congress of 1774; in 1775 fitted out a large naval force for the Marine Committee; in June, 1776, was commercial and political Agent for the Committee of Secret Correspondence, to operate in France, Holland, and Great Britain, to procure clothing, arms, and munitions of war for twenty-five thousand men and one hundred field-pieces; was chosen by Congress Ambassador to France, with Franklin and Jefferson, but, the latter declining, Arthur Lee took his place; succeeded in negotiating treaties with France, which were signed at Paris February 6, 1778. He was given full credit for these important services, and it was through him that Lafayette was secured to our country's service. He was, however, recalled November 21, 1777, on account of dissatisfaction in Congress at not being able to meet the engagements which he had made with foreign officers. This recall was accompanied by a request to obtain information of the state of affairs in Europe, and report immediately to Congress. He received this dispatch March 4, 1778, and arrived at home July 10, 1778. He soon saw that he was regarded with disfavor by Congress, and it was nearly six weeks before any notice was taken of his attendance. He was then required to give such a report of his mission as obliged his return to France, which much exasperated him, and caused a controversy with influential members. He was discharged from further attendance on Congress August 6, 1779, and a person appointed to audit his accounts. He reached France in 1780, and met with much delay on the part of the person appointed to settle his accounts. He published letters charging the French Cabinet with intrigue, and, becoming obnoxious to them, withdrew to the Netherlands, impoverished almost to penury. Impoverished and exasperated, he became estranged from his country, and went to England. Dr. Franklin testified to his probity and honesty, but the enmity of Lee prevailed against him in Congress, and was the cause of his ruin. In 1842 his claims were adjusted by Congress, and a large sum was paid over to his heirs. His diplomatic correspondence, his "Narrative," "An Address to the Free and Independent Citizens of the United States," printed in Hartford and London, and a volume entitled "Paris Papers, or Deane's Late Intercepted Letters to His Brother and other Friends," published in New York—all tend to exonerate his conduct, and satisfy the reader of the present day that he was a man of eminent ability and misrepresented. He died in England, at Deal, August 23, 1789.

Dearborn, Henry.—Was a native of New Hampshire, and settled in the practice of physic at Portsmouth. He was a Captain in Stark's regiment at the battle of Bunker Hill; he accompanied Arnold in the expedition through the wilderness of Maine to Quebec; he was captured by the British, and put into close confinement, but in May, 1776, was permitted to return on parole; in March, 1777, he was exchanged; he served as a Major in the army under Gates, at the capture of Burgoyne. He distinguished himself at the battle of Monmouth by a gallant charge on the enemy. Dearborn being sent to ask for further orders, Washington inquired, by way of commendation, "What troops are those?" "Full-blooded Yankees from New Hampshire, sir," was the reply. In 1779 he accompanied Sullivan in his expedition against the Indians; in 1780 he was with the army in New Jersey; in 1781 he was at Yorktown, at the surrender of Cornwallis; in 1789 Washington appointed him Marshal of the District of Maine. He was elected a member of Congress from Massachusetts from 1793 to 1797. In 1801 he was appointed Secretary of War, and held the office till 1809, when he was appointed to the office of Collector of Boston. In 1812 he received a commission as senior Major-General in the Army of the United States. In the spring of 1813 he captured York, in Upper Canada, and Fort George, at the mouth of the Niagara. He was recalled by President Madison in July. He was ordered to assume the command of the military district of New York city. In 1822 he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to Portugal; two years after, he returned to America at his own request. He died in 1829, aged seventy-eight years.

Dearborn, Henry A. S.—Born in 1783, in Exeter, New Hampshire; was educated at William and Mary College, Virginia, and commenced the study of law in Washington, while his father was Secretary of War under Jefferson. He finished his studies at Salem, Massachusetts, and commenced to practice in that city. He removed to Portland, and superintended the erection of the forts in the harbor. He was appointed Collector of Boston by President Madison (having been previously made Deputy Collector by his father when Collector), as an inducement for his father to accept the command of the army, and he held the office until removed by General Jackson in 1829. In 1812 he was Brigadier of Militia, and had the command of the troops in Boston harbor. In 1821 was a member of the Convention for revising the Constitution of Massachusetts. In 1829 was a Representative in the Legislature from Roxbury; and the same year chosen Executive Councilor, and the following year a State Senator. From 1831 to 1833 he was a Representative in Congress. He was soon appointed Adjutant-General of Massachusetts, and continued in that office till 1843, when he was removed for lending some of the State arms during the Dorr Rebellion in Rhode Island. In 1847 was chosen Mayor of Roxbury, which office he held until his death. While in the Custom-house in Boston he wrote and published three volumes on the "Commerce of the Black Sea." He also wrote a biography of Commodore Bainbridge, and one of his father; a book on Architecture, and a Life of Christ. He died in Portland, Maine, July 29, 1851.

Deberry, Edmund.—Born in Montgomery County, North Carolina, August 14, 1787. He was educated at the ordinary schools of the county, and having entered public life, in 1806, as a member of the State Legislature, he continued to serve there, with occasional intermissions, until 1828; and was a Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1829 to 1831, from 1833 to 1845, and again from 1849 to 1851. Died in his native county in 1859.

De Bolt, Resin A.—Born in Fairfield County, Ohio, January 20, 1828; received a common-school education and learned the trade of a tanner; read law, went to the bar in 1854, and removed to Missouri in 1858; was for two years a Commissioner of Public Schools; entered the Volunteer Army as a Captain, and having been captured at Shiloh, spent more than a year in a Southern prison; on being released he resigned his commission and resumed his profession; re-entered the army in 1864, and saw some service as a Major; was elected Circuit Judge, and continued in the office until elected a Representative from Missouri to the Forty-fourth Congress.

De Bow, James D. B.—Born in Charleston, South Carolina, July 10, 1820; graduated at Charleston College in 1843; was previously employed for seven years in a mercantile house, and afterwards studied law, and was admitted to the bar in Charleston in 1844; but became editor of the Southern Quarterly Review; an article by him upon "Oregon and the Oregon Question" attracted much attention and occasioned a debate in the French Chamber of Deputies. In 1845 he removed to New Orleans and established De Bow's Commercial Review; was Professor of Political Economy and Commercial Statistics in the University of Louisiana in 1848; and was for three years the head of the Census Bureau of Louisiana; in 1853 was appointed Superintendent of the United States Census; was President of the Commercial Convention at Knoxville in 1857; he contributed several articles to the "Encyclopedia Britannica;" was one of the founders of the Louisiana Historical Society, now the Academy of Science. He discontinued the publication of the Review during the civil war; and resumed it again in New York, and afterward at Nashville. He was the author of "Encyclopedia of the Trade and Commerce of the United States," and "The Southern States, their Agriculture, Commerce, etc.," and "Industrial Resources of the Southwest," and "Compendium of the Seventh United States Census." Died in Elizabeth, New Jersey, February 27, 1867.

Defrees, John D.—He was born in Sparta, Tennessee, November 10, 1810; after receiving a year's schooling in a log school-house, he began at the age of thirteen to learn the business of printing; read law with Thomas Corwin in Ohio; settled at South Bend, Indiana, in 1831; served in the Legislature of that State for eight years; was for many years the owner and editor of the Indiana State Journal, and in 1861 he was appointed by President Lincoln, Superintendent of Public Printing. His younger brother, Joseph H. Defrees, was a Representative in Congress.

Defrees, Joseph H.—He was born in Carthage, White County, Tennessee, May 13, 1812; received a good common-school education; spent his early days engaged in the printing business, but subsequently turned his attention to merchandizing in Indiana; in 1836 he was elected Sheriff of Elkhart County, and re-elected in 1838; in 1849 he was elected to the Indiana Legislature; in 1850 to the State Senate; and in 1864 he was chosen a Representative from Indiana to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Banking and Currency, and Roads and Canals.

Degeuer, Edward.—He was born in Brunswick, Germany, October 20, 1809; received an academic education in England and Germany; was member of a legislative body in Anhalt-Dessau, and a member of the first German parliament in Frankfurt; came to the United States in 1850, and settled in Sisterdale, Texas, as a farmer; was court-martialed and imprisoned by the Confederates for his devotion to the Union cause; after his release he remained in San Antonio and engaged in mercantile pursuits; was a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1866, in which he favored universal suffrage; was again a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1868; and was elected to the Forty-first Congress, serving on several Committees.

DeGraft, John I.—He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1827 to 1829, and again from 1837 to 1839.

Deitz, William.—He was born in Scholarie County, New York, and was a member of the New York Assembly in 1814 and 1815; a Representative in Congress from that State from 1825 to 1827; and a State Senator from 1830 to 1833.

De Jarnette, Daniel C.—Born in Caroline County, Virginia, in 1822; received a liberal education; adopted the occupation of a farmer; served many years in the Legislature of Virginia; and was elected a Representative from that State to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the Committee on Revolutionary Claims. Re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committee on the District of Columbia. Withdrew in 1861.

Delahay, Mark W.—He was an early emigrant to Kansas, and was appointed United States Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Kansas.

Delano, Charles. Born in Braintree, Massachusetts, in 1820; graduated at Amherst College in 1840; studied law, and came to the bar in 1842; in 1850 he was appointed Treasurer of Hampshire County; and he was elected a Representative from Massachusetts to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions. Re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress.

Delano, Columbus.—He was born in Shoreham, Vermont, in 1809; removed to Mount Vernon, Ohio, in 1817; was admitted to the bar in 1831, and became eminently successful, both as a criminal prosecutor and an advocate. In 1844 he was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Twenty-ninth Congress, and served on the Committee on Invalid Pensions. In 1847 he was a candidate for Governor, but lacked two votes of a nomination. In 1860 he was a Delegate to the Chicago Convention. In 1861 he was appointed Commissary-General of Ohio, and filled the office with great success until the general government assumed the subsistence of all State troops. In 1862 he was a candidate for United States Senator, but again lacked two votes of nomination. In 1863 he was elected to the House of Representatives of Ohio, and was a prominent member of that body, taking a leading part in shaping the important legislation of that session. In 1864 he was a member of the Baltimore Convention, and Chairman of the Ohio Delegation, zealously supporting President Lincoln and Andrew Johnson. He was re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Claims. Having relinquished the practice of his profession, he became extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits, and the business of banking. Dix, John A.—Born in Boscawen, New Hampshire, July 24, 1798. He commenced his education by attending the academies at Salisbury and Exeter; spent one year in a French College at Montreal; and, in 1812, was appointed a cadet in the army, but, instead of going to West Point, preferred to join the army on the frontier as an Ensign; and in 1813 he was Acting-Adjutant of an independent battalion. In 1819 he was Aid-de-Camp to Major-General Brown, but devoted his leisure to the study of law; from that time until 1828, he visited Cuba and traveled in Europe for his health, when he settled at Coopers-town as a lawyer. In 1831 he was Adjutant-General under Governor Throop; in 1833 he was appointed Secretary of State of New York, and was a Regent of the State University; in 1841 he was elected to the Assembly from Albany; and after making another visit abroad, was elected to the United States Senate, where he served from 1845 to 1849. In 1820 he received from Brown University the Degree of Master of Arts, and in 1845, from Geneva College, the Degree of Doctor of Laws. In 1852 he published a book entitled "A Winter in Madeira." In 1860 he was appointed by President Buchanan, Postmaster of New York; and in January, 1861, was appointed by Mr. Buchanan Secretary of the Treasury. He served in 1861 and 1862 as a Major-General of Volunteers, and was appointed to the same position in the regular army. On the organization of the Pacific Railroad Company he was elected its President. In 1866 he was a Delegate to the "National Union Convention," held in Philadelphia; was appointed by President Johnson Minister to the Netherlands, but declined; a few weeks later was appointed Naval Officer for the port of New York, from which position he was soon transferred to France as Minister Plenipotentiary. He was also Governor of New York from 1873 to 1875.

Dixon, Archibald.—Was born in Caswell County, North Carolina, April 2, 1802, and removed with his father to Henderson County, Kentucky, in 1805. He received only a plain English education at the County schools, but made good use of his advantages, and at the age of twenty entered upon the study of law, and acquired considerable reputation as a lawyer. In 1830 he was a Representative in the Legislature, and in 1836 in the State Senate, and again in the Lower House in 1841. In 1843 was elected Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky. In 1849 was a member of the Constitutional Convention for reforming State laws, and was a member of the United States Senate from 1852 to 1855, having been elected to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of his friend, Henry Clay, and serving as a leading member of the Committee on Territories.

Dixon, James.—He was born in Enfield, Connecticut, August 5, 1814; graduated at Williams College, Massachusetts, in 1834; adopted the profession of law; was a member of the House in the Legislature of Connecticut in 1837, 1838, and 1844, and of the State Senate in 1849 and 1854; was a Representative in Congress from Connecticut from 1845 to 1849; was elected a Senator in Congress for six years from 1857; was re-elected in 1863 for the term ending in 1869, serving on the Committee on Manufactures and various other Committees, and as Chairman of the Committee on Contingent Expenses of the Senate, of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. He was also a member of the National Committee appointed to accompany the remains of President Lincoln to Illinois. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866. Died at Hartford, March 27, 1873.

Dixon, Joseph.—He was born in Greene County, North Carolina; educated at the private and public schools of that county; resided on a farm, and for three or four years engaged in mercantile pursuits; was a magistrate, and Judge of the County Court; was a member of the State Legislature in 1868 and 1869; and elected to the Forty-first Congress, serving on several Committees.

Dixon, Joseph Henry.—A Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1799 to 1801.

Dixon, Luther C.—He was an early emigrant to the Territory of Wisconsin, and was appointed a Justice of the United States Court for the Territory of Wisconsin.

Dixon, Nathan F.—Born at Plainfield, Connecticut, in 1774; graduated at Brown University in 1799; studied law, and established himself in Rhode Island in 1802 to practice his profession. In 1813 he was elected a member of the General Assembly of that State, and continued to serve in that capacity for seventeen years. From 1829 to 1842 he was a Senator of the United States. He died at Washington, District of Columbia, January 29, 1842. His son, bearing the same name, was also in Congress.

Dixon, Nathan F.—Born in Westerly, Rhode Island, May 1, 1812; fitted for college at Plainfield Academy, in Connecticut, and graduated at Brown University in 1833. He attended the Law Schools at

New Haven and Cambridge, and was admitted to the bar in New London in 1837, and engaged in the practice of his profession in Connecticut and Rhode Island. He was a member of the General Assembly of Rhode Island from 1840 to 1849; was a Presidential Elector in 1844; and was elected a Representative from Rhode Island to the Thirty-first Congress. He was again elected to the General Assembly of his State in 1851, and with the exception of two years, held the office until 1859. In 1863 he was re-elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Commerce; and was also re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress. His father, bearing the same name, was a Senator in Congress. In the Thirty-ninth Congress he served on the Committees on Commerce and Expenditures on the Public Buildings. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866, and was re-elected to the Fortieth Congress. Re-elected to the Forty-first Congress, and made Chairman of the Committees on Commerce and Private Land Claims.

Doane, William.—He was born in Maine, and having removed to Ohio, was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1839 to 1843.

Dobbin, James C.—He was born in 1814; graduated at the University of North Carolina in 1832. He was a lawyer by profession, and was elected a Representative in Congress from his native State in 1845, and declined a re-election. He served in the State Legislature in 1848 and 1850, and during the last session officiated as Speaker; and in 1853 was a Presidential Elector. His eloquence at the bar and in the legislative hall is said to have been of the most winning character, and his urbane manners and amiable disposition made him a general favorite. He was Secretary of the Navy during the whole of President Pierce's administration, and he died at Fayetteville, North Carolina, August 4, 1857.

Dobbins, Samuel A.—He was born in Burlington County, New Jersey, April 14, 1814; educated in select schools; engaged in farming; was High Sheriff of Burlington County from 1854 until 1857; a member of the State Legislature from 1859 to 1863; and was elected to the Forty-third Congress, and re-elected to the Forty-fourth Congress, serving on the Committee on Patents.

Dobbs, Arthur.—Born in Ireland in 1684; was a man of letters; had been a member of the Irish Parliament; and was distinguished for his attempts to discover the North-west passage; adopted conciliatory measures towards the Indian tribes; but his administration was a continual contest between the loyalists and the colonists. He was the author of "An Account of the Countries Adjoining Hudson's Bay," published in London in 1748; "Trade and Improvement of Ireland," Dublin, 1739; "Captain Middleton's Defence," 1744. He emigrated to North Carolina, and was chosen Governor, November 1, 1754, serving till his death. Died in Town Creek, North Carolina, March 28, 1765.

Dockery, Alfred.—He was a native of North Carolina, and a Representative in Congress from that State from 1845 to 1847, and again from 1851 to 1853; was a Delegate to the Chicago Convention of 1868. He was the father of O. H. Dockery.

Dockery, Oliver H.—Born in Richmond County, North Carolina, August 12, 1830, and is the son of Alfred Dockery; graduated at the University of North Carolina in 1848; studied law, but became a farmer by occupation; was elected to the State Legislature in 1858 and 1859; was a Presidential Elector in 1860; and in 1868 he was elected a Representative from North Carolina to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committee on Revolutionary Claims; re-elected to the Forty-first Congress, serving on the Committee on Claims, and as Chairman of that on Freedmen's Affairs.

Dodd, Edward.—Born in Salem, Washington County, New York, in 1805; was bred a merchant; chosen County Clerk of the County of Washington for three terms of three years each, commencing January 1, 1835; was a member of the Constitutional Convention of New York in 1846; and a Representative in Congress from that State in 1855, serving on the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Doddridge, Philip.—Born in Brooke County Virginia, in 1772; in his youth worked on a farm on the Ohio River, but was sent to school at the age of sixteen. After a voyage down the Mississippi on a flat-boat, he studied law, and gained a brilliant local reputation; was Delegate from Brooke County to the Legislature of Virginia in 1815, and was a member for some years. In the Constitutional Convention of 1829 and 1830 he was acknowledged leader of the party in favor of the white basis of representation. His success in parliamentary conflicts was due to his close reasoning, thorough knowledge of the subject, great energy of manner, and a wonderful command of language. He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1829 to 1833; resided in Washington, and was engaged in codifying the laws of the District of Columbia. He died in Washington, November 19, 1832.

Dodds, Ozro J.—He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, March 23, 1840; received a collegiate education in Cincinnati; he raised a company of students at Oxford, called the "University Rifles," which was attached to the Twentieth Ohio Volunteers, and served through the three months' service under General McClellan; returning home, he raised another company, attached to the Eighty-first Ohio Volunteers, and served until 1863, when he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the First Alabama Cavalry; after the war he studied law and was admitted to practice; was elected to the Legislature of Ohio in 1869; and elected to the Forty-second Congress, serving on the Committee on Civil Service.

Dodge, Augustus C.—He was born in St. Genevieve, Missouri, January 2, 1812, and was a Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Iowa from 1841 to 1847; a Presidential Elector for the State of Iowa in 1848; a Senator in Congress from the State of Iowa from 1848 to 1855; after which he received from President Pierce the appointment of Minister to Spain, which he resigned. He was a Delegate also to the Chicago Convention of 1864, and also to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866, as well as the New York Convention of 1868. From 1838 to 1841 he also held the office of Register of the Land Office at Burlington, Iowa.

and McPherson, and was subsequently in command of the Departments of Wisconsin, Kansas, and the Plains; and soon after, resigning his commission in the army, he was elected a Representative from Iowa to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Military Affairs and Roads and Canals. Was also Delegate to the Chicago Convention of 1868.

Dodge, Henry.—He was born in Vincennes, Indiana, October 12, 1782, and removed to Wisconsin; served with great credit as an officer of volunteers, on the north-western frontiers, and was Brigadier-General of Missouri troops in 1812. He distinguished himself especially in the Black Hawk War, and as an Indian fighter was thought to have no superior. When the First Regiment of Dragoons was raised in 1823, he was appointed Colonel, which office he resigned in 1836, when he was appointed Governor of Wisconsin Territory and Superintendent of Indian Affairs, serving as such from 1836 to 1841, and from 1845 to 1848. He was a Delegate to Congress from Wisconsin from 1841 to 1845, and a Senator in Congress from the State of Wisconsin from 1848 to 1857. Died at Burlington, Iowa, June 19, 1867. He was the father of Augustus C. Dodge.

Dodge, William E.—He was born in Hartford, Connecticut, September 4, 1805; received a good common-school education; in his thirteenth year he removed to New York and entered a counting-house as clerk; and on reaching the age of twenty-one he commenced business on his own account, and was for many years at the head of one of the most extensive importing and manufacturing establishments in the country. He was prominently connected with many of the public improvements of the day; was a member of the "Peace Convention" of 1861; devoted much time and money to the support of the Government during the Rebellion; was for many years President of the National Temperance Society; active in the various religious and benevolent operations of New York; and was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-ninth Congress, having successfully contested the seat of James Brooks, serving on the Committee on Foreign Affairs. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866.

Doc, Nicholas B.—Born in New York, and elected a Representative from that State to the Twenty-sixth Congress, in place of A. Brown, deceased.

Doig, Andrew W.—He was born in Washington County, New York, and was a Representative in Congress from that State, from 1839 to 1843, having previously served one year, 1832, in the State Assembly. He was many years a teacher and surveyor, a County Clerk for one year, and held the office of Surrogate from 1835 to 1840. He went to California in 1849, but subsequently returned to his native country.

Dole, William P.—He was born in New Hampshire, and in 1861 he was appointed from Illinois Commissioner of Indian Affairs, continuing in the position until 1865.

Dowdson, Andrew Jackson.—Born in Tennessee in 1799; graduated at West Point in 1820; was Aid-de-Camp to General Jackson in 1820 and 1821; and his Private Secretary from March, 1829, to March, 1837; Chargé d'Affaires to Texas, 1844 and 1845; Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Prussia from 1846 to 1848; and to Germany in 1848 and 1849; was editor of the Washington Union in 1851 and 1852; candidate of the American party for Vice-President in 1852; cotton planter in Bolivar County, Mississippi, from 1822 to 1865; lawyer in Memphis from 1865 to 1871. Died in Memphis, Tennessee, June 26, 1871.

Doolittle, James R.—Born in Hampton, Washington County, New York, January 3, 1815; graduated at Geneva College in 1834; adopted the profession of law, and was admitted to the Supreme Court of New York in 1837. He was District Attorney for several years of Wyoming County, New York; removed to Wisconsin in 1851; was chosen Judge of the First Judicial Circuit of that State in 1853, but resigned in 1856. He was elected a Senator of the United States in 1857, for six years, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and as a member of the Committees on Foreign Affairs, Commerce, and Military Affairs. He was also a member of the Peace Congress of 1861. In 1863 he was re-elected to the Senate for the term ending in 1869. During the summer recess of 1865, as a member of a Special Committee of the Senate, he visited the Indian tribes west of the Mississippi River. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866, taking an active part in its proceedings and officiating as President.

Dorr, Thomas Wilson.—Born in Providence, Rhode Island, November 5, 1805; graduated at Harvard University in 1823; studied law in the office of Chancellor Kent, was admitted to the bar in 1827, and commenced to practice in Providence. Originally a National Republican, he became a Democrat in 1837. The Rhode Island Government was then based upon a charter granted by Charles II. in 1663; and the elective franchise was limited to the holders of a certain amount of real estate, and to their eldest sons, about one-third of the citizens. Mr. Dorr was a member of the Assembly from 1833 to 1837, and exerted himself in vain to procure a liberal Constitution. Mr. Dorr was chosen Governor by the suffrage party in 1841. May 3, 1842, Mr. Dorr's Government attempted to organize at Providence and to seize the reins of power. They were resisted by the legal State Government, who attacked and dispersed them at Chepachet, May 25. Mr. Dorr flew to Connecticut and afterward to New Hampshire. A reward of four thousand dollars was offered for his apprehension by the authorities of Rhode Island. He soon returned, was arrested, tried, convicted of high treason, and sentenced to imprisonment for life, but was pardoned in 1847; and in 1853 the Legislature restored to him his civil rights, and ordered the record of his sentence to be expunged. He lived to see his State under a liberal Constitution, and his party in legal possession of the Government. He died in Providence, Rhode Island, December 27, 1854.

Dorsey, Clement.—He was born in Anne Arundel County, Maryland, and was a Representative in Congress from Maryland from 1825 to 1831. Died August 6, 1846.

Dorsey, Stephen W.—He was born in Benson, Vermont, February 28, 1842; received an academical education; removed, when a boy, to Oberlin, Ohio; was one of the first to volunteer in the army, in which he served at Shiloh, at Perryville, at Stone River and Chattanooga, and at Mission Ridge, in the battles of the Wilderness and of Cold Harbor, serving until the close of the war. Returning to Ohio, he resumed business in the Sandusky Tool Company, and was chosen its President; was elected, without his knowledge, President of the Arkansas Central Railway Company; removing to Arkansas, was chosen Chairman of the Republican County and State Committees, and was elected to the United States Senate, for the term commencing in 1873 and ending in 1879, serving on the Committees on Appropriations and District of Columbia.

Doty, James D.—He was born in New York; was a Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Wisconsin from 1829 to 1841, and a Representative in Congress from the State of Wisconsin from 1849 to 1853. He was also, for many years, United States Judge for Northern Michigan; also Superintendent of Indian Affairs; and from 1841 to 1844 Governor of Wisconsin. In 1864 he was appointed by President Lincoln Governor of Utah, of which Territory he had previously been Treasurer; and died June, 1865, at Salt Lake.

Doubleday, Ulysses F.—He was born in Otsego County, New York, in 1794; began active life as a journeyman printer in 1809; followed that business in Albany, Utica, and at Ballston, where he established a newspaper, and edited for twenty years another journal in the city of Auburn; was elected a Representative to Congress in 1831 and re-elected in 1835; subsequently resided in the City of New York and became well-known as a bookseller. Died in Belvidere, Illinois, March 11, 1866.

Dougherty, Thomas.—He was born in Kentucky, and elected, in 1815, Clerk of the National House of Representatives, continuing in the same position until 1822.

Douglas, Beverly B.—Born at Providence Forge, Kent County, Virginia, December 21, 1822; his father died when he was four years of age, and he was sent to Rumford Academy at the age of eleven, then spent one term in William and Mary College, and in 1840 visited a relative in Scotland with the view of obtaining a medical education at Edinburgh University; spent one session attending lectures on chemistry, agriculture, and civil law, and returned to Virginia and graduated at the Law School of William and Mary, and was admitted to the bar in 1846, and settled in King William County. In 1850 was a member of the State Constitutional Convention, and was elected a member of the State Senate under the amended Constitution, and was a member of that body until 1865; was a candidate for Congress in that year, but was not elected. In 1861 he had entered the Confederate service as First Lieutenant in Lee's Mounted Rangers, of which he was made Captain; and then Major of the Fifth Virginia Cavalry, Army of Northern Virginia; resigned in 1863 to resume his Legislative duties. Upon the surrender of the Confederate Armies he returned to private life, and has held no public office until he was elected to the Forty-fourth Congress as Representative from Virginia.

Douglas, Stephen A.—Was born at Brandon, Rutland County, Vermont, April 23, 1813. He lost his father while an infant, and his mother being left in destitute circumstances, he entered a cabinet shop at Middlebury, in his native State, for the purpose of learning the trade. After remaining there several months, he returned to Brandon, where he continued for a year at the same calling, but his health obliged him to abandon it, and he became a student in the academy. His mother having married a second time, he followed her to Canandaigua, in the State of New York. Here he pursued the study of the law until his removal to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1831. From Cleveland he went still further West, and finally settled in Jacksonville, Illinois. He was at first employed as clerk to an auctioneer, and afterwards kept school, devoting all the time he could spare to the study of the law. In 1834 he was admitted to the bar, soon obtained a lucrative practice, and was elected Attorney-General of the State. In 1837 he was appointed by President Van Buren Register of the Land Office at Springfield, Illinois. He afterwards practiced his profession, and, in 1840, was elected Secretary of State, and the following year Judge of the Supreme Court. This office he resigned, in consequence of ill-health, after sitting upon the bench for two years. In 1843 he was elected to Congress, and continued a member of the lower House for four years. In December, 1847, he was elected to the United States Senate for the term ending in 1853; was re-elected for the term ending in 1859; and re-elected for an other term, but died in Chicago, June 3, 1861. He was Chairman, among others, of the Committee on Territories. In 1860 he was the candidate of his own party for the office of President, but was defeated.

Douglass, J. W.—He was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, October 25, 1827; removed to Erie, in that State; received an academical education; studied law and came to the bar in 1850; was appointed a Collector of Internal Revenue in 1862; Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue in 1869; and in 1871 he was appointed Commissioner of Internal Revenue, holding the position until 1875.

Edwards, Ninian.—Was born in Montgomery County, Maryland, March, 1775. He was in early life the intimate friend of William Wirt, and graduated at Dickinson College. He studied both medicine and law, but devoted himself to the practice of the law with eminent success. Removing to Kentucky, he was twice elected to the Legislature; and was appointed a Circuit Clerk, and subsequently Judge of the General Court of Kentucky, of the Circuit Court, of the Court of Appeals, and finally, Chief Justice of the State, and all before reaching the thirty-second year of his age. In 1809 President Madison appointed him Governor of the Territory of Illinois, to which office he was three times re-appointed. Before Congress had adopted any measures on the subject of volunteer rangers, he organized companies, supplied them with arms, built stockade forts, and established a line of posts from the mouth of the Missouri to the Wabash River. He was thus prepared for defense, and during the Indian wars on the frontiers was most devoted to his country's service. In 1816 he was appointed a Commissioner to treat with the Indian tribes. When Illinois became a State, he was elected a Senator in Congress, serving from 1818 to 1824, when he was appointed Minister to Mexico, but declined the office. In 1826 he was elected Governor of the State of Illinois, which office he filled until 1831. He died of cholera, July 20, 1833.

Edwards, Pierrepont.—He was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, April 8, 1750; and was the youngest son of Jonathan Edwards, the distinguished divine. From the fact that his father was a missionary among the Stockbridge Indians, he spent much of his early boyhood among that people, and acquired the language so perfectly that he was wont to say that he "thought in Indian." His later boyhood he spent in New Jersey and North Carolina, and was educated at Princeton College. He studied law, and settled in the practice of the profession at New Haven, Connecticut, and he was frequently elected to the Connecticut Legislature; was administrator of the estate of Benedict Arnold at the time of his treason. He served in the army during the Revolution; was in two hard-fought battles; and, at the battle of Danbury he was reported killed, because he remained on the battle-field for the purpose of rescuing a friend; he was a Delegate from Connecticut to the Continental Congress in 1787 and 1788. He subsequently filled the office of United States Judge for the State of Connecticut, which he held at the time of his death, which occurred at Bridgeport, Connecticut, April 1, 1826. He was the founder of what was called the Tolerant Party in Connecticut, and by his ability and perseverance called down upon his head the animosity of the Calvinists; and he was also the first Grand Master among the Masons of Connecticut, having, in fact, drawn up the Constitution of the original Lodge in that State.

In 1857 he returned to Connecticut. He was the author of "Digest of Patents from 1770 to 1839." Died at Fair Haven, Connecticut, December 27, 1858.

Ellsworth, Henry W.—He was the son of Henry L. and born in Windsor, Connecticut, in 1814; graduated at Yale College in 1834; studied law in New Haven Law School; removed to Indiana in 1835; was counsel for S. B. F. Morse in some of his suits connected with telegraph patents; and was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to Sweden in 1845. Died at New Haven, in August, 1864. He was the author of "Sketches of the Upper Wabash Valley," and a contributor to the Knickerbocker Magazine.

Ellsworth, Oliver.—Born at Windsor, Connecticut, April 29, 1745, and graduated at Princeton College, New Jersey, in 1766. He studied law, and soon became eminent in the practice. In 1777 he was chosen a Delegate in Congress from Connecticut. In 1780 he was elected to the Council of Connecticut, and was a member of that body till 1784, when he was appointed a Judge of the Superior Court of that State. In 1787 he was elected a member of the Convention which framed the Federal Constitution. In an assembly ill-famed for talents, erudition, and patriotism, he held a distinguished place. His exertions essentially aided in the production of an instrument which has been the main pillar of American prosperity and glory. He was afterwards a member of the State Convention of Connecticut, and contributed his efforts towards procuring the ratification of the Constitution by that State. When the Federal Government was organized, in 1789, he was a member of the Senate from Connecticut. In 1796 he was appointed by Washington Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, but resigned the office on account of ill-health in 1800. In 1805 he was a Presidential Elector. In 1799 he was appointed by President Adams Envoy Extraordinary to France, for the purpose of settling a treaty with that nation. He received the degree of LL.D. in 1790, from Yale College, and in 1797 from Dartmouth. He died November 26, 1807.

Ellsworth, Samuel S.—He was born in Vermont; was a member of the New York Assembly in 1840, and a Representative in Congress from that State from 1845 to 1847.

Etheridge, Emerson.—He was born in Currituck, North Carolina, September 28, 1819; when thirteen years of age he removed to Tennessee, where he received a common-school education, and having studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1840. In 1845 he was elected to the State Legislature for two years, and was at once nominated for Speaker, which he lost by two votes; and in 1853 he was elected a Representative from Tennessee to the Thirty-third Congress; re-elected to the Thirty-fourth, and also to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving during his last term as Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs. On the meeting of the Thirty-seventh Congress, he was elected Clerk of the House of Representatives. He subsequently devoted much of his time to the study of philosophy, as well as to the practice of his profession.

Eustis, George.—Was born in Boston, Massachusetts, October 20, 1796; graduated at Harvard University in 1815; was Private Secretary to his uncle, William Eustis, when Minister to the Hague; and there acquired great proficiency in civil law; in 1817 removed to New Orleans, and was admitted to the bar in 1822; was several times a member of the State Legislature; was Secretary of State; and in 1845 was a member of the Constitutional Convention; was a leading Commissioner of the Board of Currency; was Attorney-General of Louisiana; then Judge, and subsequently Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State until 1852. Died in New Orleans, December 28, 1858. His son George was in Congress.

Eustis, George, Jr.—He was born in Louisiana, and was educated at Harvard University; practiced law in New Orleans, and was elected a Representative to the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Congresses, serving on the Committee on Commerce. During the Rebellion he served as Private Secretary to John M. Mason, when Confederate Commissioner to France, and he died in Europe. His father, bearing the same name, was an eminent judge in Massachusetts.

Eustis, William.—Was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts, June 10, 1753; after graduating at Harvard College in 1782, he studied medicine with Dr. Joseph Warren. At the beginning of the war he was appointed Surgeon of a regiment, and afterwards Hospital Surgeon. In 1777, and during most of the war, he occupied, as a hospital, the spacious house of Colonel Robinson, a royalist, opposite to West Point; Arnold had his headquarters in the same house. At the termination of the war he commenced the practice of his profession in Boston. In 1800 he was elected a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts, serving until 1805. In 1809 he was appointed Secretary of War by President Madison, and continued in office until 1813, when, on account of the surrender of Hull, he resigned. In 1815 he was sent as Ambassador to Holland. After his return, he was a Representative in Congress from 1820 to 1823. He was chosen Governor of Massachusetts in 1823, and died in Boston, after a short illness, February 6, 1825.

Evans, Alexander.—He was born at Elkton, Cecil County, Maryland, his ancestors having settled in that county more than a hundred years ago. His education was received at a village school until fifteen years of age, and his first avocation was that of a civil engineer. In 1842 he commenced the study of law in his native town, and was admitted to the bar in 1845. He was a Representative in Congress from Maryland from 1847 to 1853, since which time he has practiced his profession at Elkton. In 1842 he was elected Corresponding Member of the National Institute at Washington, and in 1849 received the degree of A.M. from Delaware College. In 1851 he was elected a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and also a member of the Historical Society of Baltimore.

Evans, David E.—He was elected a Representative from New York to the Twentieth Congress, but resigned, and P. L. Tracy was elected in his place.

Evans, David R.—Born in Westmoreland, England, February 20, 1769; and, having removed to South Carolina, was educated at Mount Zion College; studied law, and came to the bar in 1796; served in the State Legislature from 1800 to 1803; from 1804 to 1811 was Solicitor for the Middle District of South Carolina; was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1813 to 1815; in 1818 and 1822 was a member of the State Senate; and was for many years the President of a Bible Society, and also of Mount Zion Society. Died March 8, 1843.

Evans, George.—Born in Hallowell, Maine, January 12, 1797; graduated at Bowdoin College, September 3, 1815; was a lawyer by profession; was Speaker of the House of Representatives of Maine in 1829; a Representative in Congress from 1829 to 1841, and United States Senator from Maine from 1841 to 1847. From 1849 to 1850 he was a Commissioner of the Board of Claims against Mexico; Attorney-General of Maine in 1853, 1854, and 1856; and died in Portland, April 6, 1867. During his service in the Senate he served with ability as Chairman of the Committee on Commerce.

Evans, James Lafayette.—Born in Harrison County, Kentucky, in 1825; emigrated to Indiana in 1837, and settled in Hancock County; received his education from a private tutor; began business as a merchant, engaging also in farming. He was never an applicant for any office, but was elected in 1874 a Representative from Indiana in the Forty-fourth Congress.

Evans, John.—He was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from Delaware, from 1776 to 1777.

Evans, Joshua.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, from 1829 to 1833.

Evans, Josiah J.—He was born in the District of Marlborough, South Carolina, November 27, 1786; he was for a time a merchant's clerk, but graduated at South Carolina College in 1808; taught school for one year; studied law, and rose to a high legal position; at an early age, in 1812, 1813, and 1816, he was sent to the Legislature; by that body made Solicitor for the State from his District, which position he held for thirteen years; in 1830 he was chosen a Judge of the Supreme Court, which office he held until 1852, when he was elected to the United States Senate for the term ending in 1859. He died May 6, 1858, of disease of the heart, having, only an hour before his death, partaken of the hospitalities at dinner of his friend and colleague, Senator Hammond. He was Chairman of the Committees on Revolutionary Claims and on Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and also a member of the Committees on Patents and on Naval Affairs.

Evans, Lemuel D.—He was born in Tennessee, and was elected a Representative from Texas to the Thirty-fourth Congress.

Evans, Nathan.—Born in Belmont County, Ohio, June 24, 1804; received a common-school education, and studied law, being admitted to practice in 1831. Evans, Thomas.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1797 to 1801.

Evarts, William M.—He was born in Boston, Massachusetts, in February, 1818; and was the son of Jeremiah Evarts, a lawyer and writer of some note, and on his mother's side, grandson of Roger Sherman. He graduated at Yale College in 1837; studied law at Cambridge, and came to the bar in New York City in 1840, and attained a high position as a lawyer. He was the leading counsel employed to defend President Johnson in his trial before the Senate; was Attorney-General of the United States from July, 1868, to March, 1869, when he resigned; was one of the three lawyers appointed to defend the interests of the United States before the Tribunal of Arbitration at Geneva, 1871, to settle the "Alabama Claims;" and he was one of the counsel who defended Henry Ward Beecher in 1875. In 1857 he received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Union College; and he is the author of several legal productions. In November, 1875, he was invited by the Centennial Commission to deliver the opening oration at the Exposition in 1876, the kindred honor, for reciting a poem on that occasion, having been conferred on Henry W. Longfellow.

Ever, Joseph.—He was a citizen of Kentucky, and in 1841 was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to Texas, where he remained until 1843.

Everleigh, Nicholas.—He was a Delegate from South Carolina to the Continental Congress from 1781 to 1782.

Everett, Alexander Hill.—Born March 19, 1790; graduated at Harvard University, in 1806; was an usher in Phillips' Exeter Academy; began to study law in Boston in 1807; and was a member of the literary club that founded the "Monthly Anthology." In 1809 he accompanied J. Q. Adams to St. Petersburg as attaché to the Legation, of which he became Secretary in 1815; visited England in 1811; and after a trip to Paris, returned home in 1812, and wrote some political essays in favor of the war, and against the Hartford Convention. He became Chargé d'Affaires at Brussels in 1818; from 1825 to 1829 was Minister, and from 1845 till his death was Commissioner to China. In 1840 he was sent on a confidential mission to Cuba. In 1829 was editor and principal proprietor of the North American Review, to which he had long been a contributor. He invited Irving to Madrid, made him an attaché to his Legation, and encouraged him in the preparation of his Spanish histories. He also aided Mr. Prescott in similar pursuits. From 1830 to 1835 was a member of the State Legislature, taking an active part as a Democratic politician. He was skilled in the languages and literature of Modern Europe, as well as philosophy, diplomacy, and the law of nations. He published "Europe" in 1821; "America" in 1827; "New Views on Population," 1832; a volume of Essays in 1845; also a small volume of poems, and other minor publications. He received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Vermont in 1826. Died in Canton, China, June 29, 1847.

Everett, Edward.—Born in Dorchester, Massachusetts, April, 1794. He received his early education at Boston, and entered Harvard College when little more than thirteen years old, leaving it with first honors four years later, undecided as to a pursuit for life. He turned his attention for two years to the profession of divinity; but in 1814 he was invited to accept the new Professorship of Greek Literature at Cambridge, Massachusetts, with permission to visit Europe. He accepted the office, and before entering on its duties, embarked at Boston for Liverpool. He passed more than two years at the famous University of Gottingen, engaged in the study of the German language and the branches of learning connected with his department. He passed the winter of 1817-18 at Paris. The next spring he again visited London, and passed a few weeks at Cambridge and Oxford. In the autumn of 1818 he returned to the continent, and divided the winter between Florence, Rome, and Naples. In the spring of 1819 he made a short tour in Greece. He came home in 1819, and entered at once upon the duties of his professorship. Soon after his return he became the editor of the North American Review, a journal which, though supported by writers of great ability, had acquired only a limited circulation. Under its new editor the demand increased so rapidly that a second and sometimes a third edition of its numbers was required. In 1824 he delivered the annual oration before the Phi-Beta-Kappa Society, at Cambridge, Massachusetts. This was the first of a series of orations and addresses delivered by him on public occasions of almost every kind during a quarter of a century, and afterwards collected in several volumes. Up to 1824 he had taken no active interest in politics, but the constituency of Middlesex, Massachusetts, without any solicitation on his part, returned him to Congress. For ten years he sat in Congress, and was a working member. In 1835 he retired from Congress, and was for four successive years chosen Governor of Massachusetts. In 1841 he was appointed to represent the United States at the Court of St. James. Although the Secretaryship of State at Washington was held by four different statesmen, of various politics, during his mission, he enjoyed the confidence and approbation of all. His scholarship was recognized by the bestowal of the degree of D.C.L. by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. He returned to America in 1845, and was chosen President of Harvard College, which office he resigned in 1849. On the death of Mr. Webster he was appointed Secretary of State by President Fillmore, which office he resigned for a seat in the Senate, serving from March, 1853, to May, 1854. This position he also resigned, after which time, although leading the quiet life of a scholar, he greatly added to his reputation by delivering orations on the Life of Washington, and on other topics, all being for charitable purposes. He was the intimate friend of Daniel Webster, and wrote the best Life extant of that distinguished man, whose collected writings he edited. In 1860 he was nominated by the Union party as their candidate for the office of Vice-President of the United States, but was defeated. Died in Boston, January 13, 1865. His last public position was that of Presidential Elector in 1864.

Everett, Horace.—A native of Vermont, was born in 1780; he was a lawyer by profession; settled in Windsor, and distinguished himself as one of the most successful jury advocates in Vermont. He served in the State Legislature in 1819, 1820, 1822, 1823, 1824, and 1834; was State's Attorney for Windsor County from 1813 to 1817, and was a prominent member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1828. He was a Representative in Congress from 1829 to 1843, and had the title conferred upon him of Doctor of Laws. Died at Windsor, Vermont, January 30, 1851.

Everhart, William.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1853 to 1855. The circumstance is related of this gentleman, that it was his misfortune, many years ago, to be wrecked on the coast of Ireland, where he and five survivors of the ill-fated vessel were treated with great kindness; and that during the famine in Ireland a few years ago, he loaded a ship with provisions at his own expense, and sent her to Ireland, by way of expressing his gratitude.

Erbank, Thomas.—Born at Barnard Castle, Durham, England, March 11, 1792; at the age of thirteen was apprenticed to a tin and copper smith; emigrated to New York in 1819, and commenced the manufacture of metallic tubing there, but retired from the business in 1836 to engage in literary and scientific pursuits. He published, in 1840, "Descriptive and Historical Account of Hydraulic and other Machines." In 1845 visited Brazil, and published "Life in Brazil;" was Commissioner of Patents from 1849 to 1852; published "The World a Workshop" in 1855; "Thoughts on Matter and Force" in 1858; "Reminiscences in the Patent Office" in 1859; contributed to the "Transactions of the Franklin Institute." His "Experiments on Marine Propulsion, or the Virtue of Form in Propelling Blades" was re-printed in Europe. He was a member of the Commission to report upon the strength of the marbles used in the Capitol Extension, and discovered the method of greatly increasing the resisting power of building-stones; and was the founder of the Ethnological Society. Died in New York, September 16, 1870.

Ewing, Hugh.—He was a citizen of Kansas, and in 1866 was appointed Minister Resident to the Netherlands, returning to the United States in 1870.

Ewing, John.—He was born at sea, while his parents were on their way from Ireland to Baltimore.

He was bred to mercantile pursuits, but acquired a taste for literature. He served in both branches of the Legislature of Indiana, and was a Representative of that State in Congress from 1833 to 1835, and again from 1837 to 1839. He died suddenly and alone, at Vincennes, in the winter of 1857, leaving on his table these lines:—

"Here lies a man who loved his friends,
His God, his country, and Vincennes."

Ewing, John H.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1845 to 1847.

Ewing, Presley.—Born in Kentucky, and was a Representative from that State to the Thirty-third Congress; he died at the Mammoth Cave, September 27, 1854. He was considered one of the most promising young men of the State. He had been liberally educated, and before entering Congress had twice served in the Legislature of Kentucky, and had also traveled extensively in Europe.

Ewing, Thomas.—He was born near West Liberty, Ohio County, Virginia, December 28, 1789; he received his early education chiefly from an elder sister, and with his father's family settled in the wilds of Ohio, about 1792, where he enjoyed the advantages of a winter school and an academy; his life, during his youth and early manhood, was one of continuous toil; in 1814 he was a school-teacher; in 1815 he received the degree of A.B. from the Athens Academy, the first ever granted in Ohio; and he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1816, practicing with success in the courts of Ohio and the Supreme Court of the United States. In 1830 he was elected to a seat in the United States Senate from Ohio, where he remained until 1837; he was a member of President Harrison's Cabinet as Secretary of the Treasury in 1841; on the accession of President Taylor to the Presidency, in 1849, he was invited into the Cabinet, and took charge of the new Department of the Interior; and in 1850 he was appointed to a seat in the United States Senate, where he remained until 1851, when he retired from political life, and resumed the practice of his profession in Ohio. He was a Delegate to the "Peace Congress" of 1861; and also chosen a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" in 1866, but did not take part in its proceedings. He left two sons, who have been distinguished in public affairs. Died in Lancaster, Ohio, October 26, 1871.

Ewing, Thomas, Jr.—Born in Lancaster, Ohio August 7, 1829; educated at Brown University and at the Cincinnati Law School; was appointed the Private Secretary of President Taylor in 1849; removed to Kansas in 1856; was appointed Chief Justice of the United States Court for that Territory; was a member of the Constitutional Convention of the new State; in 1862 he entered the Union Army as a Colonel, and after participating in several campaigns and battles was promoted to the rank of Major-General in 1864. After the Rebellion he settled in Washington, where he practiced the legal profession.

Ewing, William L. D.—He was a Senator in Congress by appointment from Illinois, from 1836 to 1837. Died March 25, 1846, aged fifty-one years, while holding the office of State Auditor.

About the year 1800 he removed to Ohio with his father; was educated at Jefferson College; studied law, and came to the bar in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. In 1817 he settled in Somerset, of that State; was frequently elected to the State Legislature, serving in both Houses; in 1825 he was elected a Representative in Congress for an unexpired term, and was twice re-elected, serving until 1831. He never quitted politics, nor ceased to practice his profession, but late in life took a special interest in matters connected with the Baptist Church, and became a very popular and successful preacher. He died at Somerset, October, 1839.

Forward, Walter.—He was born in Connecticut in 1786, where he received a liberal education. He removed to Pittsburg in 1803, and studied law. In 1805 he became editor of the paper called the Tree of Liberty; from 1806 to 1822 he was engaged in the practice of law, and, as a pleader, had few equals. In 1822 he was elected to Congress from Pennsylvania as a Representative, where he continued till March, 1825. In 1837 he bore a prominent part in the Pennsylvania Convention to reform the State Constitution. In March, 1841, President Harrison named him First Comptroller of the Treasury, which post he held until he was appointed by President Tyler Secretary of the Treasury. On retiring from President Tyler's Cabinet, he resumed and continued his practice at the bar, until appointed by President Taylor Chargé d'Affaires to Denmark, where he spent several years, resigning his situation to return home in order to accept the office of President Judge of the District Court of Alleghany County, to which he had been called by popular election. While in court, employed in his judicial duties, he was suddenly taken ill, and died in forty-eight hours, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, November 24, 1852.

Freeman, Jonathan.—He was a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire from 1797 to 1801. From 1789 to 1797 he was a State Councilor; from 1793 to 1808 one of the Overseers of Dartmouth College; and died in 1808, aged sixty-three years.

Freeman, Nathaniel.—He was born at Dennis, Massachusetts, in April, 1741, and died September 27, 1820. He graduated at Harvard University; studied medicine; and was a patriot in the Revolutionary war; performed various services in the Legislature and as a Brigadier-General of Militia; he was also a Judge of Probate for forty-seven years, and a Judge of the Common Pleas for thirty years; he was twice married, and had twenty children; and was a member of Congress from Massachusetts from 1795 to 1799.

Freeman, Samuel.—Born in Portland, Province of Massachusetts, June 15, 1743; was active and zealous in the Revolutionary struggles; in 1774 was Secretary of the Cumberland County Convention; member of the Provincial Congress in 1775; and of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1776 and 1778. In 1775, on the re-organization of the Courts, was appointed Clerk, and held that office forty-five years; was Register of Probate until commissioned Judge in 1804, continuing until 1820; Postmaster of Portland from 1776 to 1805; an efficient friend of Bowdoin College. Published "Town Officer," American Clerks' Magazine, "The Massachusetts Justice," 8vo, 1803; "Probate Directory," 1803; and edited the Journal of Rev. Thomas Smith in 1821. Died in Portland, September 2, 1831.

Frelinghuysen, Frederick.—Born in New Jersey, April 13, 1753; graduated at Princeton College in 1770. When twenty-two years of age he was sent to the Continental Congress; and as Captain of a Volunteer Corps of Artillery he was at the battles of Trenton and Monmouth, and it is said that it was he who killed Rhalle, the Hessian commander at Trenton. He was a Senator in Congress from 1793 to 1796, when he resigned on account of domestic bereavements. He stood among the first at the bar of New Jersey, and held various State and County offices. He died April 13, 1804.

Frelinghuysen, Frederick T.—He was born at Millstown, Somerset County, New Jersey, August 4, 1817, and is the nephew and adopted son of Theodore Frelinghuysen; graduated at Rutgers College in 1836; studied law, and came to the bar in 1839; was appointed Attorney-General of New Jersey in 1861, and re-appointed in 1866; and was subsequently appointed a Senator in Congress from New Jersey for the unexpired term of William Wright, deceased, serving on the Committees on the Judiciary and Pensions. In January, 1867, his appointment as Senator was confirmed by the election of the Legislature, and his term terminated in 1869. The Committees upon which he served were those on Naval Affairs, the Judiciary, and Claims. He was re-elected to the Senate for the term ending in 1875, serving on the Committees on Foreign Affairs and the Judiciary, and as Chairman of the Agricultural Committee. In 1870 he was appointed Minister to England, but declined. Re-elected to the Senate for the term ending in 1877.

Frelinghuysen, Theodore.—He was born in Millstown, Somerset County, New Jersey, March 28, 1787, and was the son of Frederick, of the Continental Congress; graduated at Princeton College, Nassau Hall, in 1804; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1808; was Attorney-General of New Jersey from 1818 to 1829; a Presidential Elector in 1829; and a Senator in Congress from New Jersey, from 1829 to 1835. He was Chancellor of the University of New York from 1839 to 1850, when he resigned; and while in that position was the candidate of the Whig party for Vice-President upon the ticket with Henry Clay. In 1850 he was elected President of Rutgers College, where he officiated until his death, devoting much of his time and means to the benevolent and educational interests of his native State, of New York, and of the Union. He resided for many years at Newark, New Jersey, and was Mayor of that city in 1837 and 1838. He also served as President of the American Temperance Union, of the American Tract Society, the Board of Foreign Missions, and of the American Bible Society, during his residence in New York. In the church, he was for many years recognized as a great leader in all the moral movements of the country, and was universally beloved. He had a rare command of thought and language, and was considered an eloquent speaker. Died at New Brunswick, New Jersey, April 12, 1862.

Fremont, John Charles.—Born in Savannah, Georgia, January 21, 1813. His father was an emigrant from France. He received a good education, though left an orphan at four years of age; and at the age of seventeen he graduated at Charleston College. From teaching mathematics he turned his attention to civil engineering, and was recommended to the Government for employment in the Mississippi Survey. He was afterwards employed at Washington in constructing maps of that region. Having received the commission of a Lieutenant of Engineers, he proposed to the Secretary of War to penetrate the Rocky Mountains. His plan was approved, and in 1842, with a few men, he explored the South Pass. Impatient of quiet, he planned a new expedition to the Territory of Oregon. He approached the Rocky Mountains by a new line, scaled the summits south of the South Pass, deflected to the Great Salt Lake, and connected his survey with that of Wilkes's Exploring Expedition. He also performed another expedition, in which he revealed the grand features of Alta California, its great basin, the Sierra Nevada, the valleys of the San Joaquin and Sacramento, and established the geography of the western portion of the continent. In August, 1844, he was planning a third expedition, while writing the history of the second, and before its publication, in 1845, was again on his way to the Pacific, collecting his mountain comrades, to examine in detail the Asiatic slope of the continent, which resulted in giving a new volume of science to the world, and California to the United States. After the conquest of California, in which he bore a part, he was the victim of a quarrel between two American commanders, and was stripped of his commission by court-martial. The President reinstated him, but he declined returning. He determined to retrieve his honor. One line more would complete his survey—the route for a great road from the Mississippi to San Francisco. Again he appeared in the Far West. He refitted his expedition, and started again; pierced the country of the Apaches; met, awed, or defeated savage tribes; and in a hundred days from Santa Fé stood on the banks of the Sacramento. The people of California reversed the judgment of the court-martial, and he was made the first Senator of the Golden State, serving from 1849 to 1851. He was subsequently, in 1856, a candidate for President, in opposition to Mr. Buchanan, and though he received a large vote, was defeated. In 1861 he served in the Union army as a Major-General; and by the "Cleveland Convention" of 1864 was again nominated for the office of President of the United States, and again defeated.

French, A. C.—He was born in New Hampshire, and after graduating at Harvard University, removed to Illinois and entered into the public service of that State in 1835. Gallatin, Albert.—Born at Geneva, January 29, 1761; graduated at the University of his native city in 1779, and, during the next year, emigrated to America. He commenced his career in Maine, then a part of Massachusetts, having been placed in command of a small fort at Machias, and, while there, he furnished funds of his own to American troops, and acted as a volunteer also. He was appointed a tutor at Harvard University in 1782, and removed to Pennsylvania in 1783, where he acted a prominent part in the State Convention of 1789, and served in the lower branch of the Legislature in 1790 and 1791. He also spent several years in Virginia, and in that State took the oath of allegiance. In 1793 he was elected a Senator in Congress from Pennsylvania, but his seat was vacated, in 1794, by a resolution of the Senate, on the ground of want of citizenship for a sufficient length of time; and soon after, without his knowledge, he was elected a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, serving from 1795 to 1801. He was, in the latter year, appointed Secretary of the Treasury, under President Jefferson, and, as an executive Councilor, and subsequently diplomatist and statesman, he obtained a very high reputation. In 1813 he went to St. Petersburg as one of the Envoys Extraordinary to negotiate with Great Britain, under the mediation of Russia, and, during the following year, with Adams, Bayard, Clay, and Russell, signed the Treaty of Ghent. He assisted, also, in concluding the Commercial Convention with England at London, in 1815, and resided at Paris, as Minister of the United States, from 1816 to 1823. In 1827 he obtained full indemnification from England for injuries sustained by our citizens, for violating the Treaty of Ghent. President Madison offered him a seat in his Cabinet as Secretary of State; President Monroe offered him the post of Secretary of the Navy; and he was also nominated for Vice-President; all which honors he declined. In 1828 he became a citizen of New York, and took an active part in promoting the literary and commercial interests of the Empire City and of the Union at large. In 1831 he was a member of the "Free Trade Convention," and drew up the memorial to Congress, which embodies the views of the Democratic party; he was President of the National Bank of New York, and also of the New York Historical Society, and the Ethnological Society, and advocated the establishment of the New York University; and, just before his death, became identified with the Smithsonian Institution. He was a fine scholar, and published many papers on the Currency and Finance, on Indian Languages, and other important subjects. He died at Astoria, Long Island, August 12, 1849.

He graduated at the University of that State in 1814; studied law, and practiced with success for many years; served four years in the State Legislature; and was a Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1833 to 1843, and from 1845 to 1847. He spent the close of his life engaged in agricultural pursuits, and died September 25, 1851.

Graham, James II.—He was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Accounts.

Graham, John.—He was a citizen of Virginia; in 1819 he was appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to Portugal, and went to Brazil on diplomatic business; returned to the United States in 1820, and died July 31 of that year.

Graham, William.—He was born in 1783; received a limited education; was a member of the Convention which framed the State Constitution of Indiana; served many years in both branches of the State Legislature, and was Speaker in 1820; and was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1837 to 1839. Died near Valonia, Indiana, in 1857.

Graham, William A.—He was born in North Carolina, September 5, 1804, and was the son of General Joseph Graham of the Revolution. He was educated at Chapel Hill University, where he graduated in 1824; studied law, and came to the bar at Newbern; served in the State Legislature from 1833 to 1836, and also in 1839 and 1840; was a Senator in Congress from North Carolina from 1841 to 1843; in 1844 he was elected Governor of the State, and re-elected in 1846; he was Secretary of the Navy under President Fillmore; and subsequently was nominated for the office of Vice-President on the ticket with Winfield Scott. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866. He subsequently held the position of Arbitrator between the States of Virginia and Maryland; and died at Saratoga, New York, August 11, 1875.

Granger, Amos P.—He was born in Suffield, Hartford County, Connecticut, in June, 1789; received a common-school education. In 1811 he removed to Manlius, New York, and was for a time President of that corporation; served as a Captain of Militia at Sackett's Harbor in 1812, and subsequently became a General of Militia; in 1820 he removed to Syracuse, and for many years devoted himself to agricultural and mercantile pursuits. He was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Congresses, serving chiefly on the Committee on Territories. In early life he became zealously attached to the Episcopal Church, and by his liberality and knowledge of ecclesiastical history did much for the prosperity of the church in his section of the country. He was a cousin of Francis Granger. Died in Syracuse, New York, August 20, 1866.

Granger, Bradley F.—He was born in New York, and elected a Representative from Michigan to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions.

Granger, Francis.—He was born December 1, 1792, in Suffield, Hartford County, Connecticut; graduated at Yale College in 1811; and on removing to New York was for five years, from 1826, a member of the General Assembly of that State. He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1835 to 1837, and again from 1839 to 1841, when he resigned to receive from President Harrison the appointment of Postmaster-General. After that time he lived in retirement. He was also a member of the Peace Convention of 1861. Died at Canandaigua, New York, August 28, 1868.

Granger, Gideon.—Born in Suffield, Connecticut, July 19, 1767; graduated at Yale College in 1787, and in the following year was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of Connecticut, where he practiced with great distinction. In 1793 he was elected a member of the Legislature, and continued in that body several years. To his exertions the State is principally indebted for its school fund. In 1801 he was appointed Postmaster-General of the United States, and continued in that office until 1814, when he removed to the State of New York. In 1819 he was elected to the State Senate, which situation he resigned in 1821, on account of ill health. He did much to promote internal improvements of the State; and gave one thousand acres of land in aid of the canal. He died in Canandaigua, December 31, 1832. His writings were confined almost entirely to political subjects; his principal publications were written in favor of the administrations of President Jefferson and Governor Clinton, and on the School Fund of Connecticut. He was an able speaker and a powerful writer.

Grant, Abraham P.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1837 to 1839.

Grant, Ulysses S.—He was born in Point Pleasant, Clermont County, Ohio, April 27, 1822. Although originally named Hiram Ulysses, the Congressman who nominated him for the West Point Academy gave his name by mistake as Ulysses S., and by that name he has ever been recognized. He graduated at the Military Academy in 1843, and as Second Lieutenant was assigned to the Fourth Infantry. He continued in the army from that time for eleven years, and participated in most of the battles of the Mexican War, excepting Buena Vista, serving under Generals Scott and Taylor, and receiving two brevets, for gallantry at Molino del Rey and Chapultepec. While serving in Oregon, in 1852, he was promoted to the rank of Captain. In 1854 he resigned his commission, and settled near St. Louis on a farm; in 1859 he was a real estate agent in St. Louis; and early in 1860 he removed to Galena, Illinois, where he joined his father and a brother in the manufacture of leather. When the Rebellion commenced he raised and took command of a company of Volunteers, and before the close of 1861 he had command, as Colonel, of the Twenty-first Illinois Regiment, and was made a Brigadier-General of Volunteers; in 1862 he was promoted to the rank of Major-General of Volunteers, from which time his military history is to be traced in his achievements at Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Iuka, Vicksburg, and Chattanooga, in the west and south, and at the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, and Petersburg in Virginia, culminating in the surrender of General Robert E. Lee, on April 9, 1865. It was on July 4, 1863, that he was appointed by President Lincoln Major-General in the Regular Army, and he was appointed Lieutenant-General March 2, 1864, receiving this commission directly from the hands of the President, and the full title of General was conferred upon him July 25, 1866. After the close of the Rebellion he took command of the armies of the United States, with his headquarters at Washington. In December, 1863, Congress passed a joint resolution, thanking him and the soldiers who fought under him for their gallant services, and awarding him a gold medal. On December 12, 1867, he was appointed by President Johnson Secretary of War ad interim, in the place of E. M. Stanton, suspended, which position he held until the November following, when the Senate refused to sanction the suspension of Mr. Stanton; and by the "Republican National Convention" of 1868, held in Chicago, he was nominated for the office of President of the United States; inaugurated as such on March 4, 1869, and was re-elected in 1872 for the term ending in 1877.

Grantland, Seaton.—He was born in Virginia, and having taken up his residence near Milledgeville, in Georgia, was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1835 to 1839. He was also a Presidential Elector.

Grady, Joseph J.—He was born in Henry County, Virginia, in 1828; received a common-school education, and spent his youth chiefly on a farm. In 1853 and 1854 he was elected to the Virginia Legislature; during the latter year he removed to Missouri; was elected to the Convention of that State in 1860; in 1862 he was elected to the Senate of the State, and re-elected in 1864; had command during a part of the Rebellion as Colonel of the Eighth Regiment of Missouri Cavalry. After the close of the war he turned his attention to the practice of law, and in 1866 he was elected a Representative from Missouri to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on the Militia and Education and Labor.

Graves, Benjamin F.—He was born in Monroe County, New York, October 18, 1817; received a good education; and having studied law was admitted to the bar of that State in 1841. In May, 1843, he removed to Michigan, and settled at Battle Creek, where he has since resided. In 1857 he was elected Judge of the Circuit Court for the Fifth Circuit, for the term of six years, having previously filled the same position by appointment from Governor Bingham for about one year, in the place of Abner Pratt, resigned. In 1863 he was re-elected for a second term of six years, but resigned in 1866; and in 1867 he was elected a Justice of the Supreme Court for the term of eight years.

Graves, William J.—He was a member of the Kentucky Legislature from Henry County in 1834; and was a Representative in Congress from Kentucky from 1835 to 1841; in 1838 he engaged in a duel at ~~Bladenburg~~ Maryland, with Jonathan Cilley, in which the latter was killed; was again a member of the Legislature in 1843 from Jefferson County; and was a Presidential Elector in 1848; he died at Louisville, September 27, 1848, aged forty-three years.

Gray, Edward.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1799 to 1813.

Gray, Hiram.—Born in Salem, Washington County, New York, April 10, 1802; graduated at Union College in 1821; studied law, and came to the bar in 1823; settled in Elmira, and there practiced his profession; was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1837 to 1839; in 1846 he was Judge of the Sixth Judicial District; and in 1847 one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, serving in that capacity until 1860.

Gray, John C.—He was born in Southampton County, Virginia, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1820 to 1821, for the unexpired term of James Johnson.

Grayson, William.—Born in Prince William County, Virginia; educated at the University of Oxford, England; studied law at the Temple, London, and settled in Dumfries, Virginia; was appointed Aid-de-camp to Washington, August 24, 1776; Colonel of a Virginia regiment January 1, 1777; Commissioner of the Board of War in 1780 and 1781; a Commissioner to treat with Sir William Howe respecting prisoners, while the army was at Valley Forge, and at Monmouth commanded his regiment with valor. He was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1784 to 1787; member of the Virginia Convention to consider the Federal Constitution in 1788, but, with Henry, opposed its adoption. In 1789 to 1790 was United States Senator from Virginia. He died at Dumfries, while on his way to the seat of government, March 12, 1790.

Grayson, William.—Born in Maryland in 1786; was a planter; served in both branches of the State Legislature, and took an active part in the successful struggle to obtain a new State Constitution in 1838; in was Governor of Maryland from 1838 to 1841. Died in Queen Anne County, July 9, 1868.

Grayson, William J.—He was born in Beaufort, South Carolina, in 1788; graduated at the South Carolina College in 1809; was bred to the legal profession; was a Commissioner in Equity of South Carolina for many years; a member of the State Legislature in 1813; and a Representative in Congress from 1833 to 1837; and by President Taylor he was appointed Collector of the Customs of Charleston, holding the office until 1853. He subsequently devoted himself to planting. He published "The Hiring and the Slave," "Chicora, and other Poems," and was the author of a "Life of J. L. Petigru." Died in Newbern, October 4, 1863. Son of William Grayson.

Greeley, Horace.—Was born at Amherst, in New Hampshire, February 3, 1811. Until the age of fourteen he attended a common school during winter, working in summer on his father's farm. In 1826, his parents having removed to Vermont, Horace, who had early shown a fondness for reading, especially newspapers, and had resolved to be a printer, endeavored to find employment as an apprentice in a printing-office in Whitehall, but without success. He afterwards applied at the office of the Northern Spectator in Poultney, Vermont, where his services were accepted, and where he remained until 1830, when the paper was discontinued, and he returned to work on his father's farm. During the following year he arrived in the city of New York, where he obtained work as a journeyman printer, and was employed in various offices, with occasional intervals, for the next eighteen months. In 1834, in connection with Jonas Winchester, he started the New Yorker, a weekly journal of literature and general intelligence, and became its editor. After struggling on for several years the journal was abandoned. During its existence, Mr. Greeley published several political campaign papers, the Constitution, the Jeffersonian, and the Log Cabin. In 1841 he commenced the publication of the New York Tribune. In 1848 he was chosen to fill a vacancy in the Thirtieth Congress, and served through the short term preceding President Taylor's inauguration. In 1851 he visited Europe, and was chosen Chairman of one of the juries at the World's Fair. He gave an account of his travels in a series of letters to the Tribune, which were afterwards collected into a volume. He has also published a collection of his addresses, essays, &c., under the title of "Hints toward Reform;" and a work entitled "The American Conflict." In 1864 he was a Presidential Elector, also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866, and to the "State Constitutional Convention" of 1867. He was one of those who gave bail for Jefferson Davis in May, 1867. In November he was appointed by President Johnson Minister to Austria, and was confirmed, but declined the position. In 1872 he was nominated by the Conservative Party for the office of President, but was defeated; and died near Pleasantville, Westchester County, New York, November 29, 1872. His most popular book was "Recollections of a Busy Life."

Green, Byram.—He was born in New York; served five years in the Assembly of that State; and was a Representative in Congress from 1843 to 1845. He was subsequently Judge of a County Court; and died at Sodus, Wayne County, New York, October 18, 1865.

Green, Duff.—He was born in Georgia about the year 1794; was a resident of St. Louis, Territory of Missouri, as early as 1817; in 1824 became the editor of a paper called the Inquirer, but leaving it before the close of the year, went to Washington City, and in 1826 became the proprietor and editor of the United States Telegraph, which he conducted until 1835. He advocated the interests of John C. Calhoun against those of Andrew Jackson, while holding the position of Government Printer, to which he was elected in 1829, whereby he lost an annual income of fifty thousand dollars; and he carried his hostility against the President so far, that he refused to shake his hand. From 1835 to 1838 he edited a paper called the Reformation; after that he went to Europe and engaged in various schemes for making money, in which he was eminently successful; in 1844 he edited a journal in New York, called the Republic, which lost much money for its proprietors, and was subsequently engaged wholly in private enterprises. In 1830 he had a personal difficulty with James Watson Webb on the steps of the Capitol, which attracted much attention in the political world, but resulted in no personal harm to either party. The man who succeeded him as Public Printer in Washington was Frank P. Blair; and it is a little singular as an incident in their lives, that both these men had a habit, after they became advanced in years, of appearing on the streets of Washington, carrying long staves instead of common canes, while supporting their feeble steps. Mr. Green died in Dalton, Georgia, which was his home, June 9, 1875.

Green, Frederick W.—He was born in Maryland, and having removed to Ohio, was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1851 to 1855.

Green, I. L.—He was born in Massachusetts; graduated at Harvard University in 1781; was a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1805 to 1809, and again from 1811 to 1813. He died in 1841.

Green, James S.—He was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, February 28, 1817; and in 1836, with no fortune but a common English education, he removed to Alabama, where he remained one year, and then took up his residence in Missouri, with which State he has since been identified. After many struggles with the world, he was admitted to the bar in 1840, and soon thereafter entered upon a lucrative practice. He was a Presidential Elector in 1844; was a member of the Convention held in 1845 for the revision of the Constitution of Missouri; and was elected a member of Congress in 1846, serving through two terms. He argued a boundary dispute case in the Supreme Court by appointment of the Governor of Missouri; and in 1849 took the stump against the late Hon. Thomas H. Benton. In 1853 President Pierce appointed him to be Chargé d'Affaires, and subsequently Minister Resident at Bogota, New Granada. He was again elected a member of Congress in 1856, but before taking his seat he was chosen by the Legislature to represent the State of Missouri in the Senate of the United States, where he remained until 1861. During the first session of the Thirty-fifth Congress he was a member of the Committees on the Judiciary and on Territories, and at the commencement of the second session of that Congress he was chosen Chairman of the Committee on Territories. Died at St. Louis, January 19, 1870.

Green, Willis.—He was born in the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia; represented Kentucky County in the Legislature of Virginia; was Clerk of the Court for many years; was a member of the Danville Convention in 1785; and of the first State Constitutional Convention of 1792; he was a Surveyor for locating land warrants; was a member of the Kentucky Legislature in 1836 and 1837; and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1839 to 1845.

Greene, Albert C.—He was born in East Greenwich, Rhode Island, in 1792; read law in New York, where he was admitted to the bar; returned to his native State, and there commenced the practice of his profession; in 1815 he was elected to the General Assembly of the State; in 1816 was elected a Brigadier-General of Militia, and subsequently became a Major-General; from 1822 to 1825 he served again in the Legislature of the State, and was chosen Speaker; from 1825 to 1843 he was Attorney-General of the State; from 1845 to 1851 he was a Senator in Congress from Rhode Island; and having again served a term in each of the two Houses of the State Legislature, he retired from public life in 1857. He received the degree of Master of Arts from Brown University in 1827. Died at Providence, January 8, 1863.

Greene, George W.—He was born in Orange County, New York, July 4, 1831; graduated at the University of Pennsylvania; and was teacher in several academies in Pennsylvania for several years; was appointed a School Commissioner for Orange County in 1856; read law, and came to the bar in 1860; in 1861 he was elected Judge of Orange County for three years; and was elected a Representative from New York to the Forty-first Congress, serving on the Committee on Freedmen's Affairs.

Greene, Ray.—He was born in Rhode Island; graduated at Yale College in 1784; and was a Senator in Congress from Rhode Island from 1797 to 1801, when he resigned. Died in 1849.

Greene, Thomas M.—He was a Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Mississippi from 1802 to 1803.

Greenough, Horatio.—Born in Boston, Massachusetts, September 6, 1805; graduated at Harvard University in 1825; showed a taste for sculpture early in life, and was induced by Allston and others to become an artist; he went to Italy in 1825; returned to Boston in 1826, and after modeling several busts, returned to Italy, and fixed his residence in Florence. Among his more prominent works are a statue of "Abe!" of Byron's "Medora," the "Chanting Cherubs," "Ascension of the Infant Spirits," Statue of Washington at the National Capitol, ordered by Congress; several ideal busts, and portraits of prominent men. He designed the Bunker Hill Monument, and also the Washington Monument, for which Congress appropriated twenty thousand dollars, but it is still unfinished. The colossal group, "The Rescue," for the National Capitol, occupied him eight years, and consists of four figures. He died at Somerville, Massachusetts, December 18, 1852.

Greenup, Christopher.—He was Governor of Kentucky from 1804 to 1808; was a patriot of the American Revolution, and participated in the perils of the war. He was at various times a member of the Legislature of Kentucky, and a Representative of that State in Congress from 1792 to 1797, and was a Presidential Elector in 1809. He was a man of great usefulness in his native State, and died at Frankfort, Kentucky, April 24, 1818.

Griffin, Isaac.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1813 to 1817.

Griffin, John.—He was an early emigrant to Indiana; in 1800 he was appointed a Judge of the United States Court for that Territory; in 1806 he was appointed to the same position for the Territory of Michigan, where he remained for many years.

Griffin, John K.—He was a Representative in Congress from South Carolina from 1831 to 1841, and died at Milton, South Carolina, August 1, 1841.

Griffin, Samuel.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1789 to 1795, and was one of those who voted for locating the seat of Government on the Potomac.

Griffin, Thomas.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1803 to 1805.

Griffith, Samuel.—He was born in Wales, Great Britain, February 14, 1816; educated at Allegheny College, Meadville; studied law; admitted to the bar in 1846, and practiced; and was elected a Representative to the Forty-second Congress from Pennsylvania, serving on the Committee on Freedmen's Affairs.

Griffith, William.—He was one of the earliest Judges of the United States Circuit Court, and in 1801 was appointed by President Jefferson to the Third Circuit.

Grimes, James W.—He was born in Deering, Hillsborough County, New Hampshire, October 16, 1816; commenced his education at Hampton Academy, and graduated at Dartmouth College in 1836. Soon after that time he emigrated to the West, and in 1838 was elected to the first General Assembly of the Territory of Iowa, to which he was frequently re-elected. He was Governor of the State of Iowa from 1854 to 1858, and in 1859 he was elected a Senator in Congress from that State for six years, serving as Chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and also of that on Naval Affairs, and as a member of those on Public Lands and Public Buildings. He was also a Delegate to the "Peace Congress" of 1861. He was re-elected to the Senate for the term commencing in 1865, and ending in 1871; and in 1865 received from the Iowa College the degree of LL.D. He was also a member of the Special Joint Committee on the Rebellious States, that on Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and that on Appropriations; and he was one of the Senators designated by the Senate to attend the funeral of General Scott in 1866. Died in Burlington, Iowa, February 7, 1872.

Grimke, Frederick.—Born in Charleston, South Carolina, September 1, 1791; graduated at Yale College in 1810; studied law, and removed to Ohio; for several years was Presiding Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in one of the Circuits of the State; in 1836 elected a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, which he held for seven years. He published in 1848 a work entitled "Considerations upon the Nature and Tendency of Free Institutions," and also "An Essay on Ancient and Modern Literature." Died in Chillicothe, Ohio, March 8, 1863.

Grimmell, Joseph.—He was born in New Bedford, Massachusetts, November 17, 1788. His early education was received at private schools, and was molded in view of a mercantile life; he commenced business in New York as a commission merchant in 1809, and continued there until 1829, for five years being connected with John H. Howland, eleven years with Preserved Fish, and four years with his brothers, Moses H. and Henry Grinnell; in 1829 he retired from the New York concern, and visited Europe; on his return he settled in his native place, devoting himself to commerce generally, and especially to the whale fishery. Among the laborious positions which he has long held in New Bedford are those of President of the Marine Bank, of the New Bedford and Taunton Railroad, and of the Wamsutta Cotton-mill. In 1839, 1840, and 1841, he was a member of the Governor's Council of Massachusetts; he was elected a Representative to Congress in 1843, and was three times re-elected, serving on the Post Office and Commerce Committees, and originated the idea of a reduction of postage and the establishment of life-boats. Indeed, so great was Mr. Grinnell's influence on the floor of Congress, as every measure he proposed seemed to succeed, he was playfully designated by his friends as one of the most dangerous men in the House.

Grinnell, Josiah B.—He was born in New Haven, Vermont, December 22, 1821; received a collegiate and theological education; went to Iowa in 1855, and turned his attention to farming, having been the most extensive wool-grower in the State, to which he has devoted special attention; was a member of the State Senate for four years; a special agent for the General Post Office for two years; and was elected a Representative from Iowa to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Freedmen, on Agriculture, and on the Postal Railroad to New York. In June, 1866, L. H. Rousseau, a fellow-member, made a personal assault upon him for words spoken in debate, which resulted in a resolution which was passed, reprimanding the assailant for "violating the rights and privileges of the House."

Grinnell, Moses H.—Born in New Bedford, Massachusetts, March 3, 1803; was educated at private schools and at Friends' Academy; was bred a merchant, and frequently went abroad as supercargo; and he was a Representative in Congress from New York, from 1839 to 1841. He was also a Presidential Elector in 1856. Moses H., Henry Grinnell, and Robert B. Minturn, were the gentlemen composing the distinguished firm of Grinnell, Minturn, & Co., the house taking that title in 1829, though in reality founded many years before by Joseph Grinnell and Preserved Fish. In 1869 he was appointed Collector of New York.

Griswold, Gaylord.—He graduated at Yale College in 1787; was a member of the New York Assembly from 1796 to 1798; and a Representative in Congress from New York from 1803 to 1805; and died in 1809.

Griswold, John A.—He was born in Rensselaer County, New York, about the year 1822; was educated for the mercantile profession; settled himself in the iron trade, to which, in connection with banking, he has ever been devoted. He served one term as Mayor of the city of Troy, and in 1862 he was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committee on Naval Affairs. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on the Death of President Lincoln and Naval Affairs. Re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committee on Ways and Means.

Griswold, John A.—He was born in Greene

County, New York, in 1827; after acquiring a good education he studied and adopted the profession of law; in 1856 he was elected District Attorney of Greene County, and held the position for three years; in 1864 he was elected County Judge, and continued in the office four years; and in 1868 he was elected a Representative from New York to the Forty-first Congress, serving on the Committee on Coinage.

Griswold, Roger.—Born in Lyme, Connecticut, May 21, 1762; graduated at Yale College in 1780, and studied law, in the practice of which he became eminent. From 1795 to 1805 he was a Representative in Congress from Connecticut. In 1801 he declined the appointment of Secretary of War, offered him by President Adams, a few days previous to the accession of President Jefferson. In 1807 he was chosen a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State; was Lieutenant-Governor from 1809 to 1811, and then elected Governor; while holding that office he refused to place four companies under General Dearborn, at the requisition of the President, for garrison purposes, deeming the requisition unconstitutional, as they were not wanted to "repel invasion." In 1809 he was also a Presidential Elector. A scene that occurred between him and Matthew Lyon, on the floor of Congress, was one of great excitement. He received from Harvard College the degree of LL.D. He died in 1812.

Griswold, Stanley.—Born in Torrington, Connecticut, November, 1768; graduated at Yale College in 1786, and was a clergyman. In 1804 he became the editor of a Democratic paper in Walpole, New Hampshire, but was soon after appointed by President Jefferson Secretary of the Territory of Michigan. He was a Senator in Congress from Ohio in 1809, but was superseded by A. Campbell; and he was United States Judge for the Northwestern Territory. He died at Shawneetown, Illinois, August 21, 1814.

Groesbeck, William S.—He was born in New York about the year 1826; studied law, and removed to Cincinnati, where he engaged in the practice of his profession; in 1852 he was a member of the Commission appointed to codify the laws of Ohio; was a member, in 1851, of the "State Constitutional Convention;" was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving on the Committee on Foreign Affairs; was a member of the "Peace Congress" of 1861, and in 1862 was elected to the Senate of Ohio. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866, and was one of the counsel for Andrew Johnson during his Impeachment Trial in 1868.

Groome, James B.—Born in Elkton, Cecil County, Maryland, April 4, 1838; studied law with his father, John C. Groome, who was a prominent lawyer; admitted to the bar in 1861; in 1867 he was elected to the State Constitutional Convention; in 1871 he was elected to the State Legislature, and re-elected; and in 1874 he was elected Governor of Maryland.

Gross, Ezra C.—He was born in Windsor County, Vermont; graduated at the University of Vermont in 1806; practiced law in Elizabethtown, New York; was Surrogate of Essex County from 1815 to 1819; was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1819 to 1821; and was elected to the Assembly of that State in 1828 and 1829, but died before the close of his second term.

Gross, Samuel.—He was a native of Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1819 to 1823.

Grosvenor, Thomas P.—Born in Pomfret, Connecticut, in 1780, and died April 25, 1817. He graduated at Yale College in 1800, and, after studying law, removed to New York; served a number of years in the Legislature of that State, and was elected to Congress as a Representative, serving from 1813 to 1817.

Grout, Jonathan.—He was born in Lunenburg, Worcester County, Massachusetts, July 23, 1737; was an officer in the colonial service in the French and Indian War of 1757 to 1760; studied law and settled in Petersham, Worcester County, Massachusetts. Was an active and energetic Whig through the Revolutionary War; served for a short time in the Revolutionary Army; was for some years a member of the "General Court," or House of Representatives of Massachusetts; and in 1789 was elected a member of the First Congress, in which he served from 1789 to 1791. He subsequently devoted himself to his profession, and died while attending Court at Dover, New Hampshire, September 8, 1807.

Grove, William B.—He was a Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1791 to 1803.

Grover, Asa P.—Born in Ontario County, New York, in 1819; educated at Centre College, Kentucky, of which State he became a resident in 1847; studied and practiced law; was elected to the State Senate in 1857; re-elected in 1861, holding the position eight years; and was elected a Representative from Kentucky to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committee on Expenditures on the Public Buildings.

Grover, Lafayette.—Was born in Bethel, Oxford County, Maine; educated at Bowdoin College; studied law in Philadelphia, where he was admitted to the bar in 1850, and soon afterwards took up his residence in Salem, Oregon Territory. In 1851 he was elected Prosecuting Attorney for the Territory; in 1852, Auditor of Public Accounts; served three years in the Territorial Legislature; saw some service in the Indian wars of Oregon; was a Commissioner in 1854 to adjust the claims of citizens of Oregon against the United States; he was appointed in 1856 one of the Commissioners to investigate the Indian war claims against the General Government; and, having been an active member of the Convention of 1857 to form a State Constitution, he was subsequently elected the first Representative in Congress from the prospective State, and took his seat as such in February, 1859. Subsequently resumed the practice of law; from 1867 to 1870 was engaged in the milling business; was Chairman of the State Central Democratic Committee; in 1870 elected Governor of Oregon, and re-elected in 1874.

Grover, Martin.—He was a native of New York; bred a lawyer; and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1845 to 1847; was a Judge of the Supreme Court of New York from 1857 to 1859; was Judge of the Court of Appeals from 1859 for a full term; was elected an Associate Judge in 1870 for fourteen years, and died in Alleghany County, New York, August 23, 1875. He acquired a fortune by his profession, and would never receive more than seven per cent. for his money.

Grow, Galusha A.—Born in Ashford, Windham County, Connecticut, August 31, 1823; was educated at Amherst College, graduating in 1844; adopted the law as a profession, and was admitted to the bar in 1847; and, having settled among the mountains of Pennsylvania, and his health, in 1850, being delicate, he amused himself by surveying wild lands and rafting; and in 1850 he was elected a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, where he served as a member of the Committee on Territories and Public Printing. When Mr. Banks was Speaker of the House of Representatives, Mr. Grow was Chairman of the Committee on Territories; and during one of the recesses of Congress he visited Europe. He was re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Territories. Re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, and was chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives. He was also a Delegate to the "Baltimore Convention" of 1864. He subsequently resided for several years in Texas, engaged in important business enterprises, but returned to Pennsylvania in 1875, and took an interest in political affairs.

Grundy, Felix.—Born in Virginia, September 11, 1770; he removed with his father to Kentucky, and was educated at Bardstown Academy; studied law, and soon became distinguished at the bar. He commenced his public career, at the age of twenty-two, as a member of the Convention for revising the Constitution of Kentucky; was afterwards, for six or seven years, a member of the Legislature of that State. In 1806 he was elected one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Kentucky, and was soon after Chief Justice. In 1807 he removed to Nashville, Tennessee, and became eminent as a lawyer. From 1811 to 1814 he was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee, and during several years after was a member of the Legislature of that State. From 1829 to 1838 he was United States Senator, and in the latter year was appointed by President Van Buren Attorney-General of the United States; in 1840 he resigned this position, and was again elected Senator. He died at Nashville, Tennessee, December 19, 1840.

Guerrard, Benjamin.—He was Governor of South Carolina from 1783 to 1785; Speaker of the House in 1788. Died in Charleston, South Carolina, January, 1789.

In 1845 he was chosen School Commissioner for his county; and in 1846 he raised and commanded a company, and joined the Fourth Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, to serve in the war with Mexico; he was afterwards elected Major of the regiment, and owing to the sickness of his superior officers, was chief in command during most of the campaign. He was at the taking of Vera Cruz, and served in the navy battery with a detachment during the day of its terrible fire; was also at Cerro Gordo, and after the wounding of General Shields, took command of the regiment, and was honorably mentioned in government dispatches for placing a twenty-four pounder battering cannon on the heights of Cerro Gordo, during the night preceding the battle. While absent in the army in 1846, he was elected a Senator in the Illinois Legislature, and in 1848 was chosen a Representative in Congress, serving through the Thirty-first and was re-elected to the Thirty-fifth Congress; during his second term he officiated as Chairman of the Committee on Elections. He took a special interest in the election in Illinois when he was re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress; and it is supposed that owing to his declining health, the efforts he made to attend the polls were the more immediate cause of his death, which occurred at Springfield, Illinois, November 24, 1858. His disease was pulmonary consumption.

Harris, Townsend.—He was a citizen of New York; in 1855 he went to Japan as Consul-General, and two years afterwards was authorized to negotiate a treaty with that empire; in 1868 he was promoted to the rank of Minister Resident, and succeeded in negotiating a treaty, and by his diplomacy won special credit from his government; and in 1861 he was re-commissioned to the same office, and is credited with having done much to cement the existing friendship between the United States and Japan.

Harris, W. L.—He was appointed by the Acting Governor of Mississippi, in 1851, to fill a vacancy in the United States Senate, caused by the resignation of J. Davis; but it does not appear from the Journal of the Senate that he took his seat.

Harris, Wiley P.—He was born in Mississippi, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1853 to 1855. Took part in the Rebellion.

Harris, William A.—He was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, August 8, 1805; received a classical education; he adopted the profession of law, and practiced it for ten years; he was twice elected to the Legislature of Virginia; was a Presidential Elector in 1841; and a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1841 to 1843. He was editor for several years of a journal called the Spectator, and subsequently of the Constitution, published in Washington; and in 1845 he was appointed by President Polk Chargé d'Affaires to Buenos Ayres, where he remained until 1851. After the election of Mr. Buchanan to the Presidency, he became the editor and proprietor of the Washington Union, which continued in his possession until he was elected Printer to the United States Senate, which office he held for two years. In 1854 he removed to Missouri, and died in Pike County, March 28, 1864.

In 1817 he was run for Governor unsuccessfully, but three years afterwards was elected, and served in that office until 1823, with great credit for a wise and honest administration of public affairs. Declining all solicitations to the contrary, he now finally retired from office, and spent the serene evening of an honorable life in the midst of the people who loved him. He died at Reading, June 10, 1832.

Heister, William.—Nephew of John and of Colonel Daniel Heister, was born in Bern Township, Berks County. He established himself in Lancaster County, where he cultivated a farm, and by his industry, honesty, and good sense, recommended himself to the popular regard. He was a member of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Congresses; of the Convention of 1837 to revise the Constitution of Pennsylvania; and of the State Senate. Died October 15, 1853, aged sixty-two years.

Helm, John Larne.—Born in Hardin County, Kentucky, July 4, 1802; when a lad was employed in the office of the Circuit Clerk; studied law; was admitted to the bar and was made County Attorney; in 1826 was elected to the House of Representatives of the State, and was a member of that body eleven years; was elected State Senator from 1844 to 1848, and from 1865 to 1869; but resigned in 1867 to run for Governor; he presided in the Legislature seven years; was elected Lieutenant-Governor in 1848; and was Governor from 1850 to 1852; in 1854 was made President of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad; in 1867 ill-health prevented his being inaugurated at Frankfort, and it was done at his residence in Elizabethtown, September 3, and he died there September 8, 1867.

Helmick, William.—Born in Jefferson County, Ohio, September 6, 1817; received a common-school education, and taught school for seven years; studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1845; in 1851 he was elected a Prosecuting Attorney; and in 1858 he was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post Roads. He subsequently accepted a chief clerkship in the Interior Department.

Helms, William.—He was an officer in the Revolutionary army; a Representative in Congress from New Jersey from 1801 to 1811; and removing to Tennessee, died there at an advanced age.

Hemphill, John.—He was a Senator in Congress from Texas from 1859 until that State seceded, when he became identified with the great Rebellion. Expelled from the Senate July 10, 1861.

Hemphill, Joseph.—He was born in Delaware County, Pennsylvania, and was a leading member of the old Federal party; he was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1801 to 1803, again from 1819 to 1827, and from 1829 to 1831. He distinguished himself particularly by a speech on the Judiciary Bill in 1801; and was for some time Judge of the District Court of Philadelphia. He died in Philadelphia, May 29, 1842, aged seventy-two years.

Hempstead, Edward.—He was born in New London, Connecticut, June 3, 1780; received a classical education from private tutors, and having studied law was admitted to the bar in 1801. After spending three years in Rhode Island practicing his profession, he removed, in 1804, to the Territory of Louisiana, traveling on horseback, and tarrying for a time at Vincennes, Indiana Territory. He first settled at St. Charles, on the Missouri River, but in 1805 he removed to St. Louis, where he resided the balance of his life. In 1806 he was appointed Deputy Attorney-General for the District of St. Louis and St. Charles, and in 1809 Attorney-General for the Territory of Upper Louisiana, which office he held until 1811; he was the first Delegate to Congress from the western side of the Mississippi River, representing Missouri Territory from 1811 to 1814. After his service in Congress, he went upon several expeditions against the Indians; was elected to the Territorial Assembly, and chosen Speaker; and he died August 10, 1817. He was a man of ability, pure, and without reproach, and his loss was deeply lamented by all who knew him.

Hempstead, Stephen.—He was Governor of Iowa from 1850 to 1854.

Hemstey, William.—He was a Delegate from Maryland to the Continental Congress from 1782 to 1784.

Hendee, George Whitman.—He was born in Stow, Vermont, November 30, 1832; received an academic education; studied law and admitted to the bar; was Prosecuting Attorney in 1858; a member of the State House of Representatives in 1861 and 1862; of the State Senate in 1866, 1867, and 1868, and President pro tem. the last year; was Lieutenant-Governor of Vermont in 1869; was Governor in 1870; and elected to the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses, serving in the former on the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Henderson, Archibald.—Born in Granville County, North Carolina, August 7, 1768, and died October 21, 1822. He was educated in his native county, studied law, and rose to a high position at the bar of his State. He was a Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1799 to 1803; and subsequently elected to the General Assembly for several terms. His learning was extensive, and his character as a man above reproach.

Henderson, Bennett II.—He was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee from 1815 to 1817.

Henderson, John.—He was a lawyer by profession; a General of Militia in Mississippi; a Senator in Congress from Mississippi from 1839 to 1845; and during the latter part of his life practiced his profession in Louisiana. After his service in Congress, he was engaged in an unlawful expedition against Cuba, for which he was tried, but acquitted by a New Orleans jury. He died at Pass Christian, in 1857, aged sixty-two years.

Henderson, John B.—Was born in Virginia, November 16, 1826; in 1836 removed with his parents to Missouri; spent a part of his boyhood on a farm. While obtaining an academical education, he taught school for his support; studied law, and came to the bar in 1848, and was soon afterwards elected to the State Legislature; re-elected in 1856; and in the same year chosen a Presidential Elector; also in 1860. He was a Delegate to the Charleston Convention in 1860; had command for a time of a Brigade of Militia. On the expulsion of Trusten Polk from the United States Senate, he was appointed to fill the vacancy, and in 1863 was elected for the full term ending in 1869, serving on the Committees on the Post Office and Post Roads, and those on the District of Columbia, Finance, Expenses of the Senate, Foreign Relations, and Claims, and as Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs. He was also a Commissioner to treat with the hostile tribes of Indians in 1867. In 1875 he was appointed to assist the District Attorney at St. Louis to prosecute certain men who had conspired to defraud the Government, when he reflected on the President in severe language, and was at once removed.

Henderson, John H. D.—He was born in Salem, Livingston County, Kentucky, July 23, 1810; received a good English education; commenced active life by adopting the trade of a printer; was subsequently a preacher of the Gospel, and for several years was devoted to agricultural pursuits. In 1864 he was elected a Representative from Oregon to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on the Pacific Railroad, Mines and Mining, Indian Affairs, and the Special Committee on the Death of President Lincoln.

Henderson, Joseph.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1833 to 1837.

Henderson, J. Pinckney.—Born in Lincoln County, North Carolina, March 31, 1808. He received a liberal education, but did not graduate, and adopted the law as a profession, first visiting Cuba for his health, and settling in Mississippi. He emigrated to Texas in 1836, and his first civil office was that of Attorney-General of the Republic of Texas, having been appointed by President Houston in 1836; in 1837 he was appointed Secretary of State of the Republic; soon afterwards Minister Plenipotentiary to England and France, clothed with the additional powers of Commissioner to solicit the recognition of the independence of Texas; in 1838 he made a commercial arrangement with England, and in 1839 a commercial treaty with France; in 1844 he was appointed a Special Minister to the United States, which mission resulted in the annexation of Texas; in 1845 he was a member of the Convention which framed the Constitution of the State of Texas; in November of the same year, was elected Governor of that State; and when the Mexican war broke out in 1846, as Governor of the State, and by permission of the Legislature, he took command in person of the Volunteer troops called for by General Taylor, served six months as Major-General, and distinguished himself at the battle of Monterey, subsequently receiving from Congress for his services, a vote of thanks and a sword valued at fifteen hundred dollars. He was elected a Senator in Congress in 1857 from Texas, but owing to ill health, did not take an active part in its proceedings; and he died in Washington City, June 4, 1858, deeply lamented by all who knew him.

Henderson, Leonard.—Born in 1772; studied law, and practiced in North Carolina; was a Judge of the Superior Court of that State from 1808 to 1816; was one of the Judges of the New Supreme Court when it was first formed, and in 1829 was appointed Chief Justice. Died in Granville County, North Carolina, August, 1833.

Henderson, Samuel.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1814 to 1815, for the unexpired term of Jonathan Roberts.

Henderson, Thomas.—He was a graduate of Princeton College in 1761; was Judge of the Court of Common Pleas; a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1779 to 1780; a Representative of New Jersey in Congress under the Constitution, from 1795 to 1797; and was once Lieutenant-Governor of that State.

Henderson, Thomas J.—Born in Brownsville, Haywood County, Tennessee, November 29, 1824; in 1836 removed with his father to Illinois; received an academic education, and spent one year at the University of Iowa; adopted the profession of law; from 1847 to 1849 he was a Clerk for County Commissions; served four years as the Clerk of the County; was a Master in Chancery; in 1854 elected to the State Legislature; in 1856 chosen a Senator, serving four years; raised a Regiment of Volunteers in 1862, of which he became Colonel, and served until the close of the war, and for a considerable time had command of a brigade; in 1864 he was severely wounded at Resaca, and brevetted a Brigadier-General in 1865 for services in Georgia and Tennessee; was a Presidential Elector in 1868; in 1871 was appointed a Collector of Internal Revenue, holding the office two years; and in 1874 he was elected a Representative from Illinois to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Hendricks, Thomas A.—He was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, September 7, 1819; was educated at South Hanover College; studied law, and completed his legal studies at Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, in 1843; settled in Indiana, and practiced his profession with success. In 1848 he was chosen to the State Legislature, and declined a re-election; was an active member of the Indiana "Constitutional Convention" of 1850; and was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1851 to 1855; he was appointed by President Pierce, in 1855, Commissioner of the General Land Office, in which he was continued by President Buchanan until 1859, when he resigned. He was subsequently elected a Senator in Congress for the long term, commencing in 1863 and ending in 1869, serving on the Committees on Claims, Public Buildings and Grounds, the Judiciary, Public Lands, and Naval Affairs. In 1872 he received a majority of the Democratic votes for the office of President of the United States.

Hendricks, William.—Born in Westmoreland County, Pennsylvania, in 1783. He was one of the early settlers of Madison, Indiana, having removed there in 1814. During his residence in that State he filled many high and important offices; he was Secretary of the Convention which formed the present Constitution of the State; the first and sole Representative of Indiana in Congress from 1816 to 1822; Governor of the State from 1822 to 1825, when he was elected a member of the United States Senate, and served until 1837. He was Chairman of the Committee on Roads and Canals. He died in Madison, May 16, 1850.

Hentle, Eli Jones.—Born in Baltimore County, Maryland, in November, 1828; received an academic education; taught school three years; studied medicine, and graduated at the University of Maryland in 1850; has devoted himself to his profession and to agricultural pursuits; was elected a member of the House of Delegates of Maryland in 1853; was a member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1864; was a member of the State Senate in 1867, 1868, and 1870; re-elected to the House of Delegates in 1871 and 1873; in 1872 was Delegate to the National Democratic Convention; was one year Professor of Anatomy, Physiology, and Natural History in the Maryland Agricultural College, which position he resigned in 1874, and was elected a Representative from Maryland to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Henley, Thomas J.—He was born in Indiana in 1810; was educated at the Indiana State College, and pursued the occupation of a farmer; he was a member of the State Legislature from 1832 to 1842; and was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1843 to 1849, having been the first native of that State elected to that office. In 1849 he emigrated to California, and was a member of the first Legislature of that State; he was for seven years Superintendent of Indian Affairs for California, and was subsequently appointed Postmaster of San Francisco.

Henn, Bernhart.—He was born in New York, and, on emigrating to Iowa, he was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1849 to 1853.

Hennegan, B. K.—He was Acting Governor of South Carolina in 1840.

Henry, James.—He was a Delegate from Virginia to the Continental Congress, from 1780 to 1781. He was a lawyer and a Judge, and died in Virginia in January, 1805.

Henry, John.—He was a graduate of Princeton College in 1769; was for several years, from 1778, a Delegate to the Old Congress; a Senator in Congress, under the Constitution, from Maryland, from 1789 to 1797, when he resigned, and was elected Governor of Maryland in the latter year. He was one of those who voted for locating the Seat of Government on the Potomac. He died at Easton, December, 1798.

Henry, John F.—He was the brother of Robert P. Henry, and was elected to Congress from Kentucky, for the unexpired term of the same, from 1826 to 1827. He was born in Scott County, Kentucky, January 17, 1793; received his education at the Georgetown Academy of Kentucky; studied medicine, and in 1813 was appointed Surgeon's Mate in Boswell's Regiment of Kentucky troops, serving at Fort Meigs. Subsequently graduated at the New York University; settled in Hopkinsville, Kentucky, in 1822; and subsequently to his service in Congress removed to Burlington, Iowa.

Henry, Joseph.—Born in Albany, New York, December 17, 1797; received a common-school education in Saratoga County, and, as an apprentice, pursued for a short time the occupation of a watchmaker, and was attached to a surveying party, to mark out a State road from the Hudson River to Lake Erie. In 1826 he entered the Albany Academy as a tutor—Professor of Mathematics—and soon after began a series of experiments in electricity; made various discoveries in electro-magnetism, which were described in Silliman's Journal as early as 1831; in 1832 he was called to the chair of Natural Philosophy in Princeton College; in 1835 offered a Professorship in the University of Virginia, but declined; in 1837 he visited Europe, where he remained one year, and his discoveries connected with the electro-magnet were recognized, and resulted in establishing the wonders of what is now called the telegraph. In 1846 he resigned his honorable position at Princeton, and became the Secretary or Director of the Smithsonian Institution, which he holds at the present time. His scientific writings, including his elaborate Smithsonian contributions, reports, scientific investigations, and discoveries, and numbering more than fifty, have given him a world-wide reputation; and the great institution under his charge was entirely organized, and has ever been conducted according to his individual opinions, sustained by a Board of Regents. He made a second visit to Europe for his health, and received all the attention from the scientific world, which was so eminently his due. Without extra compensation, he has served the General Government in manifold departments, but chiefly as the Executive head of the Light-House Board, of which he was a member for more than twenty years. As the head of several scientific societies, his influence is universally recognized and appreciated. Long before he became identified with the Smithsonian Institution, he published many valuable papers on electricity and magnetism in the "American Philosophical Transactions," Silliman's Journal of Science, and the Journal of the American Institute. The two principal learned societies over which he was called to preside as President, were the National Academy of Sciences, and the American Association for the Advancement of Education.

Henry, Patrick.—Born in Studley, Hanover County, Virginia, May 29, 1736; his education was neglected until he had reached the age of manhood, and was a husband and father; then it was that he began to study law, and was soon admitted to practice; in 1764 he made his first striking effort as an advocate and an orator, and from that year became famous. He was the first man of mark in Virginia to declare against the usurpations of Britain. In 1765 he was chosen to the Virginia Assembly, and there introduced a set of remarkable resolutions, supporting them with a speech of surpassing ability; and from that time he was hailed as the great advocate of human rights and rational liberty. He was elected a Delegate from Virginia to the Continental Congress, from 1774 to 1776; there distinguished himself as an orator; and signed the Declaration of Independence. He was a Delegate to the "Richmond Convention" of 1777, and again electrified the people by his eloquence; in 1776 he was elected Governor of Virginia, re-elected, and then declined a reelection; from 1780 to 1791 he served in the Assembly of the State; was a member in 1788 of the Convention to ratify the Federal Constitution, to which he was opposed; in 1795 Washington tendered to him the office of Secretary of State, but he preferred the retirement of home, and declined it; was again elected Governor in 1796, but declined to serve; in 1799 President Adams offered him the mission to France, but his declining health compelled him to decline that honor also; and on June 6, of that year, he died. Evidences of his splendid intellect are abundant and "familiar as household words," and a tribute that he paid to the Christian religion, in his will, is, for beauty and force, without a parallel in the English language.

Henry, Robert P.—Born in Scott County, Kentucky, November 24, 1788; graduated at the University of Transylvania; studied law with Henry Clay, and was admitted to the bar in 1809; served that year as Prosecuting Attorney for his district; served in the War of 1812, as an Aid-de-Camp to his father, Major-General William Henry; subsequently settled in Christian County, and became Prosecuting Attorney for that circuit; was a Director of the Princeton Branch of the Commonwealth Bank; and was elected a Representative in Congress from Kentucky, for the term from 1823 to 1827. As a member of the Committee on Roads and Canals, he obtained the first appropriation ever granted for improving the Mississippi River. While in Congress he received the appointment of Judge of the Court of Appeals, which he declined; and he died of fever, August 25, 1826, before the expiration of his term in Congress.

Henry, Thomas.—Born in Ireland in 1785. He served his adopted State, Pennsylvania, in Congress from 1837 to 1843. Died in Beaver County, Pennsylvania, February 27, 1849.

Henry, William.—He was a Delegate from Pennsylvania to the Continental Congress from 1784 to 1786.

Henry, William.—He was born in New Hampshire, and having settled in Vermont, devoted himself to mercantile pursuits. Was for many years Cashier of the Bank of Bellows Falls, where he resides; was elected a Representative in Congress from Vermont from 1847 to 1853, accomplishing much work as a member of several Committees.

Henshaw, David.—Born in Leicester, Massachusetts, April 2, 1791; his father was a patriot of the Revolution; he received a common-school education; while yet a young man he went into the drug business, but devoted much of his attention to writing on politics; he was for nine years Collector of Customs for the Port of Boston; was appointed in 1843 by President Tyler Secretary of the Navy, and after holding the office for nearly a year, was rejected by the Senate. He took an important part in the earlier railroad operations of this State, and was one of the projectors of the Boston and Worcester and Providence Railroads. Died in Leicester, November 11, 1852.

Henson, Abraham.—He was a citizen of Wisconsin, and in 1863 he was appointed a Commissioner and Consul-General to Liberia, and died at his post of duty, July 20, 1866.

Herbert, John C.—He was a Representative in Congress from Maryland from 1815 to 1819, and a Presidential Elector in 1824.

Herbert, Paul.—Born in Louisiana; graduated first in his class at West Point in 1840; entered the engineers; was acting Professor of Engineering at West Point in 1841 and 1842; resigned in 1845; was Chief Engineer of the State of Louisiana from 1845 to 1847; re-entered the service as Lieutenant-Colonel of Fourteenth Infantry; was brevetted Colonel for gallantry at Molino del Rey; and commanded his regiment after his Colonel was killed at Chapultepec. He was Governor of Louisiana from 1853 to 1858; was made Brigadier-General in the Southern Army in 1861; commanded the Louisiana forces, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Pea Ridge in 1863.

Herbert, Philip T.—Born in Alabama, and was a Representative in Congress from California from 1853 to 1857.

Hereford, Frank.—He was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, July 4, 1825; was liberally educated; studied law, and removed to California; was District Attorney of Sacramento County from 1855 to October, 1857; settled in West Virginia; was elected to the Forty-second, Forty-third, and Forty-fourth Congresses from West Virginia, serving on the Committees on Public Lands, Militia, and Territories. In December, 1875, he was appointed Chairman of the Committee on Commerce.

Herkimer, John.—Born in Herkimer County, New York, in 1773; was for many years a Judge of the Circuit Court; and a Representative in Congress from New York from 1817 to 1819, and again from 1823 to 1825. Died at Danube, New York, June 8, 1845.

Hernandez, Joseph M.—He was one of the prominent Spanish citizens who remained in the Territory of Florida at the time of its transfer to the United States. He was the first Delegate to Congress from Florida, and subsequently a leading member and presiding officer of the Territorial Legislature. At the breaking out of the Indian hostilities, he was made a Brigadier-General in the United States service. He was a man of refined and elegant manners; resided at St. Augustine; and died near Matanzas, Cuba, June 8, 1857, at an advanced age.

Herndon, William Lewis.—Born in Fredericksburg, Virginia, October 25, 1813; entered the navy at the age of fifteen; took part in the Mexican War; was an assistant at the National Observatory as an assistant to his brother-in-law, M. F. Maury; in 1851 he was sent by the Government to explore the Amazon River, of which an account was published in 1853; and he was lost at sea by the sinking of the Steamer Central America, on her way from Cuba to New York, September 12, 1857.

Herndon, William S.—He was born in Rome, Georgia, November 27, 1837; removed with his father to Texas, in 1852; educated at McKenzie College, Texas; studied law, and began to practice in 1860; enlisted in the Confederate Army in 1861, and remained until the close of the war; resumed the practice of the law in Smith County; and was elected to the Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses, serving on the Committees of Agriculture and Public Lands.

Herod, William.—He was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1837 to 1839.

Herrick, Anson.—He was born in Lewiston, Maine, January 21, 1812; received a common-school education; at the age of fifteen years he was apprenticed to the business of a printer; settled in New York City in 1836, and continued in the same employment until 1838, when he commenced the publication of a weekly journal now called the New York Atlas, of which he has since been the editor and proprietor. In 1853 he was chosen one of the Aldermen of the City, and served three years; and by President Buchanan he was appointed Naval Storekeeper for New York, which he held until 1861. In 1862 he was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committees on Revolutionary Pensions, and Expenditures in the Navy Department. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866; and died in New York, February 6, 1868. Ebenezer Herrick, who served in Congress from 1821 to 1827, was his father.

Herrick, Ebenezer.—He was born in Lincoln County, Maine, and was a Representative in Congress from Maine from 1821 to 1827, and died at Lewiston, in that State, May 7, 1839. In 1820 he held the office of Secretary of the State Senate, and was a State Senator in 1828 and 1829.

Herrick, Joshua.—He was born in Beverly, Essex County, Massachusetts, in 1794; received a common-school education; removed to Maine, and became a Sheriff in that State; was Deputy Collector of the port of Kennebec from 1829 to 1841; was Chairman of a Board of County Commissioners from 1842 to 1843; and was a Representative in Congress from Maine, from 1843 to 1845, serving on the Committees on Naval Affairs and Accounts. He was again Deputy Collector of Kennebec from 1847 to 1849, and from 1850 to 1854; and in 1856 he was Register of Probate for York County, State of Maine.

Herrick, Richard P.—Born in Rensselaer County, New York, in 1791; was a man of remarkable business enterprise; and a member of Congress from New York, from 1845 to the time of his death, which occurred at Washington, June 23, 1846.

Herrick, Samuel.—He was born in Dutchess County, New York, April 14, 1779. He read law at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and was admitted to the bar in 1805; in 1810 he settled at Zanesville, Ohio, and was appointed Collector of Taxes for that County; soon afterwards Prosecuting Attorney for the same county; and soon after that, by President Madison, was appointed United States District Attorney for Ohio; in 1812 he was appointed one of a Board of Commissioners for settling the North-western boundary line; in the autumn of that year he succeeded Lewis Cass as Prosecuting Attorney for Muskingum County; in 1814 he was appointed to the same office in Licking County; and he was a Representative in Congress from Ohio from 1817 to 1821. After his first election his seat was contested by Charles Hammond, but the House sustained his claim. He was a Presidential Elector in 1828, and in 1829 was appointed by President Jackson United States District Attorney for Ohio. The remainder of his life was spent in retirement, and he died in December, 1851.

Herring, Elbert.—Even if this man had not served his country faithfully as a jurist, the fact that his life was coeval with the century to which this book is devoted would give him a place therein. He was born in Connecticut, July 8, 1777; received an academical education at the Greenfield Academy; and in his fourteenth year he entered Princeton College, where he graduated in 1795. He studied law with Samuel Jones of New York, and not only practiced with success, but was for many years an honored Judge of what was called the Marine Court; and as an evidence of his high position and character it may be stated that he was selected to deliver the funeral orations on the death of George Clinton, as well as De Witt Clinton, with both of whom he was on intimate terms. On his ninety-ninth birthday, a large number of distinguished people called to pay their respects to him at his residence, and he greatly edified them with his conversation about the olden times. At his suggestion, a brief religious service was held under his roof, when the 71st and 91st Psalms were read, appropriate prayers offered, and Addison's famous Hymn on the Mercies of God was sung, and the company separated. At that time, Mr. Herring was considered the oldest living lawyer in the world. It was one of his sons who invented an iron safe, which acquired celebrity and brought him a fortune.

Hersey, Samuel F.—Born in Sumner, Maine, April 12, 1812; received an academic education; was a merchant, and engaged in banking, and largely interested in the lumber business in Maine, Minnesota, and Wisconsin; was a member of the Legislature of Maine in 1842, 1857, 1865, 1867, and 1869, and of the Executive Council in 1851 and 1852; was a Delegate to the National Republican Convention at Chicago in 1860; also at Baltimore in 1864; and was a member of the National Republican Committee from 1864 to 1868, and was elected to the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses, serving on important Committees. He died at Bangor, February 3, 1875.

Hewes, Joseph.—He was born near Kingston, New Jersey, in 1730; was educated at the Princeton School; settled in Philadelphia as a merchant; when thirty years of age located at Edenton, North Carolina; served in the Assembly of the Province; was a Delegate from North Carolina to the Continental Congress from 1774 to 1777, and again in 1779, and signed the Declaration of Independence; and he was de facto the first Secretary of the Navy. Died in Philadelphia, November 10, 1779.

Hewitt, Abram Stevens.—Born in Rockland County, New York, July 30, 1822; attended the common schools of this city; on competition gained a scholarship in Columbia College, whence he graduated in 1842; was for a time tutor of mathematics; studied law and came to the bar in 1845; on account of impaired vision gave up the profession; in connection with Peter Cooper engaged in the manufacture of iron; in connection with Edward Cooper, his brother-in-law, established extensive steel and iron works in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and was a Scientific Commissioner to the Paris Exposition in 1867. During the Rebellion in 1862 he was sent to England on a confidential mission to learn the process of making gun-barrel iron; at a heavy loss to his firm furnished the Government with much war material; in 1859 he organized the Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art, which has been eminently successful; was somewhat active in politics, and Chairman of the Democratic General Committee of the City of New York; and in 1874 he was elected a Representative to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Hewitt, C. C.—He was born in New York, and having emigrated to Washington Territory, was appointed Chief Justice of the United States Court for that district, residing at Vancouver.

Hewitt, Goldsmith W.—Born in Jefferson County, Alabama, February 14, 1834; received an academic education, studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1856; entered the Confederate Army in 1861, and was wounded in the battle of Chickamauga in 1863; in 1870 was elected to the State Legislature; in 1873 was made State Senator, and served two sessions, but resigned in 1874 to accept the nomination as Representative from Alabama to the Forty-fourth Congress, and was elected to that position.

Horn, Henry.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania, from 1831 to 1833.

Hornbeck, John W.—He was a native of New Jersey, and a graduate of Union College, New York. Removed to Pennsylvania, and turned his attention to the profession of law. He was a member of the House of Representatives in Congress, from Pennsylvania, from 1847 to 1848, and died at Allentown, Pennsylvania, January 16, 1848.

Hornblower, Joseph C.—Born in Belleville, New Jersey, May 6, 1777; received a classical and mathematical education; studied law and came to the bar in 1803; in 1832 he was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, which position he occupied until 1846. He was also a member of the State Constitutional Convention of 1844, and in 1856 gave a decision which attracted much attention, and in which he declared that Congress had no right to pass a fugitive slave law. He was also Vice-President of the Philadelphia Convention which nominated Fremont for the Presidency. He was connected with many of the religious and benevolent organizations of his native State, and died in Newark, June 11, 1864.

Hornblower, Josiah.—Was born in Staffordshire, England, in 1729. Did not receive a University education, but was a great student and made himself acquainted with many important branches of science, and adopted the profession of civil engineering. In 1751 he came to America to build a steam engine at the copper mines near Belleville, New Jersey. This is said to have been the first engine built in North America. He became interested in mineralogy and mining. He espoused the cause of American Independence; was several years in the State Legislature, serving as Speaker; and was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1785 to 1786. He was Justice of the Peace for a long period, and in 1798 was appointed Judge of Essex County Court, which position he held till his death, which occurred January 31, 1809.

Horsey, Outecbridge.—He was a native of Delaware, and born in 1777; after completing his classical education, he studied law, under James A. Bayard, and rose to eminence in his profession. He was for many years Attorney-General of the State, and was a Senator in Congress from Delaware from 1810 to 1821. He died at Needwood, Maryland, June 9, 1842.

Horton, Thomas R.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1835 to 1857.

Horton, Valentine B.—He was born at Windsor, Vermont, January 29, 1802; was educated at Partridge's Military Academy in that State; and after that institution was removed to Middletown, Connecticut, he became a teacher therein. He studied law at Middletown, and was admitted to the bar in 1830, after which he removed to and practiced his profession in Pittsburg. He removed to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1833, where he followed his profession for two years, and in 1835 removed to Pomeroy, Ohio, his present residence, where he engaged in mining and manufacturing. He was a member of the Ohio "Constitutional Convention" of 1850, and in 1854 he was elected a Representative to the Thirty-fourth Congress, and was re-elected to the Thirty-fifth, his business affairs causing him to decline a nomination for the next Congress. He was, however, re-elected to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committee on Ways and Means. In 1861 he was a member of the "Peace Congress," held in Washington. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866.

Hosford, Jeddiah.—He was born in Vermont, and, having removed to New York, was elected a Representative to Congress from that State from 1851 to 1853.

Hosmer, Hezekiah L.—He was a Representative to Congress from New York from 1797 to 1799.

Hosmer, H. L.—He was appointed Chief Justice of the United States Court for the Territory of Idaho.

Hosmer, Stephen Titus.—Born in Middletown, Connecticut, in 1763; graduated at Yale College in 1782; began to practice law at Middletown, about 1785; was many years a member of the Council of State; after the adoption of the State Constitution, Chief Justice from 1815 to 1833. Died in Middletown, August 5, 1834.

Hosmer, Titus.—Born at Middletown, Connecticut, in 1736; was a member of the Council; of the Assembly from 1773 to 1778; Speaker in 1777; Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1775 to 1779; and in January, 1780, was appointed Judge of the Maritime Court of Appeals for the United States. He was a signer of the Articles of Confederation. He was the patron of Joel Barlow who wrote a poem on his death, inscribed to his widow. He died at Middletown, August 4, 1780.

Hostetter, Jacob.—He was born in York, Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State in 1814, in the place of J. Spangler resigned, and from 1819 to 1821.

Hotchkiss, Giles W.—Born in Windsor, Broome County, New York, October 25, 1815; a lawyer by profession; in 1862 he was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving as a member of the Committees on Claims, and on Private Land Claims. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Claims, and Private Land Claims. Re-elected to the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses, serving as Chairman of Civil Service, and on the Committee on Claims.

Hotchkiss, Julius.—He was born in Middletown, Connecticut, in 1810; received a common-school education; turned his attention to mercantile pursuits, which he subsequently merged into the manufacturing business; when his native place was organized into a city, he was elected its first Mayor; he was twice elected to the State Legislature; was a candidate in 1854 for the office of Comptroller of the State; and in 1867 he was elected a Representative from Connecticut to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Territories and Freedmen's Affairs. Re-elected to the Forty-first Congress.

Houck, Jacob, Jr.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from 1841 to 1843.

Hough, David.—He was a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire from 1803 to 1807.

Hough, William J.—He was born in New York; served in the Assembly of that State, in 1835 and 1836; and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1845 to 1847.

Houghton, Sherman O.—He was born in New York, April 10, 1828; educated at a commercial institute; entered the army as a private in 1846, and was sent to California and afterwards to Mexico, where he served until the close of the war with that country, having been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant; adopted the profession of law; was Mayor of San Francisco in 1855; and elected to the Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses, serving on the Committees on Post Offices and Post Roads, Pacific Railroad, and Weights and Measures.

House, John F.—Born in Williamson County, Tennessee, January 9, 1827; graduated at Lebanon Law School in 1850, and settled in Clarksville to practice law. He was elected a member of the State Legislature in 1853; was a Presidential Elector in 1860; in 1861 was a member of the Provisional Congress of Confederate States; entered the Southern Army and remained till the close of the war; and was paroled at Columbus, Mississippi, soon after the surrender. He was a member of the House of the Tennessee Constitutional Convention of 1870, and was elected in 1784 a Representative from Tennessee to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Houston, George S.—He was born in Williamson County, Tennessee, January 17, 1811, but removed, when quite young, to the Fifth Congressional District of Alabama, where he was educated, and has since resided. Soon after attaining the age of twenty-one he was admitted to the bar, and elected to the Alabama Legislature and served two sessions. He was also, for a time, Attorney for the State, or Solicitor; and was a second time elected to the Legislature. He was elected a Representative to Congress in 1841, and continued to serve, by successive elections, until 1849, when he voluntarily retired, for the purpose of resuming the practice of law. He was again elected to Congress, in 1851, and subsequently re-elected, serving on several of the leading Committees, and officiating during the Thirty-fifth Congress as Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary; having, during a former session, acted as Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He was also a member of the special Committee of Thirty-three. Withdrew in February, 1861. He was a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866. He was Governor of Alabama from 1874 to 1876.

Houston, James.—He was born in Maryland; was liberally educated, and adopted the profession of law; and in 1806 he was appointed, by President Jefferson, United States Judge for the District of Maryland.

Houston, John.—He was early distinguished in the Revolutionary movement, and was one of the four persons to call the first meeting of the Friends of Liberty, in 1774, at Savannah; was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1775 to 1777; and was a member of its first Naval Committee, and would have signed the Declaration of Independence had he not been called home to counteract the influence of Dr. Zubly in opposition to it. He was a member of the State Council in May 1777; Governor of Georgia from 1778 to 1784; in 1792 appointed first Judge of the Supreme Court of Georgia; and in 1787 Commissioner for settling the boundary between Georgia and South Carolina. He died in Savannah, July 20, 1796. He was the son of Sir Patrick Houston.

Houston, John W.—Born in Sussex County, Delaware; studied at Newark Academy, and graduated at Yale College in 1834. He studied law with John M. Clayton, and was admitted to the bar in 1837. He was Secretary of State in 1841; a Representative in Congress from Delaware from 1845 to 1851; and in 1856 he was appointed Judge of the Supreme Court of Delaware. He was a Delegate to the "Peace Congress" of 1861.

Houston, Sam.—Born in Rockbridge County, Virginia, March 2, 1793. He lost his father when quite young, and his mother removed with her family to the banks of the Tennessee, at that time the limit of civilization. Here he received but a scanty education; he passed several years among the Cherokee Indians, and, in fact, through all his life, he seems to have held opinions with Rousseau, and retained a predilection for life in the wilderness. After having served for a time as clerk to a country trader and kept a school, in 1813 he enlisted in the army, and served under General Jackson in the war with the Creek Indians. He distinguished himself on several occasions, and, at the conclusion of the war, he had risen to the rank of Lieutenant, but soon resigned his commission and commenced the study of law at Nashville. It was about this time that he began his political life. After holding several minor offices in Tennessee, he was, in 1823, elected to Congress, and continued a member of that body until, in 1827, he became Governor of Tennessee. In 1829, before the expiration of his gubernatorial term, he resigned his office, and went to take up his abode among the Cherokees in Arkansas. During his residence among the Indians he became acquainted with the frauds practiced upon them by the Government agents, and undertook a mission to Washington for the purpose of exposing them. In the execution of this project he met with but little success; he became involved in lawsuits, and returned to his Indian friends. During a visit to Texas he was requested to allow his name to be used in the canvass for a Convention which was to meet to form a Constitution for Texas, prior to its admission into the Mexican Union. He consented, and was unanimously elected. The Constitution drawn up by the Convention was rejected by Santa Anna, at that time in power, and the disaffection of the Texans caused thereby, was still further heightened by a demand upon them to give up their arms. They determined upon resistance; a militia was organized, and Austin, the founder of the colony, was elected Commander-in-Chief, in which office he was shortly after succeeded by General Houston. He conducted the war with vigor, and finally brought it to a successful termination by the battle of San Jacinto, which was fought in April, 1836. In May, 1836, he signed a treaty acknowledging the independence of Texas, and in October of the same year he was inaugurated the first President of the Republic. At the end of his term of office, as the same person could not constitutionally be elected President twice in succession, he became a member of the Texas Congress. In 1841, however, he was again elevated to the Presidential chair. During the whole time that he held that office, it was his favorite policy to effect the annexation of Texas to the United States; but he retired from office before the consummation of his wishes. In 1846 Texas became one of the States of the Union, and General Houston was elected to the Senate, of which body he remained a member until 1859, the close of the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving on the Committee on Indian Affairs; in 1859 he was elected Governor of Texas. In a letter that he addressed to the compiler of this volume, he said, in his characteristic manner, that he "had risen from a Sergeant up to President of a Republic, and down to a Senator of the United States Senate." Died in Huntersville, Texas, July 25, 1863. His name was Sam, not Samuel as generally printed.

Houston, William.—He was a Delegate from Georgia to the Continental Congress from 1784 to 1787, and was a member of the Convention which formed the Federal Constitution, but did not sign the instrument.

Houston, William C.—He graduated at Princeton College in 1768; was a Professor of Mathematics in the same; and a Delegate from New Jersey to the Continental Congress from 1779 to 1782, and again in 1784 and 1785. Died in 1788.

Hovey, Alvin P.—Born at Mount Vernon, Ohio, May 8, 1821; studied law and came to the bar in 1843; entered the volunteer service during the Rebellion as a Major; served with distinction as Colonel and Brigadier-General at Shiloh, Corinth, Champion Hill and Vicksburg, and was made a brevet Major-General. After the war he resigned and was appointed Minister Resident to Peru in 1866.

Howard, Benjamin.—He was a Representative in Congress from Kentucky from 1807 to 1810, when he was appointed Governor of Indiana Territory. He was appointed Brigadier-General in the United States Army in 1813; and was once Governor of Missouri Territory. He died at St. Louis, Missouri, September 18, 1814.

Howard, Benjamin C.—He was born in Maryland; graduated at Princeton College in 1809; commanded a volunteer company at the battle of North Point in 1814; was a Presidential Elector in 1828; and was a Representative in Congress from Maryland from 1829 to 1833, and again from 1835 to 1839; from 1835 to 1850 he was a General of Militia; was a Reporter of the Decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States from 1843 to 1863; and Democratic candidate for Governor of Maryland in 1861. Died in Baltimore in 1872, aged 81 years. He was also a Delegate to the "Peace Congress" of 1861; son of John E. Howard.

Howard, George.—He was a native of Maryland; became acting Governor in 1831, and in 1832 he was elected Governor of Maryland, remaining in office until 1833.

Howard, Henry.—He was born in Cranston, Rhode Island, April 2, 1826; studied law and came to the bar in 1851; after practicing eight years, went in commercial business; served a number of years in the State Legislature; was a Delegate to the National Convention of 1856, which nominated Fremont; was a Presidential Elector in 1872; and in 1873, without soliciting the honor, was elected Governor of Rhode Island; and re-elected in 1874, and declined a re-nomination for 1875. He is a man of culture and more fond of literature than politics.

Howard, Jacob M.—He was born in Shaftsbury, Vermont, July 10, 1805; was educated at the Academies of Bennington and Brattleborough, and at Williams' College, where he graduated in 1830; studied law, and taught in an academy in Massachusetts for a time; removed to Michigan in 1832, and came to the bar of that Territory in 1833; in 1838 he was a member of the Legislature of the State; from 1841 to 1843 he was a Representative in Congress from Michigan; in 1854 he was elected Attorney-General of the State, twice re-elected, serving in all six years; in 1862 he was elected a Senator in Congress, in place of K. S. Bingham, deceased, for the term ending in 1865, serving as Chairman of the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, and as a member of the Committees on Military Affairs, the Judiciary, and Private Land Claims. He was re-elected a Senator in Congress for the term commencing in 1865 and ending in 1871, serving on the Committees on Claims, Private Land Claims, the Library, the Special Joint Committee on the Rebellious States, and as Chairman of that on Ordnance. He received from Williams College in 1866, the degree of LL. D., and was a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of the same year. Died at Detroit, April 2, 1871. As an author he published in 1847 a translation from the French of the "Secret Memoirs of the Empress Josephine." He drew up the platform of the first convention ever held of the Republican party in 1854, and is said to have given it its name.

Howard, John Eager.—He was born June 4, 1752, in Baltimore County, Maryland, and graduated at Princeton College. He entered the army in 1776 as a Captain in the Regiment of Colonel J. C. Hall; in the following year he was promoted, till finally he succeeded to the command of the Second Maryland Regiment. He was an efficient coadjutor of Greene during the campaign of the South, distinguishing himself at the battle of Cowpens, when, says Lee, "he seized the critical moment, and turned the fortune of the day;" also at Guilford, and the Eutaws. He was in the engagement of White Plains, Germantown, Monmouth, Camden, and Hobkirk's Hill. Having been trained to the infantry service, he was remarkably apt at charging into close battle with fixed bayonet; at Cowpens this mode of fighting was resorted to for the first time in the war, and in this battle he had in his hands at one time the swords of seven officers who had surrendered to him personally.

On this occasion he saved the life of the British General O'Hara, whom he found clinging to his stirrup and asking quarter. When the army was disbanded he retired to his paternal estate near Baltimore. In 1787 he was a Delegate to the Continental Congress, and was in 1788 chosen Governor of Maryland, and held the office three years. He was a Presidential Elector in 1792; and a Senator of the United States from Maryland from 1796 to 1803, and was President pro tem. of the Senate in the Sixth Congress. He died October 12, 1827.

Howard, Tilghman A.—Born near Pickensville, South Carolina, November 14, 1797. He received a limited education, and commenced active life as a clerk in a store, and as a schoolmaster; removed to Tennessee and devoted himself to the law; when twenty-seven years of age was elected a member of the Tennessee Legislature; was a Jackson Elector in 1830; during that year removed to Indiana, and was appointed, by President Jackson, District Attorney for that State; and was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to Texas in 1844, in which Republic he died, August 16, 1844. His term of service as a Representative in Congress from Indiana was from 1839 to 1841.

Howard, Volney E.—He was born in Norridge-wood, Maine; studied law; emigrated to Mississippi, where he distinguished himself as an editor, and fought two duels, first with S. S. Prentiss, and next with Governor McNutt; and, having emigrated to Texas, was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1849 to 1853.

Howard, William.—Born in Virginia, and was elected a Representative from Ohio, to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the Committee on Revival and Unfinished Business.

Howard, William A.—He was born in Vermont; graduated at Middlebury College in 1839; and, having taken up his residence in Michigan, was elected a Representative from that State to the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Congresses, and was a member of the Committee on Ways and Means. Having contested the seat of G. B. Cooper in 1860, he became a member of the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the select Committee of Thirty-three. In 1861 he was appointed, by President Lincoln, Postmaster at Detroit. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866. In 1869 he was appointed Minister to China, but declined the position.

Howe, Albert R.—He was born in Brookfield, Massachusetts, January 2, 1840; was well educated; served in the Forty-seventh Massachusetts Infantry as Sergeant, Lieutenant, and Acting Adjutant, participating in the campaign in North Carolina; was commissioned Second Lieutenant in the Fifth Massachusetts Cavalry; promoted to be Major, serving in Virginia and Texas until November, 1865; settled in Mississippi, on a cotton plantation, in 1865; was a member of the Mississippi State Convention in 1868; a Delegate to the Chicago National Convention in 1868; appointed Treasurer of Panola County in 1869; was a member of the Legislature in 1870, 1871, and 1872; and elected to the Forty-third Congress serving on the Committee on Claims.

Taught at Hallowell Academy, Maine, two years; and in Dinwiddie County, Virginia, two years; and also practiced medicine in the latter place from 1822 to 1829; removed to Hallowell in 1830; was State Senator in 1842 and 1843; Governor of Maine from 1850 to 1853; agent for the United States Treasury for the New England States from 1857 to 1859, and from 1859 to 1861 a Commissioner under the Reciprocity Treaty with Great Britain. Received the degree of M. D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1822; and LL. D. from Wat College in 1851. Died at Hallowell, February 6, 1869.

Hubbard, John H.—He was born in Salisbury, Litchfield County, Connecticut, in 1805; received a good common-school education; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1836, and was a regular practitioner of his profession until 1855. For five years he was Attorney for the County of Litchfield; was twice elected to the State Senate; and early in 1863 he was elected a Representative from Connecticut, to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committees on Patents and Expenditures in the Post Office Department. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Roads and Canals, and on Patents. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866.

Hubbard, Jonathan H.—Born in 1768. He was one of the oldest and most esteemed citizens of Vermont, and was distinguished as a jurist; he was a Representative in Congress from 1809 to 1811, and for many years was one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Vermont. His death occurred where most of his life was spent, at Windsor, Vermont, September 20, 1849.

Hubbard, Joseph Stillman.—Born in New Haven, Connecticut, September 7, 1823; graduated at Yale College in 1843; was assistant in the High School Observatory in 1844; appointed Professor of Mathematics at the Naval Observatory at Washington in 1845, which position he occupied until his death. The volumes of Washington "Observations" exhibit his skill as an observer and a computer. He made valuable contributions to Gould's Astronomical Journal; one on Biela's Comet, and on the orbit of Egeria. The article "Telescope" in the New American Encyclopaedia was written by him. He died in New Haven, August 16, 1863.

Hubbard, Levi.—He was a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1813 to 1815; a State Senator in 1806, 1807, 1811, and 1816; also for some years a County Treasurer; a State Councilor in 1829; a Presidential Elector in 1820 and 1828; having also been in 1804 and 1805 a member of the State Legislature.

He was zealous in the cause of education, and assisted in the establishment of the City High School at Middletown.

Hubbard, Thomas H.—He was a native of New Haven, Connecticut, and a graduate of Yale College in 1798. He studied law, and settled at Hamilton, in Madison County, New York, and was there Surrogate for ten years. In 1823 he removed to Utica, and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1817 to 1819, and from 1821 to 1823. He was chosen Presidential Elector in 1812, 1844, and 1852. He died in Utica, May 23, 1857, aged seventy-six years.

Hubbell, Edwin N.—He was born in Coxsackie, New York, August 13, 1815; received an academical education; was chiefly devoted to the pursuits of manufacturing and farming; held for a time the office of County Supervisor; and in 1864 was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Manufactures, Expenditures in the War Department, and Free Schools in the District of Columbia.

Hubbell, James R.—He was born in Delaware County, Ohio, in 1824, received an ordinary education; adopted the profession of law; served four times in the State Legislature, and twice as Speaker of the House; was a Presidential Elector in 1856; and in 1864 he was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on the War Department and Agriculture. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866.

Hubbell, Jay A.—He was born in Avon, Michigan, September 15, 1829; graduated at the University of Michigan in 1853; was admitted to the bar in 1855; removed to Ontonagon, Michigan, in 1855; was elected District Attorney of the Upper Peninsula in 1857 and 1859; removed to Houghton in 1860; was elected Prosecuting Attorney in 1861, 1863, and 1865; was engaged in the practice of law until 1870; was elected to the Forty-third Congress, and re-elected to the Forty-fourth, serving on the Committees on Banking and Currency, District of Columbia, and Mines and Mining.

Hubbell, Sidney A.—He was born in Connecticut, emigrated to New Mexico and was appointed an Associate Justice of the United States Court for that Territory, residing at Santa Fé.

Hubbell, William S.—He was born in New York; was a member of the Assembly of that State in 1841; and a Representative in Congress from the same from 1843 to 1845.

Hubley, Edward B.—From 1835 to 1839 a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania; and died February 23, 1856, in Philadelphia.

Hudson, Charles.—Born in Marlborough, Massachusetts, November 14, 1795. He spent his youth as a student in a village school, and also as a teacher, and at the age of twenty-one was a day-laborer on a farm. In 1819 he was licensed as a preacher of the Universalist persuasion; was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature from 1828 to 1833; a State Senator from 1833 to 1839; a State Councilor from 1839 to 1841; and was elected to Congress in 1841, where he remained until 1849. Hughes, Christopher.—He was a native of Maryland, a man of education and culture, and held the following diplomatic appointments: Secretary of Legation to England in 1814; same to Sweden and Norway in 1816; acted as Chargé d'Affaires in 1817, and commissioned as such in 1819; from 1825 to 1830 Chargé d'Affaires to the Netherlands, with special instructions to Denmark; from 1830 to 1840 he was Chargé d'Affaires to Sweden and Norway; re-commissioned in 1842, and returned to this country in 1845. He died in Baltimore, September 18, 1849.

Hughes, George W.—He was born in New York in 1806; was educated at the West Point Academy, where he graduated in 1827; adopted the profession of Civil Engineer, and employed as such for some years in New York; in 1830 he was appointed a Civil Engineer in the General Government, in which he remained until 1838, when he was transferred to the Corps of Topographical Engineers in the Regular Army; resigned in 1851 and was made President of the Northern Central Railroad; and was elected 1859 a Representative from Maryland to the Thirty-sixth Congress. He visited Europe to perfect himself in his studies; helped to locate the railroad across the Isthmus of Panama; served with distinction in the War with Mexico, receiving two brevets; and he died at West River, Maryland, in 1870.

Hughes, James.—He was born at Hampstead, Maryland, November 24, 1823, and was educated at the State University of Indiana. He began the practice of law at Bloomington, Indiana, in 1842; was appointed First Lieutenant of the Sixteenth Regiment of United States Infantry, one of the ten regiments in the Mexican War, and served till the close of the War, and then returned to the practice of law in Bloomington. He was elected Circuit Judge in 1852 for six years; in 1853 was elected Professor of Law in the University of Indiana, and served three years. He was elected a Representative from Indiana in the Thirty-fifth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Territories. In 1861 he was appointed by President Buchanan a Judge of the Court of Claims, which he resigned in 1865. In May, 1866, he was appointed by President Johnson a Cotton Agent for the Treasury Department; and subsequently settled in Washington City as an Attorney-at-law, but was soon afterwards elected to the Legislature of Indiana.

Hughes, James M.—He was a native of Kentucky, and a Representative in Congress from Missouri from 1843 to 1845.

Hughes, Robert W.—Born in Powhatan County, Virginia, June 6, 1821, his father, Jesse, having served in the War of 1812, and his grandfather in the Revolution; was chiefly educated at the Caldwell Institute, North Carolina; was for a time a tutor in the Bingham High School; studied law, and came to the bar in 1846, locating in Richmond; from 1853 until 1857 he was the Editor of the Richmond Examiner; wrote for two years for the Washington Union; attended the Charleston Convention of 1860; subsequently wrote for the Republic and State Journal in Richmond; in 1873 he was the Republican candidate for Governor of Virginia, but not elected; and in 1874 he was appointed United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Virginia. He was the author of two biographies: of Secretary of War John B. Floyd, and of General Joseph E. Johnston.

Hughes, Thomas H.—He was a Representative in Congress from New Jersey from 1829 to 1833.

Hughston, Jonas A.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative from that State to the Thirty-fourth Congress. In 1845 he was District Attorney for Delaware County; and was subsequently Marshal of Shanghai, where he died in 1862.

Hugonin, Daniel, Jr.—He was born in Montgomery County, New York, and was distinguished as an officer in the war of 1812, and participated in the stirring events on the Niagara frontier, and the battle of Queenstown, with General Scott, where he was taken prisoner; he was a member of Congress from New York from 1825 to 1827; and a member of the New York Legislature, and at a later period United States Marshal for the Territory of Wisconsin, under an appointment from President Harrison. He died at Kenosha, Wisconsin, June, 1850, aged fifty-nine.

Re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committee on Reconstruction; and in 1867 received from Hamilton College the degree of LL.D.

Hulburd, Hiland R.—He was appointed in 1865 Deputy Comptroller of the Currency, and in 1867 he was made Comptroller, remaining in office until 1873.

Hull, William.—He was born in Derby, Connecticut, June 24, 1753; graduated at Yale College in 1772; came to the bar in 1775, but soon entered the Revolutionary Army as a Captain; was rapidly promoted, and became Inspector of the Army under Baron Steuben; was present at the battles of White Plains, Trenton, Princeton, Stillwater, Saratoga, Monmouth, and Stony Point, and for his services at Morristana he received the thanks of Washington. Two years after his surrender he was tried by court-martial and sentenced to be shot, but on account of his age and public services the sentence was remitted by President Madison, by whom he had been made commander-in-chief. It is now agreed among historians that his reasons for giving up Detroit to the British General Brock were not founded in cowardice or disloyalty. In 1824 he published a series of letters in vindication of himself, and died at Newtown, Massachusetts, November 29, 1825.

Humphrey, Charles.—Born in Haverford, Pennsylvania, about 1712; was brought up in the milling business, in which he was long and extensively engaged; was a patriot of the Revolution; a member of the Provincial Assembly from 1764 to 1774; and a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1774 to 1776; although he opposed the measures of Great Britain, he voted against the Declaration of Independence. Died in Haverford in 1786.

Humphrey, James.—Born in Fairfield, Connecticut, October 9, 1811; graduated at Amherst College in 1831, of which his father, Rev. Heman Humphrey, was for many years President; had charge, in 1832, of Plainfield Academy, Connecticut; studied law, and settled for practice in Louisville, Kentucky, where he remained only one year. In 1838 he removed to the city of New York, where he practiced his profession; and in 1853 he was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and of the Select Committee of Thirty-three on the Rebellious States. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress. During the summer of 1865 he visited Europe on a tour of pleasure. In the Thirty-ninth Congress he served on the Committee on Commerce, and as Chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the Navy Department. Died in Brooklyn, New York, June 16, 1866.

Humphrey, J. M.—He was born in Holland,

Erie County, New York, September 21, 1819; received a common-school education; adopted the profession of law; was District Attorney for Erie County in 1857, 1858, and 1859, was a member of the State Senate from 1863 to 1865; and was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committee on Commerce and the Special Committee on the Civil Service. In 1865 he was President of the "Democratic State Convention." Re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the additional Committee on Expenditures in the State Department.

Humphrey, Renben.—He was for four years a Senator in the Legislature of New York from Onondaga County; and a Representative in Congress from that State from 1807 to 1809.

Humphreys, Charles.—He was a Delegate from Pennsylvania to the Continental Congress from 1774 to 1776.

Humphreys, David.—He was born in Derby, Connecticut, in 1753; educated at Yale College; in 1780, became a Colonel and Aid-de-Camp to Washington, with whom he resided for a considerable time; in 1784 he accompanied Thomas Jefferson to Europe as Secretary of Legation; in 1786, he was elected to the Legislature of Connecticut; was Minister to Portugal in 1791; to Algiers in 1793; and to Spain in 1796; and he commanded two Connecticut Regiments in the War of 1812. He acquired considerable fame as a writer, and especially of poetry, and a collection of his writings was published in New York in 1804. Died in New Haven, February 21, 1818.

Humphreys, David C.—He was born in Alabama; and was appointed by President Grant from that State one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, for the District of Columbia.

Humphreys, Jacob.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1819 to 1821.

Humphreys, Perry W.—He was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee from 1813 to 1815.

Hungerford, John P.—Born in 1769; was an officer of the Revolution; a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1813 to 1817; Brigadier-General of Virginia Militia on the Potomac in 1814; commanding in support of Commodore Porter's artillery at the "White House," in September of that year. Died at Twiford, Westmoreland County, Virginia, December 21, 1833.

Hungerford, Orrille.—He was born in Connecticut in 1790, and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1843 to 1847. He died at Watertown, April 6, 1855.

Hunt, Hiram P.—He was born in New York, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1835 to 1837, and again from 1839 to 1843.

Hunt, James B.—He was a native of New York, and for many years law partner with Michael Hoffman. He removed to Michigan about the time of its admission into the Union, and was soon called to responsible public trusts. He was a member of Congress from Michigan from 1843 to 1847. He died in Washington, August 15, 1857, aged fifty-eight years.

Hunt, Jonathan.—He represented the State of Vermont in Congress from 1827 to 1832, serving on the Committee on Public Lands, and died at Washington, May 14 of the latter year. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1807.

Hunt, Samuel.—He was a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire from 1802 to 1805.

Hunt, Theodore G.—He was born in South Carolina, and was a Representative in the Thirty-third Congress from Louisiana.

Hunt, Ward.—He was born in Utica, New York, June 14, 1810, and has always resided in his native place. He graduated at Union College in 1828, and turning his attention to law attended the law lectures of Judge Gould at Litchfield, Connecticut. In 1865 he was elected a Judge of the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, which position he held until 1872, when he was appointed a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Received from Union College and Rutgers College the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Hunt, Washington.—He was born in Windham, Greene County, New York, August 5, 1811. At the age of eighteen he entered upon the study of law, and was admitted to the bar at Lockport in 1834. In 1836 he was appointed first Judge of Niagara County, and was a Representative in Congress from 1843 to 1849, serving during his last term as Chairman of the Committee on Commerce. In 1849 he was elected Comptroller of New York, and in 1850 Governor of the State. He was temporary Chairman of the last "Whig National Convention" ever held, in 1856; and in 1860 he was tendered the nomination for the office of Vice-President, but he declined. Since that time he has lived in retirement upon a handsome farm near Lockport, dividing his attention between his friends, his books, and the pursuits of agriculture. He was a Delegate to the "Chicago Convention" in 1864, and to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866. Died in New York city, February 2, 1867.

Hunter, John.—He was a Representative in Congress from South Carolina from 1793 to 1795, and a Senator in Congress from that State from 1795 to 1796.

Hunter, John W.—He was born in the village of Bedford, Kings County, New York (now within the limits of the city of Brooklyn), October 15, 1807; after devoting himself in various ways to measures which looked to the progress and advancement of his native city, he became identified with the New York Custom-House as clerk in 1831, and in 1837 as Assistant Auditor, in which position he continued until his resignation in 1865. In 1864 his name was forged to two checks for six thousand six hundred dollars and four thousand two hundred dollars, on the Assistant Treasurer of New York, and although a suit was instituted by that officer, the entire innocence of Mr. Hunter was triumphantly vindicated, and the Treasurer not only acknowledged his error in the premises, but out of his own pocket paid all the expenses of the trial. This was considered one of the most remarkable cases of the kind on record, and only tended to brighten the fair fame of the temporary victim. In 1865 he accepted the position of Secretary of a Banking Institution in Brooklyn; and in 1866 he was elected by a large majority a Representative from New York to the Thirty-ninth Congress, in the place of James Humphrey, deceased, serving on the Committees on Commerce, Banking, and Currency, and Expenses in the Navy Department.

Hunter, Morton C.—He was born in Versailles, Ripley County, Indiana, February 5, 1825; went through a scientific course of studies in the Indiana State University; studied law and graduated as a lawyer at the above institution. In 1858 he was elected to the State Legislature; in 1860 he was a Presidential Elector; in 1852 he raised the Eighty-second Regiment of Indiana Volunteers, and as Colonel commanded it until the fall of Atlanta in 1864; he also had command of a brigade under General Sherman in his march to the sea, and continued with the Fourth-tenth Army Corps until its arrival in Washington. In March, 1865, he was brevetted a Brigadier-General; and in 1866 he was elected a Representative from Indiana to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Territories and Mines and Mining. Re-elected to the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses.

Hunter, Naisworthy.—He was a Delegate in Congress from the Territory of Mississippi from 1801 to 1802. Died March 11, 1802.

T.—He was born in Essex County, Virginia, April 21, 1809; was educated at the University of Virginia; adopted the profession of law, and came to the bar in 1830; served three years in the State Legislature; and was first elected a Representative in Congress from his native State in 1837, when he served two terms, and was re-elected in 1845, officiating during the Twenty-sixth Congress as Speaker. In 1847 he was elected a Senator in Congress for a long term, and re-elected for the term ending in 1859, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Finance, and as a member of the Committees on the Library, and on the Pacific Railroad. He was re-elected to the Senate in 1859 for another long term but was expelled, July, 1861. He took part in the Rebellion as Secretary of State, and a member of Congress in the Rebel Government. After the Rebellion he was arrested as a prisoner of State, but released on his parole, and in 1867 he was pardoned by President Johnson.

Hunter, Taliaferro.—He was a native of Virginia, and in 1860 was appointed Fourth Auditor of the Treasury, which position he only held until 1861.

Hunter, William.—He was a Representative in Congress from Vermont from 1817 to 1819. He was also a member of the State Legislature in 1807 and 1809, and a State Councillor in 1809, 1814, and 1815.

Hunter, William.—Born in Newport, Rhode Island, November 23, 1775; graduated at Brown University in 1791; went to London and studied medicine, but soon changed to the law, and entered at the Inner Temple in London; and on his return to Newport, at the age of twenty-one, was admitted to the bar. In 1799 he was a Representative in the General Assembly of Rhode Island, and re-elected at different periods from that time to the year 1811, when he was chosen a Senator in Congress, and held his seat till 1821. His speeches, especially those on the acquisition of Florida, and the Missouri Compromise, won him a high reputation as a sagacious statesman and a finished orator. In 1824 he was Chargé to Brazil, an office which was, in 1842, raised to a full mission, and he was continued as Minister till 1845, when he retired from public life, and resided at Newport until his death, which occurred December 3, 1849.

Hunter, William.—Born in Newport, Rhode Island, November 8, 1805; and was son of the former Senator bearing the same name; in his fifteenth year he entered the Military Academy at West Point as a Cadet, but after two years was obliged to resign on account of an affection of the eyes; he subsequently resumed study in his father's office and prepared himself for the legal profession; devoting special attention to the French and Spanish languages; in 1826 he was admitted to the bar in New Orleans, where he had long intended to locate; in 1827 he was attacked by the yellow fever, and returned to Newport to recruit his health; then practiced law in Providence until 1829, when various circumstances induced him to accept a clerkship in the Department of State at Washington, acting chiefly as a translator; in 1852 he was made Chief Clerk by Daniel Webster; in 1853 he was offered the position of First Assistant Secretary but declined; and in 1866 he was appointed Second Assistant Secretary of the Department, which he accepted and in which he still continues.

Hunter, William F.—He was born in Alexandria, Virginia, December 10, 1808; had few educational advantages; practiced the trade of a cabinet-maker, until 1840; and, having studied law, removed to Ohio, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1849 to 1853; since which time he has devoted himself to his profession.

Hunter, William H.—He was a Representative in Congress from Ohio from 1837 to 1839.

Huntington, Abel.—He was born in Norwich, Connecticut, but at an early age removed to East Hampton, Long Island, and for sixty years was a practicing physician. He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1833 to 1837. He was Collector of Sag Harbor, under President Polk; and member of the "New York Constitutional Convention" of 1846. He died at East Hampton, May 18, 1858, aged eighty-two years.

Huntington, Benjamin.—Was a native of Norwich, Connecticut; graduated at Yale College in 1761, and practiced law in his native town. He was a Judge of the Superior Court of the State from 1793 to 1798, and was a member of the Continental Congress from 1780 to 1784, and also from 1787 to 1788; and a Representative in Congress under the Constitution from 1790 to 1791. He was Mayor of Norwich for twelve years, and he died in 1800. Received from Dartmouth College the degree of LL.B.

Huntington, Ebenezer.—He was born in Norwich, Connecticut, December 26, 1754; and died there June 17, 1834, aged ninety-seven years. He graduated at Yale College in 1775; joined the army the same year as a volunteer; was soon commissioned as a Lieutenant; in 1776 he was appointed a Captain, and also Deputy Adjutant-General; in 1777 a Major; in 1779 a Lieutenant-Colonel; and he was present at the surrender of Cornwallis, at Yorktown. He was twice elected to Congress from Connecticut, serving from 1810 to 1811, and again from 1817 to 1819. In 1799 he was, at the recommendation of Washington, appointed a Brigadier-General in the army raised by Congress when expectations were entertained of a war with France. He was one of the most efficient men in the army.

Huntington, Elisha M.—He was born in New York, and in 1841 he was appointed Commissioner of the General Land Office, holding the position until 1842.

Huntington, E. M.—He was an emigrant from New England to Indiana, and about the year 1844 was appointed United States Judge for the District of Indiana, residing at Terre Haute.

Huntington, Jabez W.—Born in Norwich, Connecticut, November 8, 1788, and graduated at Yale College in 1806. He studied law at Litchfield, and commenced to practice there, where he remained thirty years. In 1828 he was elected to the State Legislature, and in 1829 was a Representative in Congress; which office he filled until 1834, when he removed to Norwich, and became a Judge of the Supreme Court of Errors, and was chosen a Judge of the Superior Court of his State. He was a Senator in Congress from 1840 until his death, which occurred at Norwich, November 1, 1847.

Haven, Connecticut; graduated at Yale College in 1808; served in the Legislature of Connecticut several years; was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1825 to 1833; in that year he was appointed Attorney for the State; and was appointed by President Polk, Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia. Died in New Haven, August 27, 1872.

Ingham, Samuel.—He was born in Hebron, Connecticut, September 5, 1793; received a good English education in Vermont, and studied law in Connecticut, having been admitted to the bar in 1815, and in 1817 he settled at Saybrook, which has since been his home. From 1827 to 1835 he was State's Attorney for the County of Middlesex, and again in 1843 and 1844; he was a Judge of Probate from 1829 to 1833; Judge of the Middlesex County Court from 1849 to 1853; and was a Representative in Congress from Connecticut from 1835 to 1839, having officiated as Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, and as a member of the Committee on Commerce. He also served a number of years in the Senate and House of Representatives of Connecticut, three years as Speaker, and was one year Clerk of the House; he was appointed in 1837, by the State, as agent to prosecute certain claims against the United States, and was successful; and in 1857 he was appointed by President Buchanan Commissioner of Customs. In 1854 he was a candidate for the office of United States Senator, and received the entire vote of his party in the Legislature, but Senator Foster was elected.

Ingham, Samuel D.—He was born in Pennsylvania, September 16, 1779; received a good education; had the management for some years of a paper-mill in Eastern New Jersey; served three years in the Pennsylvania Legislature; held for a time the office of Prothonotary to one of the Courts of that State; and was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1813 to 1818, and from 1822 to 1829, serving as Chairman of several Committees, when he was appointed by President Jackson Secretary of the Treasury. Died at Trenton, New Jersey, June 5, 1860.

Innes, Harry.—Born in Caroline County, Virginia, in 1762; in 1776 and 1777 he was employed by the Committee of Safety of Virginia to superintend Chipil's lead mines; in 1779 he was appointed by the Virginia Legislature to settle land claims in the Abingdon district; in 1783 was chosen Judge of the Supreme Court for the District of Kentucky; in 1785 and 1787 was Attorney-General of that State; Judge of the United States District Court for Kentucky from 1787 till his death. In 1791 he was one of the Local Board of War to call out the militia on expeditions against the Indians. He died in Frankfort, Kentucky, September 20, 1816.

Iredell, James.—Born in Chowan County, North Carolina, in 1788, and graduated at Princeton College in 1806. He was for several years in the Legislature of that State, part of the time Speaker of the House; in 1812 commanded a Company of Volunteers, who went to Norfolk to repel the British; in 1810 he was appointed Judge of the Superior Court; in 1827 was elected Governor of North Carolina; and was a Senator in Congress from 1828 to 1831. Toward the close of his life he was a Reporter of the Decisions of the Supreme Court, and died at Edenton, April 13, 1853.

Irish, George.—He was born in 1791; educated for the bar, and was for many years a Judge of the Supreme Court of Mississippi, where he died September 17, 1836.

Irvin, Alexander.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1847 to 1849.

Irvin, David.—He was appointed a Judge of the United States for the Territory of Wisconsin in 1837; and although the records show that David Ervin had previously been a Judge for the Territory of Michigan, it is presumed the two names represent the same man.

Irvin, James.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1841 to 1845.

Irvin, William W.—He was a member of the State Legislature of Ohio, and Judge of the Supreme Court of the State, and a Representative in Congress from Ohio from 1829 to 1833. He died at Lancaster, Ohio, April, 1842.

Irvine, William.—Born in Ireland; educated for the medical profession; served as Surgeon on board a British ship, in the war which began in 1754, and after the peace of 1763, settled at Carlisle, Pennsylvania. In 1774 he was a member of the "State Convention;" in 1776 he served in Canada, and accompanied Colonel Thompson from Sorelle to dislodge the enemy from Trois Rivieres; but was taken prisoner June 16, and remained as such at Quebec until exchanged in 1778. On his release he was promoted to the command of the Second Pennsylvania Regiment, and in 1781 the defense of the North-western frontier was intrusted to him, and he attained the rank of Major-General. He was a Presidential Elector in 1797; was a Representative in Congress, after the war, from 1793 to 1795. He was a Commissioner during the Whisky Insurrection of 1794, and removed shortly after to Philadelphia, and was appointed Superintendent of Military Stores. He died July 30, 1804, aged sixty-three years. He was also a Delegate from Pennsylvania to the Continental Congress from 1786 to 1788.

Irvine, William.—He was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on the Militia.

Irving, Washington.—He was born in the city of New York, April 3, 1783; received an ordinary school education; in his sixteenth year he began the study of law, and in his nineteenth, became a writer for the local press; in 1804 he visited Europe for his health, where he spent two years; on his return to America, he was admitted to the bar, but never practiced the profession of law. In 1807 he began his career as an author by projecting a serial work called "Salmagundi," and his last work, the "Life of George Washington," was completed and published in 1859. Between these two dates, he produced a large number of works, in all the departments of polite literature, which were eminently successful, and placed him in the front rank of American authors. The only public positions ever accepted by Mr. Irving were those of Secretary of Legation to England in 1829, and Minister Plenipotentiary to Spain in 1842, and it was during his prolonged residence in this latter country that he collected the materials for several of his more important productions. By his pure character and rare abilities he won the universal respect and affection of his countrymen, and died on November 28, 1859, at his residence, known as "Sunnyside," beautifully located on the Hudson River, which was the theme of some of his most delightful writings. His writings are too numerous even to be specified in a brief record like the present.

Irving, William.—He was born in the city of New York, August 16, 1766; from 1787 to 1791 was an Indian trader on the Mohawk; was subsequently a merchant in New York city, and a Representative in Congress from 1813 to 1819, and a member of the Committee on Commerce and Manufactures. He was a brother of Washington Irving, for whose "Salmagundi" he wrote several poems and essays. He was distinguished for his colloquial powers, and was popular as well as an influential member of Congress, but he resigned before the expiration of his term, on account of his health. He died November 9, 1821.

Irwin, Jared.—Born in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, in 1751; removed to Georgia at the age of seven; was for many years on the Indian frontier, and during the latter part of the Revolutionary War, was actively employed against the Tories and Indians. At the close of the war he was a member of the State Legislature, and of the Convention which adopted the United States Constitution in 1789; Governor of the State from 1796 to 1798; President of the State Constitutional Convention in 1798; and many years member and President of the State Senate; was again Governor from 1806 to 1809; removing to Pennsylvania, he was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1813 to 1817. Died at Union, Washington County, Georgia, March 1, 1818. Mr. A. H. Stephens of Georgia informed the compiler that Governor Irwin did not remove to Pennsylvania and was not in Congress, but a man bearing his name was certainly in Congress from Pennsylvania.

Irwin, Thomas.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1829 to 1831, and was in the latter year appointed by President Jackson United States Judge of the Western District of Pennsylvania.

Irwin, William.—He was born in Ohio, and after receiving a good education removed to California in 1852; turned his attention to the newspaper business, and became editor of the Yreka Union; served several times in the State Legislature; when a vacancy occurred in the Governorship in February, 1875, he was chosen President of the Senate, and acting Lieutenant-Governor; and at the ensuing election in September he was elected Governor of California.

Irwin, William W.—He was a member of Congress from Pennsylvania from 1841 to 1843; and from 1843 to 1847 he was Chargé d'Affaires of the United States to Denmark. He died in Pittsburg, September 15, 1856.

Isacks, Jacob C.—He was born in Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee from 1823 to 1833.

Iverson, Alfred.—Born in Burke County, Georgia, December 3, 1798; graduated at Princeton College in 1820; a lawyer by profession; served three years as a member of the House of Representatives and one year as Senator in the Legislature of Georgia. Twice elected Judge of the Supreme Court of that State for terms of three and four years; was one of the Electors at Large in the Presidential Election of 1844; elected a Representative to the Thirtieth Congress, and served two years. In 1854 he was elected to the United States Senate for six years from March 4, 1855, and for a long time acted as Chairman of the Committee on Claims, and as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs and the Pacific Railroad. Withdrew in February, 1861 and joined the great Rebellion.

Ives, Joseph C.—He was born in New York; appointed to the United States Army from Connecticut; and while a Lieutenant he explored, in 1857 and 1858, the Colorado River of the West, the results of which were published in 1861, in quarto form, and extensively illustrated. That volume, with one by Professor J. W. Powell, on the same region, published in 1875, constitute a complete account of very great interest to men of science.

Ives, Willard.—He was born in Watertown, New York, July 7, 1806; received a good English education; is a farmer by occupation; and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1851 to 1853. In 1846 he was elected by the Methodist Episcopal Church a Delegate to the "Christian World's Convention," which was held in London.

Izard, George.—Born in South Carolina in 1777; received a classical education, and made a tour of Europe; he was appointed Lieutenant of Artillery in 1794; Engineer of Fortifications in Charleston Harbor in 1798; Captain in 1799; aid to General Hamilton in 1799, resigned in 1803; on the breaking out of the war of 1812 he was appointed Colonel of Second Artillery; Brigadier General in 1813; Major-General in 1814; disbanded 1815; was Governor of Arkansas Territory from 1825 to his death, which occurred at Little Rock, November 22, 1828. He published "Official Correspondence with the War Department in 1814 and 1815." He was the son of Ralph Izard.

Izard, Mark W.—He was appointed Governor of the Territory of Nebraska in 1854, and remained in office until 1857.

Izard, Ralph.—Born near Charleston, South Carolina, in 1742; graduated at Cambridge University, England; his grandfather was one of the founders of South Carolina, and he inherited a large estate in land and slaves; he visited England in 1771, and the Continent in 1774. He made a second visit to France, and was appointed by Congress Commissioner at the Court of the Grand Duke of Tuscany, and resided in Paris. He sided with Arthur Lee against Silas Deane, Franklin and the other American agents in France; he returned to America July 10, 1780; was instrumental in obtaining General Greene's appointment to the Southern Army, and pledged his large estate for the purchase of ships of war in Europe; was a Delegate to the Continental Congress in 1782 and 1783; United States Senator from 1789 to 1795; President of the Senate pro tem. during the first session of the Third Congress; and was a distinguished and eloquent statesman. In the judgment of Washington no man was more honest in public life. His correspondence from 1774 to 1784, with a memoir, was published by his daughter in 1844. Died at South Bay, near Charleston, May 30, 1804.

Jack, William.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1841 to 1843.

Jackson, Andrew.—Born at Warsaw Settlement, North Carolina, March 15, 1767. When fourteen years of age he left the academy where he had been placed and entered the Revolutionary Army, and at the age of twenty-one established himself as a lawyer in Western North Carolina. When that part of the country became a Territory in 1790, President Washington appointed him Attorney of the United States for the new district. When said Territory was formed into the State of Tennessee, he was a member of the Convention which drew up the new Constitution, and he was immediately chosen a Representative in Congress, serving one term, when he was transferred to the United States Senate, where he continued until 1798. His next public position was that of Judge of the Supreme Court; and having been chosen Major-General of one of the divisions of the Tennessee Militia, he retained the office until 1814, when he went into the regular army with the same rank. He was assigned to the command of the army at New Orleans, and January 8, 1815, obtained his famous victory over the British. In 1817 and 1818 he conducted the Seminole War in Florida, and soon after retired from the army; in 1823 he was again elected a Senator in Congress, and remained there two years, having declined the mission to Mexico in 1823; he was elected President in 1828, and re-elected in 1832. The events which marked his administration were the difficulties with France, the Suppression of the Nullification Movement in South Carolina, the Indian War in Florida, and the removal of the deposits from the United States Bank. He retired to private life in 1836, and in the peaceful shades of the Hermitage in Tennessee he died, June 8, 1845. That he was a remarkable man is the undisputed verdict of his countrymen throughout the Union.

Jackson, Charles.—Born in Newburyport, Massachusetts, May 31, 1775; graduated at Harvard University in 1793; studied law, and was admitted to practice in Essex County in 1796; and became eminent in his profession; in 1803 he removed to Boston; was Judge of the Massachusetts Supreme Court from 1813 to 1824; member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1820; and in 1833 was one of the commissioners to codify the State Laws; he published a treatise upon the "Pleadings and Practice in Real Actions," 1828. Died in Boston, Massachusetts, December 13, 1855.

Jackson, Jabez.—He was born in Georgia, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1836 to 1839.

Jackson, James.—Born in Devon, England, in 1757, and came to this country in 1772. Early in the American Revolution he joined the army; in 1778 was made Brigade-Major; and in 1781 commanded the Legionary Corps of the State of Georgia. When the British evacuated Savannah, July 12, 1782, he received the keys. For his various services, the Assembly of the State presented him with a house and lot in Savannah. On the return of peace he engaged with success in the practice of law; in 1780 he fought a duel with Lieutenant-Governor Wells, whom he slew, but was wounded himself in both knees. He he was a member of the Convention which formed the first Constitution of Georgia. He was chosen a Representative in Congress in 1789 from Georgia, and after the close of his first term he successfully contested the seat of Anthony Wayne; and in 1793 he was chosen a Senator, which office he resigned in 1795. He was one of those who voted for locating the Seat of Government on the Potomac. He was Major-General of the Georgia Militia, and Governor of the State from 1798 till his election as Senator in 1801. He died March 18, 1806, aged forty-eight years.

Jackson, James.—He was born in Jefferson County, Georgia, in 1819; graduated at the University of Georgia in 1837; and having studied law, commenced the practice in 1840. In 1843 he was elected Secretary of the Senate of Georgia, holding the office one year; in 1845 he was elected to the State Legislature, and re-elected to the same position in 1847; in 1849 he was chosen by the Legislature Judge of the Western Circuit of his State, and was elected to the same office by the people in 1853, and again in 1857. In June of that year he was nominated for Congress, resigned his judgeship, and in October following was elected a Representative to the Thirty-fifth Congress, and was a member of the Committee on Claims and Revolutionary Claims. Re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress. Resigned in February, 1861, and returned to Georgia.

Jackson, James S.—He was born in Madison County, Kentucky, and adopted the profession of law;

he served in the Mexican War as a Captain of Volunteers. In 1861 he was elected a Representative from Kentucky to the Thirty-seventh Congress; but while the Rebellion was progressing, he recruited a regiment of Kentucky Cavalry; and was subsequently appointed a Brigadier-General, and was killed at the battle of Perryville in 1863, while fighting in the service of his country.

Janes, Henry F.—He was born at Brimfield, Hampden County, Massachusetts, in October, 1793; studied law in Montpelier, Vermont, and was admitted to the bar in Washington County in 1817, and commenced to practice at Waterbury in that year. From 1820 to 1830 he was Postmaster at Waterbury; he was a member of the Legislative Council from 1830 to 1834, and was a Representative in Congress from Vermont from 1834 to 1837. He was State Treasurer from 1838 to 1841; a member of the Council of Censors in 1848; and a member of the Legislature, from Waterbury, in 1855; since which time he has practiced his profession.

Jarnagin, Spencer.—Born in Granger County, Tennessee; graduated at Greenville College in 1813; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1817; and was United States Senator from Tennessee from 1841 to 1847. He died in Memphis, Tennessee, June 24, 1851.

Jarvis, Leonard.—He was born in 1782; graduated at Harvard University in 1800; and died in Surry, Maine, September, 18, 1854. He was Sheriff of Hancock County from 1821 to 1829; Collector of Customs for the Penobscot District from 1829 to 1831; and a Representative in Congress from Maine from 1831 to 1837, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs. From 1838 to 1841 he held the office of Navy Agent for the Port of Boston.

Jay, John.—Was born in New York, December 13, 1745; graduated at King's College in 1764; studied law and came to the bar in 1768; and was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1774 to 1777, and from 1778 to 1779. In 1776 he was recalled from Congress to aid in forming the Government of New York, and for that reason he was not present to sign the Declaration of Independence. From 1777 to 1779 he was Chief Justice of the State, but resigned to fill the post of President of Congress; in 1779 he was appointed Minister to Spain; was a Commissioner to negotiate peace with England; signed the definitive treaty at Paris in 1783; and was appointed by Congress Secretary of State. Though not a member, he aided at the Convention which formed the Federal Constitution; he also assisted Hamilton and Madison in editing the "Federalist;" and in 1789 he was appointed by Washington Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, which he resigned in 1794 to accept the mission to England, when he negotiated the treaty which bears his name. He was Governor of New York from 1795 to 1801, after which he retired to private life. Died in 1829.

Jay, John.—Born in New York city, June 23, 1817; graduated at Columbia College in 1836; was admitted to the bar in 1839 and practiced law; was a prominent member of the Union League Club of New York; for many years a Manager and Corresponding Secretary of the New York Historical Society, and a member of the American Geographical and Statistical Society. Was the author of many anti-slavery addresses and pamphlets; and pamphlets on matters connected with the Episcopal Church; also legal arguments, political addresses, reports, etc. He was appointed Minister to Austria, April, 1867.

Jayne, William.—Born in Springfield, Illinois, October 8, 1826; adopted the profession of medicine, and practiced 11 years in Springfield; in 1859 was elected Mayor of that city; was elected to the State Senate in 1869 and 1861; during the latter year was appointed Governor of Dakota Territory; and in 1863 he was elected a Delegate from Dakota to the Thirty-eighth Congress. After occupying his seat for some time, he was superseded by J. B. S. Todd.

Jefferson, Thomas.—He was born at Shadwell, Virginia, in 1743. His education was principally conducted by private tutors, although he passed two years at the College of William and Mary. He adopted the law as his profession; and was a member of the Legislature of Virginia from 1769 to the commencement of the American Revolution. In 1775 he was a Delegate in Congress; and on May 15, 1776, the Convention of Virginia instructed their delegates to propose a Declaration of Independence. In June, Mr. Lee accordingly made the motion, and it was voted that a committee be appointed to prepare one. The committee was elected by ballot, and consisted of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Robert R. Livingston. The Declaration was exclusively the work of Jefferson, to whom the right of draughting it belonged, as Chairman of the Committee, though alterations and amendments were made in it by Adams, Franklin, and other members of the Committee, and afterwards by Congress. Jefferson retired from Congress September, 1776, and took a seat in the Legislature of his State in October. In 1779 he was chosen Governor, and held the office two years. He declined a foreign appointment in 1776, and again in 1781. He accepted the appointment of one of the Commissioners for negotiating peace; but before he sailed, news was received of the signing of the provisional treaty, and he was excused from proceeding on the mission. He returned to Congress. In 1784 he wrote notes on the establishment of a money-unit, and of a coinage for the United States; in May of that year he was appointed, with Adams and Franklin, a Minister Plenipotentiary to negotiate treaties of commerce with foreign nations. In 1785 he was Minister to the French Court. In 1789 he returned to America, and received from Washington the appointment of Secretary of State, which he held till December, 1793, and then resigned. In September, 1794, when an appointment was offered him by Washington, he replied, "No circumstance will ever more tempt me to engage in anything public." Notwithstanding this determination, he suffered himself to be a candidate for President, and was chosen Vice-President in 1796. At the election in 1801, he and Aaron Burr having an equal number of electoral votes for President, the House of Representatives, after a severe struggle, finally determined in his favor. He was re-elected in 1805. At the end of his second term he retired from office. He died July 4, 1826, at one o'clock in the afternoon, just fifty years from the date of the Declaration of Independence. Preparations had been made throughout the United States to celebrate this day as a jubilee; and it is a most remarkable fact, that on the same day John Adams, a signer with Jefferson of the Declaration, and the second on the Committee for draughting it, and his immediate predecessor in the office of President, also died. Jefferson's publications were: "Summary View of the Rights of British America," 1774; "Declaration of Independence," 1776; "Notes on Virginia," 1781; "Manual of Parliamentary Practice, for the Use of the Senate;" "Life of Captain Lewis," 1814; and some papers of a philosophical character. His works, chiefly letters, were first published by his grandson, Thomas Jefferson Randolph, 1829, and a complete edition, by order of Congress, in nine volumes, in 1853.

Jeffries, Noah L.—Born in Pennsylvania 1828, educated and admitted to the bar in Ohio, where he practiced his profession until 1861, when he entered the Military Service, and served during the Rebellion, was Assistant Provost Marshal General of the United States during 1864 and 1865, and Register of the United States Treasury from September, 1867, to March, 1869.

Jencks, Thomas A.—He was born in Providence, Rhode Island, in 1818; graduated at Brown University in 1838; studied law and practiced the profession until elected, in 1863, a Representative from Rhode Island to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Patents, and the Special Committee on the Bankrupt Law, having drawn up the bill on that subject. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress; serving on the Committees on Retrenchment, the death of President Lincoln, and as Chairman of the Committee on Patents, and also Chairman of a Special Committee on the Civil Service. He was a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866; and was re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Retrenchment and Revision of Laws. Re-elected to the Forty-first Congress, serving on important Committees; and died in Cumberland, Rhode Island, November 4, 1875.

Jenifer, Daniel, of St. Thomas.—He was a Delegate from Maryland to the Continental Congress from 1778 to 1782, and was also a member of the Convention which formed the Federal Constitution, and signed that instrument. His son, bearing the same name, was a member of the Federal Congress.

Jenifer, Daniel.—Was frequently a member of the State Legislature of Maryland, and represented that State in Congress from 1831 to 1833, and from 1835 to 1841. During the administrations of Presidents Harrison and Tyler he was the United States Minister to Austria. He died December 18, 1855, near Port Tobacco, Maryland.

Jenison, Silas H.—He was born in Shoreham, Vermont, in 1791; Lieutenant Governor in 1835; and elected Governor of Vermont from 1835 to 1841. Died at Shoreham, Vermont, September 30, 1849.

He subsequently served as a Brigadier-General in the Rebel service, and was killed at the Battle of the Wilderness.

Jenkins, Charles J.—He was Governor of Georgia from 1865 to 1867.

Jenkins, Lemuel.—He was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1823 to 1825.

Jenkins, Robert.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1807 to 1811.

Jenkins, Timothy.—Born in Barre, Worcester County, Massachusetts, January 29, 1799; received an academic education; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1824, practicing his profession in Oneida County, New York; he was District Attorney for that county six years, and resigned the office on being elected a Representative in the Twenty-ninth Congress, and was re-elected to the Thirtieth and Thirty-second. Died at Martinsburg, New York, December 24, 1859.

Jenks, George A.—Born in Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, March 26, 1826; graduated at Jefferson College in 1858; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1859; and has ever since been engaged in the practice of his profession in the town of Brookville; and he was elected a Representative from Pennsylvania to the Forty-fourth Congress. In December, 1875, he was appointed Chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Jenks, Joseph.—Born in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, in 1656; was Deputy Governor of Rhode Island, and afterward Governor from 1727 to 1732. He was the tallest man in Rhode Island, standing seven feet and two inches in his stockings. Died June 15, 1740.

Jenks, Michael H.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1843 to 1845.

Jenness, Benning W.—He was Judge of Probate in Strafford County, New Hampshire, from 1841 to 1845, and a Senator in Congress from New Hampshire during the years 1845 and 1846.

Jennings, David.—He was born in Hunterdon County, New Jersey, and was a Representative in Congress from Ohio from 1825 to 1826.

Jennings, Jonathan.—He was born in Hunterdon County, New Jersey, and was the first Governor in Indiana, and was twice elected a Representative in Congress from that State, from 1809 to 1816, and from 1822 to 1831. In 1818 he was appointed by President Monroe Indian Commissioner. He died near Charlestown, Clarke County, Indiana, July 26, 1834.

Jewett, Harvey.—Born in Winchester, New Hampshire, May 26, 1820; graduated at Dartmouth College in 1844; studied law, and commenced the practice in 1847 at Boston; in 1861 and 1862 he was elected to the Legislature of Massachusetts; in 1866 he was re-chosen, serving five years, and was Speaker four years; and in February, 1875, he was appointed one of the Judges of the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims. He received from Dartmouth College the degree of Doctor of Laws; and is a brother of Marshall Jewell, the Postmaster General.

Jewett, Marshall.—Born in Winchester, New Hampshire, October 20, 1825; was brought up a tanner; studied telegraphy and electricity in Boston, and superintended the construction of lines between Louisville and New Orleans; in 1850 he commenced in Hartford the business of manufacturing leather-belt-ing; was Governor of Connecticut from 1868 to 1870; appointed Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia in 1873; and in 1874 was appointed Postmaster General in the cabinet of President Grant.

Jewett, Charles C.—Born in Lebanon, Maine, August 12, 1816; graduated at Brown University in 1835; was a student and Librarian at the Andover Seminary; became Librarian and Professor of Modern Languages at Brown University; was Assistant Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; and subsequently Superintendent of the Boston Public Library. He published an interesting Report on the Libraries of the United States in 1850, and invented a new method of cataloguing books. Died at Braintree, Massachusetts, January 9, 1868.

Jewett, C. C.—He was an early emigrant to Arkansas; was appointed a Justice of the United States Court for that Territory; and after it became a State, he continued on the Bench as Judge of the United States District Court.

Jewett, Freeborn G.—He was born in New York; was a member of the Assembly of that State in 1826 and 1827; and a Representative in Congress from the same from 1831 to 1833. From 1846 to 1856 he was a Judge of the Supreme Court of New York; and died February 23, 1858, aged sixty-eight years.

Jewett, Hugh J.—He was born at Deer Creek, Harford County, Maryland; received a good education and studied law in Cecil County; left Maryland in very early manhood, and removed to Ohio, where he practiced his profession; held no public positions until 1873, when he was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Forty-fourth Congress, but soon resigned to accept the position of President of the Erie Railroad Company.

Jewett, Joshua H.—He was born at Deer Creek, Harford County, Maryland, September 13, 1812, and having adopted the profession of law, removed to Kentucky, and was elected a Representative from that State to the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth Congresses. He was Chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Jewett, Luther.—He was born in Canterbury, Connecticut, December 24, 1772; graduated at Dartmouth College in 1795; was both a clergyman and a physician; for fifteen years a member of the Vermont Legislature; and was a Representative in Congress from Vermont from 1815 to 1817. Died March 8, 1860, aged eighty-seven years.

Jewitt, Albert G.—He was a citizen of Maine, and in 1845 he was appointed Chargé d'Affaires to Peru, where he remained until 1847 when he returned home.

Johns, Kensey.—Was born in Delaware, December 10, 1791; graduated at Princeton College in 1810; studied law, and was admitted to practice in 1813; was a Representative in Congress from Delaware from 1827 to 1831; in 1832 he was appointed Chancellor of the State of Delaware, in which capacity he was still serving at the time of his death, which occurred at New Castle, March 23, 1857. A person bearing this name was appointed to the Senate in 1794 from Delaware, but he was not admitted. He was the father of the above, who also filled the position of Chancellor of the State.

Johnson, Alexander S.—He was born in Utica, in 1822; received a liberal education; studied law, and settled in New York city; in 1852 he was elected to the Bench of the Court of Appeals and removed to Albany, serving one term; subsequently returned to his native town; in 1873 he was appointed a Commissioner of Appeals, to fill a vacancy; and before the close of the year was re-appointed a Judge of the Court of Appeals, holding the office until December, 1874; and in October, 1875, he was appointed United States Judge for the Second Circuit, in the place of L. B. Woodruff, deceased.

Johnson, Andrew.—He was born in Raleigh, North Carolina, December 29, 1808; when ten years of age he was apprenticed to a tailor, and worked at that business, in his native town, until his seventeenth year; he never attended school, but acquired a good English education by studying alone. Having removed to Greenville, Tennessee, he was elected Mayor of that place in 1830; was elected to the State Legislature in 1835; to the State Senate in 1841; and he was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee from 1843 to 1853, serving on various important committees. During the latter year he was chosen Governor of Tennessee, and re-elected in 1855. He was elected a Senator in Congress in 1857 for the term ending in 1863, serving on the Committees on Public Lands and the District of Columbia. In 1862 he resigned his seat in the Senate, and was appointed by President Lincoln Military Governor of Tennessee. By the "Baltimore Convention" of 1864 he was nominated for the office of Vice-President of the United States, and duly elected. On the death of Abraham Lincoln, April 15, 1865, he took the prescribed oath and entered upon his duties as President of the United States. His Life and Speeches have been published in a variety of editions; and in 1866 he received from the University of North Carolina the degree of LL.D. On February 22, 1868, the House of Representatives adopted articles of Impeachment against him, founded chiefly upon his alleged misconduct under the Teure-of-Office Bill. It was a party vote, as only one Republican, S. F. Cary, and one Conservative Republican, T. E. Stewart, voted against the measure; and on being tried by the Senate, organized as a High Court of Impeachment, the necessary two-thirds vote could not be secured, and he was acquitted. The Democrats who voted for his acquittal were Senators Bayard, Buckalew, Davis, McCreery, Hendricks, Johnson, Patterson of Tennessee, Saulsbury, and Vickers; and those elected to the Senate as Republicans, who voted with them, were Senators Dixon, Doolittle, Fessenden, Fowler, Grimes, Henderson, Norton, Ross, Trumbull, and Van Winkle; and the Republicans who voted for conviction were Senators Anthony, Cameron, Catell, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Conness, Corbett, Cragin, Drake, Edmunds, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Harlan, Howard, Howe, Morgan, Morrill of Vermont, Morrill of Maine, Morton, Nye, Patterson of New Hampshire, Pomeroy, Ramsey, Sherman, Sprague, Stewart, Sumner, Thayer, Tipton, Willey, Williams, Wilson, Yates, and Wade, the President of the Senate pro tem. Mr. Johnson was re-elected to the United States Senate for the term commencing in 1875; occupied his seat during the extra session of the Senate; and died in Carter County, Tennessee, July 31, 1875. The verdict of the press was that he had proven himself an honest and remarkable man.

Johnson, Benjamin.—He was an early emigrant to the Territory of Arkansas, and in 1821 he was appointed United States Judge for that Territory, serving in that capacity until 1833.

Johnson, Care.—He was born in Robertson County, Tennessee, January 11, 1793; received a liberal education, and adopted the profession of law; was a Circuit Judge for a few years; and he was a Representative in Congress from Tennessee from 1829 to 1837, and again from 1839 to 1845, after which he went into the cabinet of President Polk, as Postmaster-General. He also held for many years the position of President of the Bank of Tennessee, which he resigned in 1859. Died in Clarksville, Tennessee, November 23, 1866.

Johnson, Franklin.—He was born in Vermont; received a legal education; and became a resident of Monroe, Michigan, in 1835, with which place he was intimately identified during the remainder of his life. While constantly engaged in practicing his profession, he found time to fill a variety of public positions. He was at one time Attorney for the city of Monroe, also Prosecuting Attorney for the State, and Judge of Probate, and lastly, Judge of the Circuit Court for the First District of Michigan for six years. He maintained a high position at the bar, and it is said that his decisions as Circuit Judge were very seldom reversed by the Supreme Court. He died in Monroe, October 11, 1870.

Johnson, Harvey H.—He was born in Vermont, and having removed to Ohio, was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1853 to 1855.

Johnson, Henry.—Born in Tennessee, September 14, 1783; studied law in Louisiana; was Clerk of the Second Superior Court of Orleans Territory in 1809; Judge of the Parish Court of St. Mary, May 1, 1811; member of the "Constitutional Convention" of Louisiana in 1812; ran for Congress in 1812, but was defeated; elected a Senator in Congress in 1818 for the unexpired term of W. C. Claiborne, deceased; and sat there until 1824, in which year he was elected Governor of Louisiana; and in 1826 was re-elected, holding that office for four consecutive years. In 1829 he was defeated for the United States Senate, by Edward Livingston; was a Representative from Louisiana to the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Congresses; in 1842 he was a candidate for Governor, but was defeated by Alexander Mouton; in 1844 he was elected to fill the vacancy in the United States Senate caused by the death of A. Published, with R. Varick, "Laws of the State of New York, from 1778 to 1789." He received the degree of LL.D. from Columbia College in 1826. Died at Cold Spring, Long Island, August 8, 1853.

Jones, Seaborn.—Born in Augusta, Georgia, in 1788; entered Princeton College but was obliged to leave before graduating, on account of his father's failure in business; studied law, and came to the bar in his twenty-first year by special act of the Legislature; was made Solicitor-General of the State in 1823; was a Representative in Congress from 1833 to 1835, and from 1845 to 1847. Died in Columbus, Georgia in 1874. He was a distinguished lawyer for fifty years.

Jones, Thomas Laurens.—Born in Rutherford County, North Carolina, January 22, 1819; graduated in the preparatory school at Columbia, South Carolina, and at Princeton, New Jersey; took the degree of LL.B. in the Law School of Harvard University; traveled ten years in Europe; and on his return was admitted to the bar at Charleston in 1846. Removed to New York City to practice in 1847; subsequently settled in Newport, Kentucky; was a member of the General Assembly of that State in 1853 and 1854; was a Delegate to many State and National Conventions; was elected to the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses, and re-elected to the Forty-fourth Congress. In December, 1875, he was appointed Chairman of the Committee on Railways and Canals.

Jones, Walter.—He was born in Virginia, in 1745, graduated at William and Mary College in 1760; studied medicine in Edinburgh, Scotland, and received the degree of M. D.; on his return to Virginia he settled in Northumberland and became eminent as a scholar and physician. In 1777 he was appointed by Congress Physician-General of the hospital in the middle department; was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1797 to 1799; and again from 1803 to 1811. He was at one time a "Free Thinker," but his views were subsequently entirely changed, and he embraced the Christian faith; after which he wrote a lengthy volume denouncing his former belief, and stating with great clearness the grounds upon which he did so. This was done for the satisfaction of his own conscience and the gratification of his children. He died in Westmoreland County, Virginia, December 31, 1815.

Jones, Walter.—Son of the preceding, was born at Hayfield, Northumberland County, Virginia, October 14, 1775; was educated by a private tutor, Mr. Ogilvy of Scotland, it was the intention of his father that he should graduate at William and Mary College, but his plan was changed and he commenced the study of law with Bushrod Washington; he was admitted to the bar in Richmond, May, 1736; settled in Leesburg and practiced extensively in the adjoining courts. In 1803 he was appointed by Jefferson, United States Attorney for the District of the Potomac; and in 1804 for the District of Columbia; which he resigned in 1821, being the only public positions he would ever accept, his residence in Washington would have prevented his entering the political field had he been disposed to submit to the urgent appeals of his friends to do so. In his early life he became convinced of the evils of slavery, and was one of the founders of the American Colonization Society. He was a friend of Madison, Marshall, and Clay, and was intimate with all the leading Statesmen of the day. He was considered a deeply read and accomplished lawyer, was employed in the "Randolph Will Case," the Girard and Gaines Cases, and held a high position at the bar of the Supreme Court. He was ever a true patriot, was personally acquainted with Washington, and was one of the founders of the Washington Monument; he denounced the act of secession as a double treason to the Union and Virginia. He died in Washington on his birthday, October 14, 1861.

He was also the founder of the Deaf and Dumb Institution in Washington; and at the cost of one hundred thousand dollars, he built as a memorial to his wife the Baptist Calvary Church of Washington. In 1866 he went to Europe on a tour of pleasure, extending his travels even to the Holy Land; and at the time of his death was engaged in writing a History of his Life and Times. He is also the author of a Life of Andrew Jackson. Died in Washington, June 12, 1869.

Kendall, Charles West.—He was born in Searsmont, Maine, April 22, 1828; educated at Phillips Academy, Massachusetts, and attended a partial course at Yale College; studied law in Sacramento, California, and practiced in Nevada; was a member of the Legislature of California in 1861 and 1862, and elected to the Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses from Nevada, serving on the Committees on Mines and Mining and Treasury Department.

Kendall, Jonas.—He was born at Worcester, Massachusetts, in 1757; obtained a finished education by his own unaided exertions; served thirteen years in the Legislature of Massachusetts; and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1819 to 1821. Died in Leominster, Massachusetts, October 22, 1844.

Kendall, Joseph G.—Born in 1788; graduated at Harvard University in 1810, and was a tutor there from 1812 to 1819. He was a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1829 to 1833; and then appointed Clerk of the State Courts. He died at Worcester, Massachusetts, October 2, 1847.

Kennedy, Andrew.—Born in Ohio, in 1810; was bred a blacksmith, and at the age of nineteen could neither read nor write. He subsequently studied law, and was a member of the State Senate of Indiana; and represented that State in Congress from 1841 to 1847. He died at Muncietown, Indiana, December 31, 1847.

Kennedy, Anthony.—Born in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1811; removed, when ten years of age, to Virginia; educated at Jefferson Academy, Charlottesville, Virginia; studied law, but abandoned it, and subsequently engaged in the manufacture of cotton and in planting. He was a member of the Legislature of Virginia from 1839 to 1843, and an unsuccessful candidate for Congress from Virginia; removed to Baltimore in 1850, and was elected to the Maryland Legislature in 1856, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and by that body elected to the United States Senate for six years from March 4, 1857, serving as a member of the Committee on Private Land Claims, and on the District of Columbia.

Kennedy, James K.—He was an Associate Justice of the United States Court for the Territory of Washington.

Kennedy, John P.—He was born in Baltimore, October, 1795. He studied law, and practiced in that city until 1838, when he was elected to the House of Representatives, in the Federal Legislature, and served in that body through the Twenty-fifth, Twenty-seventh, and Twenty-eighth Congresses; elected in 1846 to the House of Delegates of Maryland (of which he had been a member in the sessions of 1820 and 1822); he was made Speaker, and took an active part in the measure which was then adopted to resume the payment of the State debt, and the restoration of the public credit. In 1823 he was Secretary of Legation to Chili. Since 1847, he has held no political post, but has devoted his time to literary pursuits. His last national position was that of Secretary of the Navy, under President Fillmore. In 1849 he was chosen by the Regents of the University of Maryland to preside over that institution, as Provost, which position he now occupies. Among his various political tracts, speeches, reports, and addresses, which have been published, are "A Review of Mr. Cambreling's Free-Trade Report, by Mephistopheles," in 1830; "The Memorial of the Permanent Committee of the New York Convention of Friends of Domestic Industry," in 1833; an elaborate report on "The Commerce and Navigation of the United States, by the Committee of Commerce" (of which Mr. Kennedy was Chairman), in 1842; and a report from the same Committee on "The Warehouse System," in 1843. Besides these, he has published several pamphlets and tracts, in defense of the protective system. In the field of general literature, he is known to the public as the author of "Swallow Barn; a Sojourn in the Old Dominion," "Horseshoe Robinson," "Rob of the Bowl," "Quod Libet," "Memoirs of the Life of William Wirt, late Attorney-General of the United States," sundry historical, biographical, and literary discourses, essays and reviews, which have not yet been collected into volumes. He was an active member of the Historical Society of Maryland, and for a long time its Vice-President. Died at Newport, Rhode Island, in August, 1870.

Kennedy, Joseph C. G.—He was born in Meadville, Pennsylvania, in 1813; his father, Samuel Kennedy, having distinguished himself as a surgeon in the Revolution. He was educated at the Alleghany College, and studied law; edited a country paper for several years, and paid attention to agriculture; in 1849 he was invited to Washington, and made Secretary of the Census Board; drafted the bill which established the Census Bureau, to the head of which he was appointed; in 1851 he visited Europe on official business connected with cheap postage and other matters; in 1862 appointed a Commissioner to the London International Exhibition. The official publications which he has directed, and his writings for the press on Statistics, and various other topics interesting to the public, are very numerous. As a man of culture and refinement, he has been a prominent figure in the society of Washington City for more than the fourth of a century, and the honors that he received from the learned men and societies of Europe for his labor on the Census were most unusual and complimentary.

Kennedy, William.—He was a Representative in Congress from North Carolina from 1803 to 1805, from 1809 to 1811, and from 1813 to 1815.

Kennett, Luther M.—He was born in Falmouth, Pendleton County, Kentucky, March 15, 1807; received a good English and classical education; was for a number of years Deputy Clerk of Pendleton and Campbell Counties; he studied law, and in 1825 removed to Missouri, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits; having settled in St. Louis in 1842, he was elected to the Councils of that city; in 1849 he was Chairman of the "Pacific Railroad Convention," held in St. Louis, and subsequently Vice-President of the company formed for commencing the work; in 1850 he was elected Mayor of St. Louis, and re-elected in 1851 and 1852. In 1853 he was elected President of the St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad; and he was a Representative in Congress from Missouri (St. Louis District) from 1855 to 1857.

Kennon, William.—He was born in Pennsylvania, and having emigrated to Ohio, was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1829 to 1833, from 1833 to 1837, and from 1847 to 1849.

Kent, Edward.—Born in Concord, New Hampshire, January 8, 1802; graduated at Harvard University in 1821; studied law, and attended a course of lectures by Chancellor Kent in New York; settled in practice at Bangor, Maine, in 1825, and became eminent in his profession. In 1827 he was appointed Chief Justice of the Court of Sessions for Penobscot County; and from 1829 to 1833 was a member of the Legislature. He was afterwards Mayor of Bangor for two years, and Governor of Maine from 1838 to 1840. In 1843 he was appointed by the Legislature one of the Commissioners for settling the Maine boundary line under the Ashburton Treaty. In 1848 he was a Delegate to the Convention which nominated General Taylor, and he was appointed by him Consul to Rio Janeiro. In the spring of 1854 he returned to Bangor and resumed his profession. In 1859 was appointed Associate Judge of the Supreme Court of Maine. In 1855 received the degree of LL.D. from Wat. College.

Kent, James.—Was born in Philippi, Putnam County, New York, July 31, 1763; graduated at Yale College in 1781; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1787; began to practice in Poughkeepsie; was a member of the Legislature in 1790 and 1792; removed to New York in 1793 and became Professor of Law in Columbia College, from which institution he received the degree of LL.D. in 1797. Counseled by Hamilton, he directed his attention to civil law; appointed Master in Chancery, and elected to the Legislature in 1798; was City Recorder in 1797; Judge of the Supreme Court of New York in 1798; Chief Justice in July 1804; and Chancellor from February, 1814, to August, 1823. In 1822 he represented Albany County in the State Constitutional Convention, of which he was a distinguished member; was appointed Law Professor in Columbia College in 1824, and his lectures delivered there form the basis of his Commentaries on the United States Constitution, published in four volumes from 1825 to 1830. He wrote a treatise on the City Charter, and the powers of the Municipal Officers, at the request of the Common Council, which was published in 1836. Was made President of the New York Historical Society in 1828. He was one of the first legal writers of the time, and his decisions in law and equity are preserved in the Reports of Caines and Johnson. He spent the latter part of his life in enlarging and revising his celebrated Commentaries. He died in New York city, December 13, 1847.

Kent, Joseph.—Born in 1779 in Calvert County, Maryland; was educated for a physician, and combined the practice of his profession with the pursuits of agriculture. He was a Representative in Congress from his native State from 1811 to 1815, and from 1821 to 1826; Governor of Maryland from 1826 to 1829; and United States Senator from 1833 to 1837. He died near his residence in the vicinity of Bladensburg, Maryland, November 24, 1839.

Kent, Moss.—He was the father of James Kent, a member of the New York Assembly in 1807 and 1810, from Jefferson County, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1813 to 1817.

Kent, William.—He was born in 1802, and was the son of James Kent; was for many years a successful lawyer in New York city, and a Judge of the Circuit Court; for a short time was a Professor in Harvard University, and died at Fishkill, New York, January 4, 1861.

Kenyon, William S.—He was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Private Land Claims.

Ker, David.—He was an early emigrant to the Territory of Mississippi, and in 1802 was appointed a Judge of the United States Court for that Territory.

Kernan, Francis.—He was born in Steuben County, New York, January 14, 1816; received his education at the Georgetown College, District of Columbia; adopted and practiced the profession of law; held for a time the office of Reporter of the Court of Appeals; served in the State Legislature; and was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committee on the Judiciary. He was also a Regent of the University of Utica, and a Delegate to the "State Constitutional Convention" of 1867, and the National Convention held in New York in 1868. Subsequently elected to the United States Senate for the term commencing in 1875, serving on the Committees on Finance and Patents.

Kerr, John.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1813 to 1817.

Kerr, John.—He was born in North Carolina, received a liberal education, and adopted the profession of law; was a Representative in Congress from his native State from 1853 to 1855; and was subsequently elected to the House of Commons of that State.

Kerr, John Bozman.—Born at Easton, Talbot County, Maryland, March 5, 1809; graduated at Harvard University in 1830. He studied law at Easton, and was admitted to the bar in 1833; was a member of the General Assembly of Maryland from 1836 to 1838; and from 1847 to 1849 he acted as Deputy for the Attorney-General of Maryland for Talbot County. From 1849 to 1851 he was a Representative in Congress, and at the end of the session was appointed by President Fillmore Chargé d'Affairs to the Republic of Nicaragua. During the Revolution of 1851 he had the good fortune, as the National Representative in Central America, to bring about an armistice, and was instrumental in saving the lives of leading officers of the revolutionary party, for which he received a formal expression of thanks from the Executive on leaving the country; and in 1853 the Congress of the United States voted him an extra sum for services in Central America. In 1854 he resumed the practice of his profession in the city of Baltimore, and subsequently held an office under the Attorney-General in Washington, after which he was appointed Deputy Solicitor of the Court of Claims. He was the son of J. L. Kerr.

Kerr, John L.—He was born at Greenbury Point, near Annapolis, Maryland, January 15, 1780; graduated at St. John's College in 1799; studied law with John Leeds Bozman, and practiced the profession with success; and was a Representative in Congress from Maryland from 1825 to 1829, and again from 1831 to 1833; he was also a Senator in Congress from 1841 to 1843. He was a member of the "National Convention" held at Harrisburg in 1839, and at the head of the electoral ticket for President during the same year. Before entering Congress, he was the Agent of Maryland in the prosecution of militia claims against the United States. He died at his homestead, in Maryland, February 21, 1844.

Kerr, Michael C.—Born near Titusville, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, March 15, 1827; was chiefly self-educated, but studied at several academies; for a time taught school; studied law in the University of Louisville, and received the degree of Bachelor of Laws. After a brief residence in Kentucky he settled at New Albany, Indiana. In 1856 he was elected for two years to the State Assembly; in 1862 he was elected Reporter to the Supreme Court of the State, and published five volumes; and in 1864 he was elected a Representative from Indiana to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Private Land Claims, and on Accounts. Re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Elections, and Roads and Canals. He was also re-elected to the Forty-first and Forty-second Congresses, serving on various important Committees, chiefly the Judiciary; and having been re-elected to the Forty-fourth Congress, he was the choice of his party for Speaker, and was duly elected.

Kerrigan, James E.—He was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-seventh Congress, leaving his seat for a time to serve as Colonel of Volunteers in the troubles of 1861.

Kershaw, John.—He was a native of South Carolina, and a Representative in Congress from that State from 1813 to 1815, when he was appointed by President Madison one of the three Commissioners to run the Creek boundary lines.

Ketcham, John H.—He was born in Dover, Dutchess County, New York, December 21, 1831; received an academical education, and adopted the occupation of a farmer. He was for two years Supervisor of his native town; was a member of the Assembly in 1856 and 1857; of the State Senate in 1860 and 1861. In 1862 he entered the military service, and as Colonel of the One Hundred and Fiftieth New York Volunteers served until January, 1865, when he was made a Brigadier-General by brevet, which position he resigned in March, 1865, having previously been elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committee on Military Affairs. He was also one of the Representatives designated by the House to attend the funeral of General Scott in 1866. Re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committees on Expenditures in the Post-Office Department, and Military Affairs. Also re-elected to the Forty-first and Forty-second Congresses, serving on various Committees. In 1874 he was appointed one of the Commissioners for the District of Columbia.

He was elected a Representative from Pennsylvania to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Key, David M.—Born in Greene County, Tennessee, January 27, 1824; worked on his father's farm until twenty-one years of age; graduated at Hiwassee College in 1850; studied law, and practiced with success at Chattanooga; was a Presidential Elector in 1856; served as a Colonel in the Confederate Army; received his political pardon from President Johnson; in 1869 he was elected to the State Constitutional Convention; in 1870 he was elected a Chancellor of the State, and in August, 1875, he was appointed a Senator in Congress to succeed his old friend Andrew Johnson.

Key, Francis Scott.—Although this man was neither a member of Congress, a Federal Judge, a Diplomat, nor a Governor, he has a most undoubted right as a guest, and the peer of the most distinguished of his countrymen, to appear in this volume. He did, indeed, hold a minor office under the Federal Government, but his passport on the present occasion, is the fact that he was a patriot, and by a simple national anthem has done more than any other man to keep alive the sentiment of loyalty to the American Flag. He was born in Frederick County, Maryland, August 1, 1779; his father, John Ross Key, having been a Revolutionary officer. He was educated at St. John's College; studied law with his distinguished uncle, Philip Barton Key; came to the bar in 1801 at Frederick, and subsequently removed to Washington City, where he was United States Attorney for the District of Columbia. He was a writer of poetry; and the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner." The correspondence that passed between him and John Randolph, as it appears in Garland's Life of the latter statesman, suggests the belief that an elaborate history of his own life would be an exceedingly valuable and interesting production.

Key, Philip.—Was born in St. Mary's County, Maryland, in 1750; received a classical and commercial education; was devoted to agricultural pursuits; served a number of years in the Legislature of Maryland, and was for one or two terms Speaker. He also rendered some service in the Municipal Courts of his native county. His service as a Representative in Congress from Maryland, was from 1791 to 1793. Died in his native place in January, 1820.

Key, Philip Barton.—Born in Cecil County, Maryland, in 1765; was liberally educated; entered the English army as a Captain, and when the Revolutionary War broke out, he refused to bear arms against the Colonies; he had a small command and some service at Pensacola, Florida, where he was a hard student; and after the peace he returned to Maryland, where he took a high position as a lawyer. He also represented Annapolis in the State Legislature. He was a Representative in Congress from Maryland from 1807 to 1813, and died at Georgetown, District of Columbia, July 28, 1815.

Keyes, Elias.—He was born in Ashford, Connecticut; was a Representative in Congress from Vermont from 1821 to 1823. From 1803 to 1818 he was a State Councilor; and a member of the Legislature of Vermont for a period of eighteen years, from Stockbridge County.

Kidder, David.—He was born in Dresden, Lincoln County, Maine, December 8, 1787; received a classical education from private tutors; studied law, and settled in Somerset County, where he was County Attorney from 1811 to 1823; was a Representative in Congress from Maine from 1823 to 1827; and a member of the State Legislature in 1829. Died November 1, 1860.

Kidder, Jefferson P.—Born at Braintree, Vermont; educated at the common schools; graduated at the Norwich University; studied and practiced law; was State Attorney from 1842 to 1847; a member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1843; of the State Senate in 1847 and 1848; Lieutenant-Governor in 1853 and 1854; removed to Minnesota in 1857, and was elected to the Legislature in 1860, 1862, and 1863; was a Provisional Delegate from Dakota Territory, while traveling there; was appointed an Associate Judge of the Supreme Court of Dakota in 1865, and removed there; was re-appointed in 1869, and again in 1873, and after holding the position ten years, he resigned on being elected a Delegate from Dakota to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Kidwell, Zedekiah.—He was born in Fairfax County, Virginia, January 4, 1814; was educated by his father; studied medicine, and graduated at the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia in 1839. After practicing medicine some years, he commenced in 1848 the study of law, and began to practice as a lawyer in 1849; he served a number of years in the Legislature of Virginia; was a member of the "State Constitutional Convention" in 1849; was a Presidential Elector in 1852, and a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1853 to 1857. In 1857 he was elected one of three Commissioners to superintend the public works for the State of Virginia, representing in that board the Third District. Died in Fairmount, April 27, 1872.

Kilbourn, James.—Born in New Britain, Connecticut, October 19, 1770. While apprenticed as a farmer's boy he received instruction in Latin and Greek and mathematics from the son of his employer; was next a mechanic, then a merchant and manufacturer, and finally studied divinity, and became a clergyman of the Episcopal Church. In 1803 he was instrumental in forming an emigrating colony to Central Ohio, called the "Scioto Company." A town was soon organized, and named Worthington. In 1805 he was appointed by Congress to the office of United States Surveyor of Public Lands; and in 1806 he was chosen by the Legislature a member of the Board of Trustees of Ohio College, at Athens. In 1812 he was appointed by the President a Commissioner to settle the boundary between the Public Lands and the Virginia Reservation, and also commissioned as Colonel of the Frontier Regiment. He was one of the Commissioners for locating Miami University, and President of the Board of Trustees of Worthington College. From 1813 to 1817 he was a Representative in Congress from Ohio. In 1823 he was elected to the Ohio Legislature, serving on fourteen committees, and was re-elected in 1828, and subsequently devoted much attention to matters of State policy. He died in Worthington, Ohio, April 24, 1850.

Kilgore, Daniel.—He was born in Virginia, and was a Representative in Congress from Ohio from 1835 to 1839. Died in New York, December 12, 1851.

Kilgore, David.—He was born in Harrison County, Kentucky, April 3, 1804, and removed with his father to Indiana in 1819, and settled in Franklin County. He received a common-school education, and commenced the study of law in 1825, and was admitted to practice in 1830, and removed to Delaware County. In 1833 he was elected to the State Legislature, and served several years. In 1839 he was elected by the Legislature President Judge of the Judicial Circuit in which he resided, and held the office seven years. In 1850 he was a Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of the State. In 1854 he was again elected to the Legislature, and was Speaker of the House. In 1856 he was elected a Representative from Indiana to the Thirty-fifth Congress, and was re-elected to the Thirty-sixth, serving as a member of the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, and that on the District of Columbia. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "National Union Convention" of 1866.

Kille, Joseph.—He was born in New Jersey, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1839 to 1841.

In 1856 he was elected a Representative to the Thirty-fifth Congress from Pennsylvania, and was a member of the Committee on Commerce. Died in Philadelphia, July 24, 1875.

Lane, Amos.—He was born in New York, but emigrated to the Ohio river in 1804; was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1833 to 1839, having previously been a member of the State Legislature, and served one session as Speaker. He was a lawyer of the first ability, and filled a conspicuous place in the history of Indiana. He died in Lawrenceburg, in that State, in 1850. He was the father of J. H. Lane.

Lane, Ebenezer.—He was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, September 17, 1793; graduated at Harvard University in 1811; studied law, and settled in Elyria, Ohio; in 1819 he removed to Norwalk in the same State; in 1824 he was elected President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas; in 1831, 1838 and 1845 he was elected Judge of the Supreme Court of Ohio; and from 1835 he was Chief Justice. He subsequently resigned his judicial position, and engaged in railroads in Chicago, and was Vice-President of the Illinois Central Railroad. During his long residence in northwestern Ohio, he was a man of wide influence, and did much to infuse a spirit of culture and refinement among the people. In 1850 he received from Harvard University the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Lane, George W.—During the Rebellion he was obliged to leave the State of Kentucky, where he resided, on account of his Union sentiments; was appointed a United States District Judge in Alabama; and died at Louisville, Kentucky, November 12, 1863.

Lane, Henry S.—He was born in Montgomery County, Kentucky, February 24, 1811; received a good common-school education, and, under a tutor, some knowledge of the classics; studied law in Kentucky, but removed to Indiana, and was admitted to the bar in that State; in 1837 he was elected to the Indiana Legislature; was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1841 to 1843; served as a Lieutenant-Colonel of Volunteers under General Taylor, in the war with Mexico, in 1846; in 1859 he was elected to the United States Senate to contest the seat of J. D. Bright, but was denied the seat; in 1861 he was elected Governor of Indiana; but two days after his inauguration he was again elected a Senator in Congress, from Indiana, for the term ending in 1867, serving on the Committees on Military Affairs, Pensions, Patents and the Patent Office, Expenses in the Senate, and as Chairman of the Committee on Enrolled Bills. He was one of the Senators designated by the Senate to attend the funeral of General Scott in 1866. He was also a delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866, and to the Chicago Convention of 1868. His father was Colonel James H. Lane.

Lane, James Henry.—He was born in Lawrenceburg, Indiana, June 22, 1814; on reaching his majority he was elected to the City Council of Lawrenceburg, and frequently re-elected; in a subordinate capacity he took part in the war with Mexico; in 1849 he was Lieutenant-Governor of Indiana; was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1853 to 1855; settled in Kansas and took an active part in politics; he was President of the Topeka "Constitutional Convention," and was elected by the people Major-General of the Free State troops; in 1857 he was President of the Leavenworth "Constitutional Convention," and again chosen Major-General of the territorial troops; on the admission of Kansas into the Union he was chosen a Senator in Congress, serving on the Committees on Indian Affairs and Agriculture; and he was re-elected for the term ending in 1871, serving as Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, and a member of that on Territories. During the early part of the Rebellion he was commissioned by President Lincoln a Brigadier-General of Volunteers; and was a member of the "Baltimore Convention" of 1864. On July 1, 1866, while at Fort Leavenworth, on leave of absence from the Senate on account of deranged health, he shot himself with a pistol, and thus came to his death. He was the son of Amos Lane.

Lane, Joseph.—Born in Buncombe County, North Carolina, December 14, 1801. In his fifteenth year he became a clerk in a mercantile house in Indiana, and in 1822 was chosen a member of the Legislature of that State, serving in that capacity, with occasional intervals, until 1846. He participated in the war with Mexico, acquitting himself with credit at Buena Vista and on other fields, and was appointed by President Polk a Brigadier-General. In 1849 he was appointed Governor of the Territory of Oregon, without his solicitation, and organized the government; and was elected a Delegate to Congress in 1851, where he was retained by his constituents until the admission of Oregon as a State, when he took his seat as a Senator in Congress in 1859, serving as such until 1861. In 1860 he was nominated for Vice-President on the ticket with Mr. Breckinridge, but was defeated.

Lane, La Fayette.—He was born in Vanderburg County, Indiana, November 12, 1842; educated in Washington City, and in Stamford, Connecticut; adopted the profession of law, and removed to Oregon; elected to the Legislature of that State in 1864; was defeated in 1866 as candidate for Secretary of State, was a Code Commissioner for the State in 1874; and was elected a Representative in 1875 to the Forty-fourth Congress, in the place of G. A. La Dow, who died in May of that year.

Lane, Samuel.—He was one of the first men appointed Superintendent or Commissioner of Public Buildings for the District of Columbia, but the date of his appointment does not appear on the public records.

Langdon, Chauncey.—He graduated at Yale College in 1787; was a Representative in Congress from Vermont from 1815 to 1817, and died in 1830. He also served seven years in the Legislature of the State, and was a State Councilor for nine years.

Langdon, John.—He was educated for mercantile pursuits, and afterwards prosecuted business on the sea, until the commencement of the controversy with Great Britain. He was one of the party which removed the powder and military stores from Fort William and Mary, at New Castle, New Hampshire, in 1774. In 1775 and 1776 he was chosen a Delegate to Congress from New Hampshire. Commanding a company of volunteers, he served, for a while, in Vermont and Rhode Island. In his own State, he was in 1776 and 1777 Speaker of the House, and Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. In 1779 he was Continental Agent in New Hampshire, and contracted for the building of several ships of war. In 1783 he was again appointed a Delegate to Congress; was afterwards repeatedly a member of the Legislature, and Speaker; and was a member of the Convention that framed the Constitution, signing his name to that instrument. In March, 1788, he was chosen Governor of the State, and from 1789 to 1801 he was Senator of the United States, and President of the Senate pro tem. during the First Congress, and part of the Second. He was one of those who voted for locating the Seat of Government on the Potomac. From 1805 to 1808, and again in 1810 and 1811, he was Governor of the State. He died in Portsmouth, September 18, 1819, aged seventy-eight years.

Langdon, Woodbury.—He was a Delegate from New Hampshire to the Continental Congress in 1779 and 1780; was a Councilor from 1781 to 1784; a Judge of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire in 1782, and from 1786 to 1790; and died January 13, 1805, aged sixty-five years.

Langworthy, Edward.—He was a Delegate from Georgia to the Continental Congress from 1777 to 1779, and was one of the signers of the Articles of Confederation.

Langman, James.—Born in Norwich, Connecticut, June 14, 1760; graduated at Yale College in 1783; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1791, and settled as a lawyer in his native town; he was a member of the Convention which formed the first Constitution of Connecticut in 1818; served two years in the Lower House of the Legislature in 1817 and 1832, and one year as a State Senator in 1819; and was for five years Attorney for the State for New London County from 1814 to 1819, acquiring great local distinction by his abilities. One of the most famous trials that he conducted was that of the Rev. Ammi Rogers, who was convicted of an infamous crime against one of his parishioners, and was imprisoned for two years, and who subsequently published a book of nearly three hundred pages abusive of said Attorney. He was elected a Senator in Congress, serving from 1819 to 1825, during one Congress as Chairman of the Committees on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and Contingent Expenses of the Senate, and voted with the South on the Missouri Compromise; during the Seventeenth Congress he was at one time member of four Committees, viz., that of Commerce and Manufactures, the Militia, District of Columbia, and the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. He was appointed by the Governor to a second term in the Senate, during the recess of the Legislature and before the vacancy occurred, and, by a small majority, the Senate decided that the appointment was without authority of law. He was subsequently Judge of the Supreme and Superior Courts of Connecticut for three years, from 1826 to 1829, and from 1831 to 1834 he was Mayor of Norwich, where he died August 7, 1841. His son, Charles James Lanman, also a graduate of Yale College, was one of the earliest emigrant lawyers from New England to the Territory of Michigan, where he took part in founding a number of important towns, and was for many years Receiver of Public Moneys; and it is a matter of public record that on visiting Washington, nearly thirty years after retiring from office, he was officially informed that there was a considerable amount of money standing to his credit at the Treasury Department. He was subsequently Mayor of Norwich in Connecticut, and died in 1870, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. The Senator had had another son who was a lawyer, James H. Lanman, and who acquired some reputation as an author.

Lansing, Gerit Y.—He was born in Albany, New York, in 1783; served four years in the Legislature of that State, and was a Representative in Congress from New York from 1831 to 1837. He was for many years Chancellor of the Board of Regents of the University of New York; and died at Albany, January 3, 1862.

Lansing, John.—He was a Delegate from New York to the Continental Congress from 1784 to 1788; and also a member of the Convention that formed the Federal Constitution, which he opposed, and consequently left the Convention, defining his position in a published letter.

Lansing, William E.—Was born in the town of Sullivan, Madison County, New York, in 1823; studied law at Utica, and commenced the practice in 1845; in 1850 he was elected District Attorney of Madison County; in 1857, Clerk of the same county; and in 1860 he was elected a Representative from New York to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs. Re-elected to the Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses, serving on the Committee on Claims.

Re-elected to the Forty-first Congress, serving on the Committees on Banking and Currency, and the Treasury Department.

Latham, George R.—Born in Prince William County, Virginia, March 9, 1832; educated at country schools and at home; studied law, while teaching school, and was admitted to the bar in 1859; edited a campaign paper at Grafton, West Virginia, in 1860; entered the army in 1861 as Captain, and was made Colonel of the Second Virginia Infantry; and he was elected a Representative from West Virginia, to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Printing, and Public Buildings and Grounds. In February, 1867, he was appointed by President Johnson Consul to Melbourne, Australia.

Latham, Milton S.—Was born in Columbus, Ohio, May 23, 1827; graduated at Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, in 1845; soon afterwards removed to Alabama, where he studied law; was appointed in 1848 Clerk of the Circuit Court for Russell County; removed to California in 1850, and was there appointed Clerk of the Recorder's Court in San Francisco; he was soon afterwards chosen District-Attorney for the Counties of Sacramento and El Dorado, which he held in 1851. In 1852 he was elected a Representative from California to the Thirty-seventh Congress, declining a re-election; he was appointed in 1855 by President Pierce Collector of San Francisco, which office he held until 1857; having been elected Governor of California, three days after his inauguration, in January, 1860, he was elected a Senator in Congress from California, for six years, serving on the Committees on Military Affairs, and on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. Was afterwards President of the Bank of California at San Francisco.

Lathrop, Samuel.—Born in Hampden County, Massachusetts, in 1771; graduated at Yale College in 1792; studied law and attained a high position at the bar; was a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1818 to 1826. He was also a member of the Massachusetts Senate for ten years, and President of that body in 1829 and 1830. He died in West Springfield, July 11, 1846.

Latrobe, Benjamin H.—He was born in England, and emigrated to Richmond, Virginia, in 1796; he was educated as an architect and early won great celebrity; he removed to Philadelphia and afterwards to Washington, and became connected with the National Capitol in 1803, having been appointed by President Jefferson; he planned, built and rebuilt various parts of the old building, including the old Hall of Representatives, the old Senate Chamber and the Supreme Court Room; and he remained in the service of the Government until 1817. He was the architect of the Richmond Penitentiary, the Philadelphia Water Works, and of various Banking Institutions, of Baltimore Exchange and a Roman Catholic church in that city; and having removed to Pittsburg, engaged in building steamboats in connection with Fulton, Livingston and Roosevelt, for the navigation of the Western rivers. He removed to New Orleans in 1820, and died of yellow fever before the close of the year; his son, also an architect, having died in the same city of the same epidemic three years before.

Lattimer, Henry.—Born at Newport, Delaware, April 24, 1752; studied medicine at Philadelphia and at Edinburgh, and practiced on his return from the latter place until 1777, when he was appointed Surgeon of the Flying Hospital. After the war he returned home, and practiced until 1794. He was a member of the State Legislature; and a Representative in Congress from Delaware from 1793 to 1795; and a Senator in Congress from 1795 to 1801, when he resigned. He died in Philadelphia, December 19, 1819.

Lattimore, William.—Born in Norfolk, Virginia, February 9, 1774, where he received a limited education; he studied medicine; removed to the Territory of Mississippi; and was a Delegate to Congress from that Territory from 1803 to 1807, and from 1813 to 1817. He was also a Delegate to the Convention which formed the first Constitution of Mississippi; after which he retired to private life, and died April 3, 1843.

Laurens, Henry.—He was born in South Carolina, and was an early opponent of Great Britain; was a member of the Carolina Congress of 1775, and elected its president; was Vice-President under the temporary Constitution; was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1777 to 1780, and chosen President of that body during the former year, and signed the Articles of Confederation; in 1780 he was sent abroad to negotiate a loan with Holland, but, having been captured by a British vessel off Newfoundland, he was sent to England and imprisoned in the Tower, for more than a year, for high treason. The papers taken from his person caused a war between England and Holland. He petitioned Parliament for release, and when set at liberty went to Paris, where he signed the preliminaries of peace in 1782, as a Commissioner appointed by Congress; returned to America in 1783, and died in Charleston in 1792, in the sixty-ninth year of his age.

Law, John.—Was born in New London, Connecticut, in 1796; graduated at Yale College in 1814; studied law, and was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Connecticut in 1817, and soon afterwards emigrated to the new State of Indiana, locating himself at Vincennes. Soon after arriving in the West he was elected a Prosecuting Attorney, and in 1823 a member of the Legislature; he was again elected Attorney for his district, and held that position until promoted to a Judgeship, which office he held by re-elections for eight years. In 1838 he was appointed by President Van Buren Receiver of Public Moneys at Vincennes, holding the office four years. In 1855 he was appointed by President Pierce Judge of the "Court of Land Claims," to adjudicate the claims of the old inhabitants of Indiana and Illinois, and was re-appointed in 1856. He subsequently removed to Evansville, where he resumed the practice of his profession. In 1860 he was elected a Representative from Indiana to the Thirty-seventh Congress, serving on the Committees on the Library, and on Revolutionary Pensions. Like Mr. Charles F. Adams, Mr. John Law can mention the fact, with excusable pride, that his father, Lyman Law, as well as his grandfather, Richard Law, both served their country as members of Congress, and witnessed the same events in our country's history. Amasa Learned, who was also his grandfather on his mother's side, was in the first Congress that sat under the Constitution. He was re-elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committees on Agriculture and Revolutionary Pensions, and the Select Committee on Emigration. As Chairman of the Committee on Pensions, he drew up and reported the bill giving to the soldiers of the Revolution, twelve only surviving, one hundred dollars per annum, which bill passed unanimously. He was partial to historical studies, and was President of the State Historical Society of Indiana until his entrance into Congress. Died at Evansville, Indiana, October 7, 1873.

Law, Jonathan.—Born in Milford, Connecticut, August 6, 1674; graduated at Harvard University in 1695; studied law, and began to practice in Milford in 1698; in 1706 he was made Justice of Peace; Justice of the Quorum in 1710; Chief Judge in 1714; Assistant Judge from 1717 till chosen Deputy-Governor in 1725; was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State from 1725 to 1741; and Governor from May, 1741, until his death, which occurred November 6, 1750.

Law, Lyman.—Born at New London, Connecticut, August 19, 1770; graduated at Yale College, in 1791; studied law with his father, Richard Law (who was a member of the Continental Congress), and practiced at New London. After serving in the Legislature of the State, and being Speaker of the House of Representatives, he was elected to Congress and represented that State in that body from 1811 to 1817. He died in New London, February 3, 1842.

Law, Richard.—Born at Milford, Connecticut, March 17, 1733; graduated at Yale College in 1751; studied law, and practiced in New London, attaining the highest eminence in his profession. He was President Judge of the County Court, and Judge of the Supreme Court. Was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1777 to 1778, and also from 1781 to 1784. After the adoption of the Federal Constitution he was appointed United States District Judge, which office he held until his death, which occurred January 26, 1806, at New London, Connecticut. He was a personal friend of Washington; was long Mayor of New London; and, with Roger Sherman, revised the Code of Connecticut. He was the son of Jonathan Law, one of the Colonial Governors.

Lawler, Jobb.—Born in North Carolina, June 12, 1796; was educated for the ministry, and became a clergyman of the Baptist Church. In 1826 he was elected to the Lower House of the Alabama Legislature, and was re-elected until 1831, in which year he was elected to the State Senate. In 1832 he was appointed Receiver of Public Moneys for the Coosa Land District, and held the office until 1835. In 1833 he was elected Treasurer of the University of Alabama. He was a Representative in Congress from Alabama from 1835 to 1838. He died in Washington, May 8, 1838, during the first session of his second term.

Lawrence, Abbott.—Born in Groton, Massachusetts, December 16, 1792. His education was obtained at a district-school and at Groton Academy; and in 1808 he went to Boston and became a clerk in the store of his brother Amos. In 1814 he was admitted as a partner in the concern, and for many years the twain prosecuted a very extensive importing business, and laid the foundation of their several fortunes. He was the traveling partner and visited Europe a number of times. He subsequently became one of the foremost men in building up American manufactures, and the flourishing city of Lawrence was the offspring of his enterprise. In 1827 he was a Delegate to the "Harrisburg Convention." He served in the Common Council of Boston in 1831; and was a Representative in Congress from 1835 to 1837, and again in 1839 and 1840. In 1842 he was appointed a Commissioner to arrange the North-eastern Boundary Question; was a Presidential Elector in 1844; in 1849 he was invited by President Taylor into his Cabinet, but declined; he subsequently accepted, however, the appointment of Minister to England, where he acquitted himself with credit. He founded a scientific school at Cambridge, and his gifts and bequests to various charitable and religious societies proved him to be a man of many noble qualities. Died in Boston, August 18, 1855.

Lawrence, Cornelius Van Wyck.—He was born in Flushing, Long Island, February 28, 1791; spent his boyhood working on his father's farm, and acquired a good English education; and on arriving at the age of manhood, removed to New York city, with which, as a business man, he has been identified ever since. He was a Representative in Congress from New York city from 1832 to 1834; for two years following he was Mayor of the city of New York; in 1836 President of the Electoral College for President; and for twenty years he held the honorable position of President of the Bank of the State of New York. Among other positions of trust and responsibilities which, with the above, have tended to give him a high reputation, may be mentioned the following: Director of the Branch Bank of the United States and the Bank of America, Trustee of the New York Life and Trust Company, and of numerous Fire and Marine Insurance Companies. In 1856 ill-health compelled Mr. Lawrence to retire from the pursuits of active life, and he spent the closing years of his life in peace, on the spot where his ancestors have resided for two hundred years. Died at Flushing, February 20, 1861.

Lawrence, George F.—He was born in Washington County, Pennsylvania, in 1818, his father, Joseph Lawrence, having been in Congress before him. He received a liberal education, and devoted himself to agricultural pursuits; was elected to the State Legislature in 1844, 1847, 1858, and 1859, and to the State Senate in 1848, 1849, 1850, 1851, and 1860, officiating as Speaker during the last term; frequently served in the Conventions of the State; and in 1864 he was elected a Representative from Pennsylvania to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Agriculture and Invalid Pensions. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866; and re-elected to the Fortieth Congress, serving on the Committee on the Post-Office.

Lawrence, John.—He was born in the County of Cornwall, England, in 1750, and emigrated to the city of New York in 1767. He studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1772, and in 1775 was commissioned in the First New York Regiment, and served to the end of the Revolutionary War, his several grades having been Aid-de-camp to his relative, Colonel McDougal, Judge Advocate, and General, in which latter capacity he conducted the court-martial called to try Major Andre. In 1783 he resumed the practice of his profession in New York. In 1785 and 1786 he was a member of the First Congress. In 1789 he was elected a State Senator, and during that year was elected, by a five-sixths vote, a Representative in the Federal Congress, serving from 1789 to 1793; was appointed by Washington in 1794 Judge of the United States District Court for New York; and was a Senator in Congress from 1796 to 1800, serving for a short time as President pro tem. of that body, when he resigned and retired to private life. He died in 1810.

Lawrence, John W.—He was born in New York; served two years in the Assembly of that State from Queens County, and was a Representative in Congress from 1845 to 1847.

Lawrence, Joseph.—He was born in Adams County, Pennsylvania, in 1788; he served for nine years in the State Legislature, two sessions as Speaker; one year as State Treasurer; and was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1825 to 1829, and again from 1841 to the time of his death, which occurred in Washington, District of Columbia, April 17, 1842.

Lawrence, Philip K.—He was a citizen of Louisiana, and about the year 1838 he was appointed United States Judge for the two Judicial Districts of Louisiana, residing at New Orleans.

Lawrence, Samuel.—He was born in New York; served seven years in the Assembly of that State; and was a Representative in Congress from the same from 1823 to 1825.

Lawrence, Sidney.—He was born in Vermont, but removed to New York, and was elected a Representative in Congress from that State from 1847 to 1849.

Lawrence, William.—Born in Washington, Geary County, Ohio, September 2, 1814; graduated at Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, in September, 1835; engaged in mercantile and agricultural pursuits; and served in the Ohio Legislature in 1843. He was a Presidential Elector in 1848; a member of the Constitutional Convention of Ohio in 1850 and 1851; State Senator in 1856 and 1857; and elected a Representative to the Thirty-fifth Congress, officiating as Chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the State Department.

Lawrence, William.—Born in Mount Pleasant, Jefferson County, Ohio, June 26, 1819; graduated at Franklin College, Ohio, in 1838; taught school for a time, and in 1840 graduated with the degree of LL.B. in the Law Department of Cincinnati College, coming to the bar in that year; for one year he was a reporter and correspondent at Columbus for the State Journal and other papers; in 1842 he was appointed Commissioner of Bankrupts for Logan County; in 1845 he was made Prosecuting Attorney for the same County, resigning in one year; from 1845 to 1847 he was the editor and proprietor of the Logan Gazette; in 1846 and 1847 he served in the State Legislature; in 1848 was a member of the Senate; in 1851 he was elected Reporter for the Supreme Court of the State; and in 1853 was again returned to the Senate, and was the author of the Ohio Free Banking Law. In 1856 he was elected a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for five years; re-elected in 1861, but resigned in 1864, when he was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committee on the Judiciary. During a part of his legal career he was editor of the Western Law Monthly; in 1862 he had command, as Colonel, of the Eighty-fourth Ohio Volunteers for three months; and in 1863 President Lincoln appointed him a Judge in Florida, which he declined. He was also a Delegate to the Philadelphia "Loyalists' Convention" of 1866; and was re-elected to the Fortieth, Forty-first, Forty-third, and Forty-fourth Congresses, serving as Chairman of the Committee on War Claims in the Forty-third Congress.

Lawrence, William Beach.—Born in New York city, October 23, 1800; and graduated at Columbia College in 1818. After a course of legal and historical study at Paris, he became a counsellor of the New York Supreme Court in 1823; Secretary of Legation at London in 1826; Chargé d'Affaires in 1827 and 1828; Lieutenant-Governor of Rhode Island in 1851 and 1852, and for a portion of the time acting Governor. He was the author of an Address before the New York Academy of Fine Arts in 1826; of a translation of Marbois' History of Louisiana, with Essays and Notes, in 1830; Discourse before the New York Historical Society in 1832, of which he was Vice-President from 1836 to 1845; "Two Lectures on Political Economy" in 1832; "Bank of the United States" in 1831; "Inquiry into the Causes of Public Distress" in 1834; "History of the North-eastern Boundary Negotiations" in 1841; "Memoir of Albert Gallatin," 1843; also, the same year, of "Colonization and History of New Jersey," 1843; "The Law of Charitable Uses," 1845; Lives of Reuben Walcott and Charles O'Conner in 1848; "Maine Law Speech in the Rhode Island Senate," 1852; "Visitation and Search," 1858; an edition of "Wheaton's Internal Law with Additional Notes," 1855; and contributed to many journals and periodicals. He was also Professor of the Law of Nations in Columbian College, Washington; and was made LL.D. by Brown University, and Doctor of Civil Law by the University of New York. In 1873 he received a fee of forty thousand dollars for arguing the case of the Circassian before Joint High Commissioners in Washington.

Lawrence, William T.—Born in New York city, May 7, 1788; and was bred a merchant, and continued such until called into the service of the United States, in the War of 1812, as a Militia Captain of Artillery. In 1823 he removed to Cayuga County, New York, and settled on a farm. In 1838 he was chosen County Judge, and from 1847 to 1849 he was a Representative in Congress; he also served as Delegate to several nominating Conventions.

He also served in the State Legislature,—in the House in 1825 and 1826, and in the Senate in 1827; and he has for many years been Judge of the District Court of Ohio, having been appointed in 1834, by President Jackson.

Le Blond, Francis C.—Was born in Ohio, and adopted the profession of law; in 1851 he was elected for two years to the State Legislature; was re-elected in 1853, and served as Speaker of that body; and in 1862 he was elected a Representative from Ohio to the Thirty-eighth Congress, serving on the Committee on Public Expenditures. Re-elected to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Naval Affairs and Expenditures on the Public Buildings.

Lecompte, Joseph.—He was born in Woodford County, Kentucky; and was a Representative in Congress from Kentucky from 1825 to 1833.

Lecompte, Samuel D.—He was born in Maryland, and appointed Chief Justice of the United States Court for the Territory of Kansas, and took a leading part in the affairs of that Territory.

Lee, Arthur.—He was born in Virginia in 1740; educated at the University of Edinburgh, where he pursued the study of medicine; and while pursuing the study of law in the Temple, in London, rendered important services to his country by obtaining information bearing upon the Revolution. In 1775 he acted as an agent for his native State, and presented to the king the second petition of Congress; from 1776 to 1779 he was Minister to France, and negotiated an important treaty; also performed the duties of Commissioner to Spain in 1777; resided in Prussia for a time in a semi-official capacity, and did much there to help the American cause; in 1781 he was elected to the Assembly of Virginia, but was immediately chosen a Delegate to the Continental Congress, where he remained until 1785; before the expiration of his term in Congress, he was delegated to make several treaties with the Indians on the Northern frontier; soon after leaving Congress he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury, which office he held until 1789; and he died in 1792. He stood high as a man of integrity and patriotism. His life was published in 1829 by R. H. Lee, and his Public Letters were published in Sparks' Diplomatic Correspondence.

Lee, Charles.—Was a native of Virginia; graduated at the College of New Jersey in 1775; was Secretary of an important Board of Commissioners of the Continental Congress; was an eminent lawyer, a member of the State Legislature, and was appointed by Washington to succeed William Bradford as Attorney-General of the United States in 1795, serving until 1801. He was subsequently appointed by Jefferson Chief Justice of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Fourth Circuit, but declined accepting the office. He died in Fauquier County, Virginia, June 24, 1815, aged fifty-seven years. He was the brother of General Henry Lee.

Lee, Francis Lightfoot.—Born in Westmoreland County, Virginia, October 14, 1734, and was the brother of Richard Henry Lee; he was well educated by private tutors; in 1765 and 1766 he was elected to the House of Burgesses, and was a strong advocate of equal rights; was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1775 to 1780, and signed the Declaration of Independence, and also the Articles of Confederation; served in the State Legislature; and, after retiring to private life, died April, 1797.

Lee, Gideon.—He was born in Amherst, Massachusetts, in 1777; in early life removed to the city of New York, where he became a leather merchant, and amassed a large fortune. He was at one time Mayor of New York, a Presidential Elector, and a member of Congress during the years 1836 and 1837. He died at Geneva, New York, August 21, 1841.

Lee, Henry.—Born in Virginia, January 29, 1756, and graduated at Princeton College in 1773. In 1776 he was appointed a Captain of Cavalry, under Colonel Bland, and in September, 1777, he joined the main army. His skill in discipline and gallant bearing attracted the notice of Washington, and he was soon promoted to the rank of Major, with the command of a separate corps of cavalry, and then advanced to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. From 1780 to the end of the war he served under Greene. The services of Lee's Legion in various actions were very important. He particularly distinguished himself in the battle of Guilford; afterwards, he succeeded in capturing Fort Cornwallis and other forts; he was also conspicuous at Ninety-six; and at the Eutaw Springs. In 1786 he was appointed a Delegate in Congress from Virginia in which body he remained till the Constitution was adopted, having, in the Convention of Virginia, advocated its adoption. In 1791 he was chosen Governor of Virginia, and remained in office three years. By appointment of Washington, he commanded the forces sent to suppress the Whisky Insurrection in Pennsylvania. He was a member of Congress at the period of Washington's death, in 1799, and was appointed by Congress to deliver a eulogy on the occasion. In 1801 he retired to private life, and in his last years he was distressed with pecuniary embarrassments; while confined in 1809 within the bounds of Spotsylvania County, for debt, he wrote his valuable "Memoirs of the Southern Campaigns." In 1812, during the mob at Baltimore, he was one of the defenders, and was severely wounded, and carried to the jail for safety. Returning from the West Indies, where he had gone for health, he died at Cumberland Island, near St. Mary's, Georgia, March 25, 1818. His exploits during the Revolution gained for him the name of "Light Horse Harry"; and he was the father of General Robert E. Lee.

Lee, Henry B.—He was elected a Representative from New York to the Fifteenth Congress but died before taking his seat.

Lee, John.—He was a Representative in Congress from Maryland from 1823 to 1825.

When sixteen years of age commenced an academical course of study, and graduated at Union College in 1827; and, having studied medicine and surgery, obtained a degree in 1830 from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Western New York. While devoting himself to his profession, he was appointed Postmaster of Fulton, Orange County, New York, serving from 1840 to 1844. He was elected in 1846 and 1847 to the Assembly of New York; subsequently held the position, for three terms, of Commissioner of Loans for the State; was a member of the State Senate in 1855, and in 1858 was elected a Representative to the Thirty-sixth Congress, from New York, serving as a member of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. He was also a Delegate to the New York "Constitutional Convention" of 1867.

Lee, Richard Bland.—He was a native of Virginia, and a Representative in Congress from 1789 to 1795. He was one of those who voted for locating the Seat of Government on the Potomac, and died in 1827.

Lee, Richard Henry.—Was born at Stratford, Westmoreland County, Virginia, January 20, 1732, and was educated at Wakefield, Yorkshire, England. He had a seat in the House of Burgesses of Virginia in 1757, and proposed there, in 1773, the formation of a Committee of Correspondence. He had the honor of originating the first resistance to British oppression, in the time of the Stamp Act, in 1765. He was a member of the First Congress, in 1774, and in October prepared the draft of the memorial to the people of British America. In accordance with instructions from the "Virginia Convention," he first proposed in Congress a Declaration of Independence, June 7, 1776, and a Committee was appointed to prepare it; and he was a signer of the adopted Declaration of Independence, and of the Articles of Confederation. The second eloquent address to the people of Great Britain was drawn up by him; and after the adoption of the Articles of Confederation he withdrew from Congress, but was re-elected in 1784, and chosen President of that body, serving till 1787. He contended for the necessity of amendments to the Constitution previously to its adoption in 1789, and was a Senator in Congress from Virginia from 1789 to 1792, serving one session as President pro tem. of that body. He was one of those who voted for locating the Seat of Government on the Potomac. He was the author of a number of political pamphlets, and his correspondence was published in 1825. He died at Chantilly, Westmoreland County, Virginia, June 9, 1794.

In 1760 he published "Oratio in Fnnero Thntii." During the Revolution he was a firm Whig, devoted to the cause of liberty, and was imprisoned by General Gage; he was carried a prisoner by the British troops to Halifax, where he was for a long time kept in close confinement. After his return to Boston, he was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1776 to 1782, and was a member of the Committee on Foreign Correspondence. He also signed the Articles of Confederation. In 1786 he was Collector of Customs for Boston, and was subsequently Naval Officer for Boston and Charlestown, in which station he remained until his death. He died in 1814, aged seventy-six years.

Lovell, Louis S.—He was born in Grafton, Windham County, Vermont, November 15, 1816; after due preparation he entered Middlebury College, where he graduated in 1832; and then he went South and taught school until 1838. He then read law in Springfield, Vermont, and also in New York city, and removed to the West in 1841, locating himself in Ionia, Michigan. He was admitted to the bar in 1842; and in 1849 he was appointed by President Taylor Register of the General Land Office at Ionia, which he held until the accession of President Pierce. In 1857 he was elected Circuit Judge of the Eighth Judicial Circuit of Michigan for six years; re-elected in 1863 for a second term; and in 1869 was re-elected for a third term, the party opposed to him declining to make any nomination. Although earnestly devoted to his judicial duties, he found time to participate in the local affairs of his town, and was Vice President of the First National Bank of Ionia, where he resides.

Lovett, John.—He was born in Norwich, Connecticut; graduated at Yale College, and was a member of the New York Assembly in 1800 and 1801, and a Representative in Congress from that State from 1813 to 1814, and from 1815 to 1817. He died in 1818, in Ohio.

Low, Frederick F.—He was a Representative from California to the Thirty-seventh Congress, taking his seat during the second session thereof; and he was Governor of California from 1863 to 1865. In September, 1869 he was appointed Minister to China, and was in office in 1875. In 1871 he was empowered to negotiate with Corea.

He was a Delegate to the Continental Congress from 1782 to 1783, and was a member of the Convention which framed the Constitution of Massachusetts. He was appointed Judge of the District Court, for the Massachusetts District, by Washington, in 1789; and in 1801 was appointed Chief Justice of the First Circuit. He was a member of the Corporation of Harvard College for eighteen years, and received the degree of LL.D. from that institution. He was one of the founders of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and in 1791 he delivered a eulogy on their late President, James Bowdoin. He wrote an English Poem, No. 3, in the "Pietas," printed at Cambridge. He died May 10, 1802.

Lowell, John.—He was born in Boston, Massachusetts, October 18, 1824; graduated at Harvard College in 1843, and at the Law School in 1845; admitted to the bar in 1846; and in 1865 he was appointed United States District Judge for the District of Massachusetts.

Lowell, Joshua A.—He was born in Thomaston, Maine, March 20, 1801; his educational advantages were limited, but he commenced active life by teaching school; he adopted the profession of law, having come to the bar in 1826; was a member of the Maine Legislature in 1832, 1833, 1835, and 1837; and a Representative in Congress from Maine from 1839 to 1843. He was also a Presidential Elector in 1844. Died in Machias, Maine, March 13, 1874.

Lower, Christian.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1805 to 1807.

Lowndes, Lloyd, Jr.—He was born in Clarksburg, West Virginia, February 21, 1845; graduated at Allegheny College, Meadville, Pennsylvania, in 1865; attended law lectures at the University of Pennsylvania; was admitted to practice in 1867; removed to Cumberland; was elected to the Forty-third Congress from Maryland, serving on the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Lowndes, Thomas.—He was born in Charleston, South Carolina, in 1765; received a thorough education, and was one of the enterprising citizens of his native city. He was a Representative in Congress from South Carolina from 1801 to 1805, and was distinguished for his talents. He died in Charleston, July 8, 1843. His father, Rawlins Lowndes, was distinguished for his hostility to the Federal Constitution.

Lowndes, William.—Was a native of Charleston, South Carolina, having been born February 7, 1782; educated by a private tutor; served in the State Legislature in 1806 and 1808; and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1811 to 1822, when, from ill-health, he resigned. In 1818 he was Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He died while on a voyage, with his family, from Philadelphia to London, in the ship Moss, October 27, 1822, aged forty-two years. He had a memory of uncommon power, was an eloquent debater, and stood in the first rank of American statesmen. Henry Clay once expressed the opinion that he was the wisest man he had ever known in Congress.

Louvie, Walter.—He was born in 1785, and was a Senator in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1819 to 1825. He was afterwards Secretary of the United States Senate from 1825 to 1836; was subsequently appointed Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, which position he held for thirty years, and died in New York, January 14, 1863. He was a man of rare ability, and eminent for his devotion to the cause of Foreign Missions.

Lucas, John B. C.—He was born in Normandy, France, in 1762; was educated at the University of Caen, where he graduated as Doctor of Civil and Common Law in 1782. He practiced his profession in his native country two years, and then emigrated to the United States, and settled on a farm near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where, in connection with agricultural pursuits, he devoted himself to acquiring the English language, and making himself acquainted with the history, Constitution, and laws of his adopted country. He soon gained the confidence of the people, and in 1792 was elected to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, and served as a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas for this District. In 1802 he was elected a Representative in Congress, and re-elected in 1804. In 1805 he was appointed by President Jefferson Judge of the United States Court in Upper Louisiana, when he resigned his seat in Congress, and removed to St. Louis. He was also Commissioner of Land Titles in that Territory. He held the office of Judge until 1820, when he retired to private life, on a farm adjoining the city of St. Louis, where he died in September, 1842.

Lucas, Robert.—Born at Shepherdstown, Virginia, April 1, 1781. His father, a Captain in the Revolutionary Army, was descended from William Penn; removed to Ohio in 1800. He was Major-General of Militia; appointed Captain of the Nineteenth United States Infantry, March 14, 1812; Lieutenant-Colonel, February 20, 1813; resigned June 30, 1813; was Brigadier-General of Ohio Militia in defense of the frontier in 1813; member of the Ohio Legislature in 1814; President of the Democratic National Convention, May, 1832; was Governor of Ohio from 1832 to 1836; and first Territorial Governor of Iowa from 1838 to 1841. He was a prominent Free Mason. Died at Iowa City, February 7, 1853.

Lucas, William.—He was born in Virginia, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1839 to 1841, and for a second term from 1843 to 1845.

Lumpkin, John H.—He was born in Oglethorpe County, Georgia, June 13, 1812; he was educated at Franklin and Yale Colleges; served for a time as Secretary in the Executive Department of Georgia; studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1834; was elected to the State Legislature in 1853; in 1858 he was Solicitor-General of the Cherokee Circuit; and he was a Representative in Congress from Georgia from 1843 to 1849, and re-elected to the Thirty-fourth Congress. He also held the office, for three years, of Judge of the Cherokee Circuit Court, and that of Judge of the Supreme Court of the State. Died in Rome, Georgia, in 1860.

Lumpkin, Wilson.—Born in Pittsylvania County, Virginia, January 14, 1783. He received a common-school education, and while engaged as a copying-clerk, in his father's office, studied law. Soon after attaining the age of twenty-one, he was sent to the State Legislature, and continued in that capacity a number of years. He was twice elected Governor of Georgia. In 1823 he was appointed by President Monroe to mark out the boundary line between Georgia and Florida; and by President Jackson, was appointed a Commissioner under the Cherokee treaty of 1825. He was also a member of the Board of Public Works. He served in the Federal House of Representatives from 1815 to 1817, and from 1827 to 1831; and was a Senator in Congress from 1837 to 1841.

Lyman, Samuel.—He was a graduate of Yale College in 1770; a Representative in Congress from Massachusetts from 1795 to 1800, when he resigned. From 1786 to 1788 he served in the Legislature, and from 1790 to 1793 as State Senator. Died in 1803.

Lyman, William.—A native of Northampton, Massachusetts; graduate at Yale College in 1776, and was Brigadier-General of Militia. He was a Representative in Congress from 1793 to 1797; and was appointed Consul to London in 1805, where he died, October, 1811, aged about fifty-eight years. He was also a member of the Legislature in 1787, and a State Senator in 1789.

Lynch, Charles.—He was Governor of Mississippi from 1835 to 1837, and died near Natchez, February 16, 1853. His uncle John was the founder of Lynchburg, in Virginia; and his father, bearing his own name, was a distinguished officer in the Revolutionary war. The term "Lynch Law," was occasioned by his apprehending and punishing without legal ceremony or delay a lawless band of desperadoes and Tories who had infested the country where he had command.

Lynch, John.—He was born in Portland, Maine, February 15, 1825; educated in the public schools of that city; adopted the business of a merchant; served two terms in the State Legislature, and was elected a Representative from Maine to the Thirty-ninth Congress, serving on the Committees on Banking and Currency, and the Bankrupt Law. Re-elected to the Fortieth and Forty-first Congresses, serving on the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and Chairman of Navy Department and Banking and Currency Committees.

Lynch, John R.—He was born in Concordia Parish, Louisiana, September 10, 1847; was a slave, and remained in slavery until emancipated by the Rebellion; a purchaser of his mother carried her with her children to Natchez, where he attended evening school for a few months, and by private study he acquired a good English education; engaged in the business of Photography at Natchez until 1869, when he was appointed a Justice of the Peace; he was elected to the State Legislature from Adams County in 1870, and re-elected in 1871, serving the last term as Speaker of the House; and was elected to the Forty-third Congress, serving on the Committees on Mines and Mining, and Interior Department. Also re-elected to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Lynch, Thomas.—He was a Delegate from South Carolina to the Continental Congress from 1774 to 1776, and was succeeded by his son, bearing the same name, who signed the Declaration of Independence. He had also been a Delegate to the Colonial Congress in 1765.

Lynch, Thomas, Jr.—He was born on the North Santee River, Parish of Prince George, South Carolina, August 5, 1749; was educated at Eton, England, and entered at Cambridge and finished his legal studies in the Temple; he returned home determined to strike for liberty; in 1775 he was commissioned a Captain in the Militia service; in 1776 he was elected a Delegate to the Continental Congress to succeed his father in that capacity, and he was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. In 1779 he sailed for Europe for the benefit of his health, and the vessel in which he embarked was never seen after her departure from port.

Lynde, William Pitt.—Born in Sherburne, Chenango County, New York, December 16, 1817; graduated at Yale College in 1838; emigrated to Wisconsin in 1841, and settled at Milwaukee in 1841; in 1844 was Attorney-General of the Territory; in 1845 was appointed United States District-Attorney of Wisconsin, and held the position until the admission of the State; in 1848 was elected a Representative to Congress; in 1860 was elected Mayor of Milwaukee; was a member of the Assembly in 1866, and elected a State Senator in 1868. In 1874 was elected a Representative to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Lyon, Josiah.—Born in Newport, Rhode Island, March 10, 1721; was Governor of the State in 1768. Died at Warren, March 30, 1778.

Lyon, Asa.—Was born in Pomfret, Connecticut, December 31, 1763; a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1791, and shortly after his graduation removed to South Hero, Vermont. He was appointed Chief Judge of Grand Isle County, in 1805, serving as such for nine years. He was elected a Representative from South Hero in 1800, 1802, 1804, 1805, 1806, and 1808, and from Grand Isle in 1810, 1811, 1812, 1813, and 1814. He was a member of the Executive Council in 1808; and was elected a member of Congress from 1815 to 1817. He was a member of the Corporation of the University of Vermont from 1814 to 1821 inclusive. He is said to have been a second cousin of Robert Burns, the Scotch poet. He was for many years, and until his death, an able preacher of the Gospel. Although never regularly installed, he preferred the Calvinistic form of worship. He was distinguished for his ripe scholarship and eloquence. By rigid economy and prudence he amassed wealth, and died at South Hero, April 4, 1841. His published sermons and patriotic addresses indicate a high order of talent, and an intimate acquaintance with modern and classic literature.

Lyon, Caleb, of Lyondale.—His grandfather, who bore the same name, was a Lieutenant of the Massachusetts Militia, and was wounded at Bunker Hill; and his father, also named Caleb, was a member of the New York Legislature, and a friend of De Witt Clinton. He was born at Lyondale, New York, December 7, 1822; graduated at the Norwich University of Vermont in 1841; traveled extensively in Europe; was appointed by President Polk Consul at Shanghai, China; on his return he visited Mexico, Brazil, Chili, Peru, the Sandwich Islands, and California, and was Secretary of the Convention called in 1849 to form a Constitution, and designed the coat of arms for the Golden State. He made a second visit to Europe, and extended his travels to Egypt and the Holy Land. From his native State he was elected to the Assembly, but on the question of enlarging the Erie Canal, which he favored, he resigned, and was, during the same year, elected to the State Senate; and was subsequently elected a Representative in the Thirty-third Congress from New York. While in Europe he was identified with the Koszta affair as the friend of Captain Duncan N. Ingraham. The title of LL.D. was conferred upon him by the Norwich University of Vermont. In February, 1864, he was appointed by President Lincoln Governor of Idaho; and, on his return to Washington in December, 1866, he was robbed on the railway from New York of $47,000. Died on Staten Island, September 8, 1875.

Lyon, Chittenden.—He was born in Vermont, in 1786; removed to Kentucky in his fifteenth year; served in both Houses of the State Legislature; and was a Representative in Congress from Kentucky from 1827 to 1835, and died in Caldwell County, Kentucky, in November, 1842. He was the son of Mathew Lyon.

Lyon, Francis S.—He was born in North Carolina, and, having settled in Alabama, was elected a Representative in Congress from 1835 to 1839.

Lyon, Lucius.—He was born in Vermont, but emigrated to Michigan when quite a young man; devoted himself for a number of years to the business of surveying the wild lands of the Territory; was a Delegate to Congress from that Territory during the years 1833, 1834, and 1835; and a Senator in Congress from the State of Michigan from 1836 to 1840; and a Representative in Congress from 1843 to 1845. His last public position was that of Surveyor-General in the Northwest. Died at Detroit, September 25, 1851.

Lyon, Mathew.—He was born in Wicklow County, Ireland, in 1746, and, having emigrated to this country when thirteen years of age, participated to some extent in the Revolutionary struggle, having, in 1777, been appointed temporary Paymaster of the Northern Army, and in 1778 Deputy Secretary of the Governor of Vermont, and at the same time Clerk of the Court of Confiscation. He settled in Vermont after the War, and was elected a member of the State Legislature in 1779 and the four following years. In 1783 he founded the town of Fairhaven, where he built saw-mills, grist-mills, established a forge or iron foundry, manufactured paper from basswood, and established a newspaper called The Farmer's Library. He served that town in the Legislature ten years. In 1786 he was Assistant Judge of Rutland County. He was a Representative in Congress from Vermont from 1797 to 1801, and it was during his first term that he had a personal difficulty, on the floor of Congress, with Roger Griswold, of Connecticut, when an unsuccessful effort was made to have him expelled. The fact of his giving the vote that made Jefferson President created a great sensation at the time. At the end of his second term as a Representative from Vermont, he removed to Kentucky; he established the first printing-press in that State, transporting the type on horseback across the mountains; served two years in the Legislature of that State, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1803 to 1811. After his final retirement from Congress, and on November 13, 1811, the Speaker of the House of Representatives presented a petition from him, setting forth that he had, many years before, been prosecuted and convicted under the sedition law (see "State Trials of the United States"); that he had suffered imprisonment, and been made to pay the sum of one thousand and sixty dollars and ninety cents, and that he wished to have the money refunded to him. On July 4, 1840, a law was passed, paying to his heirs the specified sum, with interest, from February, 1790. It was while in prison at Vergennes, that he was elected to Congress from Vermont, and at the close of his services in Congress, from Kentucky, he was employed to build gun-boats for the war, but became bankrupt from the speculation. In 1820 he was appointed a Factor among the Cherokee Indians in Arkansas; when that Territory was organized he was elected the first Delegate to Congress, but did not live to take his seat, having died at Spadre Bluff, Arkansas, August 1, 1822. A sketch of his life was printed in 1858 by Pliny H. White of Vermont.

Lyons, H. A.—He was an early emigrant to California, and in 1851 was appointed Chief Justice of the United States Court for that Territory, he and the two Associate Justices each receiving a salary of ten thousand dollars.

Lytte, Robert T.—He was distinguished as a public speaker, and was a member of Congress from Ohio from 1833 to 1835. He died in New Orleans, December 21, 1839.

MacDonald, Moses.—Born in Limerick, York County, Maine, April 8, 1815; practiced law from 1837 to 1845; and was a member of the Maine Legislature in 1841 and 1842. In 1845 he was Speaker of the House. In 1847, 1848, and 1849 served as Treasurer of the State; represented the First Congressional District in the Thirty-second and Thirty-third Congresses, and in April, 1857, was appointed by President Buchanan Collector for the District of Portland and Falmouth. Died in Saco, Maine, October 18, 1869.

MacDougall, Clinton D.—He was born in Scotland, June 14, 1839; came to America in 1842; received an academic education, and studied law; was engaged in banking business from 1856 to 1869; raised a company of Volunteers in 1861; went to Florida with his regiment; made Lieutenant-Colonel in 1862, and Colonel in 1863; commanded at Centreville, Virginia, in 1863; joined the Army of the Potomac, and commanded a Brigade at Gettysburg, until the close of the war; was brevetted Brigadier-General in 1864; returned home after the war to pursue business; was appointed Postmaster of the city of Auburn in 1869; and elected to the Forty-third and Forty-fourth Congresses, serving on the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mace, Daniel.—He was born in Pickaway County, Ohio, September 5, 1811; received a limited education, and worked on a farm until he became of age; and having read law in Indiana, entered upon the practice of the profession to which he was long devoted. He was a member of the Indiana Legislature in 1836; Clerk of the House of Representatives in 1837; served as United States Attorney for Indiana during President Polk's administration; was a Representative in Congress from Indiana from 1851 to 1855 as a Democrat, and from 1855 to 1857 as an Independent Candidate, serving on the Committees on the District of Columbia and as Chairman of the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads. On retiring from his profession he was appointed by President Lincoln Postmaster of Lafayette, Indiana. He died by suicide at Lafayette, Indiana, July 26, 1867.

Machen, Willis B.—He was born in Caldwell County, Kentucky, April 10, 1810; received an ordinary education; was a farmer; a member of the Kentucky Constitutional Convention of 1849; a Senator in the State Legislature in 1854; and a member of the Lower House in 1856 and 1860; was a member of the Confederate Congress for three years; and was appointed a Senator in Congress from Kentucky for the unexpired term of Garrett Davis, and served until 1873. He served on the Committee on Claims.

Machin, James.—He was a Representative in Congress from Virginia from 1797 to 1799. Died June 25, 1827.

Mackey, Edmund W. M.—Born in Charleston, South Carolina; received a good school education, but was prevented by the Civil War from entering College, for which he was preparing; studied law and was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the State in 1868; was appointed Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue in 1865; took a prominent part in organizing the Republican party in the State, and in carrying out the Reconstruction Acts; was a Delegate to the State Constitutional Convention of 1867; was Sheriff of Charleston County for four years; in 1868 was elected Alderman of the city, and re-elected in 1873; was a Delegate to the Philadelphia Convention of 1872; in 1873 was elected a member of the State House of Representatives; was editor and proprietor of the Charleston Republican in 1871 and 1872; and was elected a Representative from South Carolina to the Forty-fourth Congress.

Mackey, L. A.—Born in White Deer Township, Union County, Pennsylvania, November, 1819; received a good academic education; graduated at Union College, New York; studied law at Dickinson College, and went to the bar in 1840; removed to Lock Haven and practiced his profession there; in 1852 he was a member of the Whig Convention held in Baltimore; in 1870 he was elected Mayor at Lock Haven; was a Delegate to the Baltimore Convention of 1872; and in 1874 he was elected a Representative from Pennsylvania to the Forty-fourth Congress. He has taken special interest in the railroads and the normal schools of his District.

Maclanahan, James X.—He was born in Antrim, Franklin County, Pennsylvania, in 1800; graduated at Dickinson College in 1826; he studied law and settled in Chambersburg; in 1841 he was elected to the State Senate; and in 1849 he was elected to Congress; re-elected in 1851; and was Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. Died about the year 1864.

Maclay, Samuel.—He was a Representative in Congress from Pennsylvania from 1795 to 1797, and a Senator in Congress from 1803 to 1808, when he resigned.

Marsh, Charles.—Born at Lebanon, Connecticut, July 10, 1765, but with his father's family removed to Vermont before the Revolution; he graduated at Dartmouth College in 1786, studied law, and commenced practice in Woodstock, Vermont. He was for fifty years devoted to his profession, and for a long time at the head of the bar in the State. He served as a member of Congress from 1815 to 1817, and while in Washington became identified with the American Colonization Society as one of its founders. He acquired great popularity as a patron of benevolent societies generally, and was a highly influential and useful citizen. Died at Woodstock, Vermont, January 11, 1849. The degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Dartmouth College.

Marsh, George P.—Born in Woodstock, Vermont, March 15, 1801; was educated at Dartmouth College, where he graduated in 1820. He afterwards removed to Burlington, Vermont, where he commenced the study of the law, and afterwards made that place his home. After his admission to the bar, he came into an extensive practice, and devoted much of his time to politics. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1835, and in 1842 he took his seat in the United States House of Representatives, where he continued until he was sent as Resident Minister to Turkey in 1849 by President Taylor. At this post he rendered essential service to the cause of civil and religious toleration in the Turkish Empire. He was also charged with a special mission to Greece in 1852. He is well known as an author and a scholar; he has devoted much attention to the languages and literature of the North of Europe, and his sympathies appear to be with the Goths, whose presence he traces in whatever is great and peculiar in the character of the founders of New England. In a work entitled "The Goths in New England," he has contrasted the Gothic and Roman characters, which he appears to regard as the great antagonistic principles of society at the present day. He is also the author of a grammar of the old Northern or Icelandic language, and of various essays, literary and historical, relating to the Goths and their connections with America. He is the author of an interesting work on the Camel; also of a work on the English Language, which occupies a very high rank; and still another of great merit, entitled "Man and Nature," and his miscellaneous published addresses and speeches are quite numerous. After his return from Turkey he performed the duties of Commissioner of Railroads for the State of Vermont. His library is said to be one of the finest in this country, rich beyond compare in Scandinavian literature. In 1861 he was appointed by President Lincoln Minister to Italy.

Marshall, Alexander K.—He was born in Kentucky, and was a Representative in Congress from that State from 1855 to 1857.

He was also, for some years, a General of the State Militia.

Marshall, Christopher.—He was a Revolutionary patriot of Philadelphia; retired from business with a competency before the Revolution, in which, although a Quaker, he took an active part in the Committees of Council and Safety. His diary, from 1774 to 1781, called "Marshall's Remembrancer," edited by William Duane, was published in 1839 and 1849.

Marshall, Edward C.—He was born in Kentucky, and was a Representative in Congress from California from 1851 to 1853.

Marshall, Humphrey.—He was among the earliest pioneers to Kentucky, having gone there in 1780; he was a member of the "State Convention" in 1787; served for many years in the State Legislature; and was a Senator in Congress from 1795 to 1801. He was the author of the first published "History of Kentucky," and died at an advanced age.

Marshall, Humphrey.—Born at Frankfort, Kentucky, January 13, 1812. He graduated at West Point Academy, but resigned his military commission of Lieutenant and studied law, which he practiced with success. During the ten years preceding the Mexican war, and while devoting himself to his profession in Louisville, he took an active part in the military affairs of the State as Captain, Major, and Lieutenant-Colonel; he served in the Mexican war as Colonel of Cavalry, fighting at Buena Vista, and leading the charge of the Kentucky Volunteers; in 1847, after declining several important nominations, he retired to a farm; he was elected to Congress in 1849 as a Representative, and re-elected in 1851; he was appointed by President Fillmore Commissioner to China, which was immediately raised to a first-class mission; on his return he was elected a Representative in the Thirty-fourth Congress; in 1856 he was a member of the "American National Council," held in New York, where he caused to be thrown off all secrecy in the politics of his party; and in 1857 he was re-elected to Congress, serving as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs. He took part in the Rebellion of 1861 as a General of Volunteers.

Marshall, James.—He was one of the earliest settlers in the District of Columbia, after the removal of the Seat of Government; and in 1801 was appointed Circuit Judge of the United States for the District of Columbia.

Marshall, John.—He was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, September 24, 1755, and was the eldest of fifteen children. He had some classical education in his youth, but his opportunities for learning were limited, and he never entered college, his father, Thomas Marshall, having been a poor man, but possessed of superior talents. At the commencement of the American war he espoused it with ardor; in 1776 he was appointed Lieutenant, and in 1777 promoted to the rank of Captain. In 1780 he was admitted to the bar, and in 1781 resigned his commission and entered upon the practice of his profession, soon rising to distinction. He was a member of the "Virginia Convention" to ratify the Constitution of the United States, and, as such, produced a deep impression by his logic and eloquence. He also entered the Legislature of Virginia, where he was a leader. President Washington invited him to become Attorney-General, and offered him the mission to France after Mr. Monroe's return, both of which honors he declined. President Adams appointed him an Envoy to France, with Pickens and Gerry; but they were not accredited, and he returned to the United States in 1798. He was a Representative in Congress in 1799; in 1800 he was appointed Secretary of War, which he declined; soon afterwards Secretary of State; and, January 31, 1801, upon the nomination of President Adams, was confirmed as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. He wrote a "Life of George Washington," and a "History of the American Colonies." He died in Philadelphia, July 6, 1836. As a Judge he was the most illustrious in America, and, for his public service, was ranked by many with Washington. He was the object of universal affection, respect, and confidence, and, in every particular, one of the greatest and best of men.

Marshall, John James.—Born at Woodford County, Kentucky, August 4, 1785; graduated at New Jersey College, in 1806; gained distinction as a lawyer and a politician; from 1814 he served several terms in the State Legislature. From 1836 till his death he presided over the Circuit Court. In 1837 his ample estate was placed at the disposal of his friends and he died a poor man. He published "Reports of Kentucky Court of Appeals," in 1831 and 1834, 7 vols. 8vo. Died at Louisville, Kentucky, June, 1846.

In December, 1875, he was appointed Chairman of a Committee.

Metcalfe, Thomas.—He was born in Fauquier County, Virginia, March 20, 1780. When he was quite young his parents emigrated to Kentucky, and settled in Fayette, where his education was restricted to the advantages of a few months' attendance at a country school. He worked at the trade of a mason, but employed his leisure hours in study, and soon developed remarkable intellectual abilities. In 1809 he first appeared as a public speaker, in defense of his country against British oppression; served in the war of 1812, and in 1813 commanded a Company of Infantry at the battle of Fort Meigs, and greatly distinguished himself for his bravery. He was subsequently a member of the Kentucky Legislature for several years; and was a Representative in Congress from 1819 to 1829, when he was elected Governor of Kentucky, which office he held until 1833. In 1834 he was elected to the State Senate, and in 1840 was chosen President of the Board of Internal Improvement. In 1848 he was appointed and elected to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Crittenden in the Senate of the United States, after which he retired to his farm between Maysville and Lexington. He boasted of his services as a stone-mason, and delighted in being called the "Old Stone Hammer." He died in Nicholas County, Kentucky, August 18, 1855.

Meyers, Benjamin F.—He was born in Centreville, Pennsylvania, July 6, 1833; received an academic education at Somerset, and at Jefferson College, Pennsylvania; studied law and admitted to the bar in 1855; was a member of the State Legislature in 1864; a Delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1864; became editor and proprietor of the Bedford Gazette in 1857, and one of the proprietors and editor-in-chief of the Harrisburg Daily Patriot in 1868, and was elected to the Forty-second Congress, serving on the Committee on Public Expenditures.
